ASKS FOR UNIFORM STATE MOTOR LAWS

Highways Committee Advocates Similar General Regulatory Statutes.

NEW REGISTRATION CODE

Also for Rules of the Road, Which Are Declared to Be Paramount.

"The safe, economical and convenient use of the highways requires uniformity in State vehicle acts, State administrative regulations, local traffic ordinances, and local traffic regulations," according to the report of the Committee on Uniformity of Laws and Regulations of the National Conference on Street and Highway Safety, for submission to the second national conference sessions on March 23, 24 and 25, at Washington.

The first conference held in December, 1924, emphasized the importance of uniformity of traffic laws and regulations as a safety measure and in its final report recommended certain principles which should be embodied in these laws. For this reason Secretary of Commerce Hoover appointed the committee on uniformity of laws and regulations early in 1925. After protracted study of existing motor vehicle laws of the various States the principles laid down by the first conference and a proposed act developed by the national conference of commissioners on uniform State laws the committee has prepared a motor vehicle code consisting of three model acts. These acts comprise: A uniform motor vehicle registration and certification of title act, a uniform operators' and chauffeurs' act, and a uniform act regulating the operation of vehicles on the highways. This last act contains rules of the road, the need for uniformity which the committee believes is paramount.

The vehicle operation act deals with such matters as, driving while intoxicated, reckless driving, speed restrictions, driving at grade crossings, rules of the road, stopping and reporting in event of accident, size, weight, construction and equipment of vehicles, highway traffic signs, arrests, reports, disposition of fines and forfeitures, and penalties.

In the licensing act, the chief provisions deal with age limits, license restrictions and examination of drivers, duration of licenses, reciprocity between States, suspension and revocation of licenses, liability for public employes, and violations and penalties.

"The report emphasizes that the work undertaken and the results offered do not cover the entire field of legislation. It is pointed out that both legislative and administrative measures are required for such subjects as railroad grade-crossing elimination and protection, and street and highway planning, construction and maintenance. "All these measures," the Committee says, "must be properly enforced and must further be supplemented by research, educational activity and cooperative effort * * *."

In its discussion of the registration and certificate of title act, the committee points out that the vehicle statutes in nineteen States provide for the publication or posting of records of stolen vehicles and of suspensions and revocations of operators' and chauffeurs' licenses. The motor vehicles departments of five States are required or authorized to investigate and compile statistics regarding accidents. The inclusion of a section on reporting accidents follows the recommendations of the 1924 Conference on Street and Highway Safety. While every State requires the registration of motor vehicles, including motorcycles, and in most cases trailers and semi-trailers, only seventeen require certification of title. Twenty-seven States now provide that the number plates of a vehicle sold remain on the vehicle during the current year, but that the new owner secure a registration in his name. Twenty-one States require that the plates must be removed and forwarded to the Motor Vehicle Department when the vehicle is sold or transferred. The Committee favors the latter practice. No suggestion is made as to amounts of registration fees, the Committee regarding the fees as revenue measures which each State should determine.

The making of false affidavits in applications, the Committee holds, should be punishable as other offenses involving perjury are punishable. Receiving or transferring a stolen vehicle knowingly is declared to be a felony, the Committee following in this respect the provisions of laws in States requiring certificate of title. Driving without the owner's consent, injury to the vehicle or tampering with a vehicle without the permission of the owner are declared to be misdemeanors.

In its suggested operators' and chauffeurs' licensing act, the Committee goes on record in favor of minimum age limits of 16 years for operators and 18 years for chauffeurs. The 18-year limit is imposed in case of drivers of school buses, and a 21-year limit for drivers of public passenger-carrying vehicles. Signature of the applicant's parent, guardian or employer would be required in case of a minor seeking a license, and joint responsibility would thus be secured in case of damages caused by negligence of a minor operating a motor vehicle.

The bars are raised against the licensing of an habitual drunkard or narcotic addict, or any person found to be incompetent to operate a motor vehicle with safety. In examination, the department would be permitted to waive the examination of any person applying for a renewal or who has operated a vehicle satisfactorily in the State for more than a year at the time the law goes into effect. Annual renewal of chauffeurs' licenses would be provided, but the operators' licenses would be made valid until suspended or revoked, subject to requirements of the Department that renewals may be ordered once in three years.

In a provision for complete reciprocity, the Committee points to the varying periods of fifteen days to six months now in existence, and declares this to be a hardship on the motor tourist.

In discussion of age limits, the Committee reports that in twelve States no minimum age limit is set for operators' licenses. Eighteen States make the minimum age limit 16 years; eight States have a 15-year age minimum; six States a 14-year limit. The range in other States is from 12 years to 18 years. The model act follows the recommendations of the first Conference on Street and Highway Safety.

The act would authorize courts to recommend suspensions of licenses, but would vest the power to suspend or revoke licenses in the department for reasons which are considered sufficient. Mandatory suspension or revocation is provided for such major offenses as manslaughter, driving while in intoxicated or under the influence of drugs, perjury or any crime punishable as a felony under the motor vehicle act, or other felony in the commission of which a motor vehicle is used, conviction or forfeiture of bail upon three charges of reckless driving within the preceding twelve months; conviction of a driver involved in an accident resulting in the death or injury of another person, upon a charge of failing to stop and disclose his identity; operating while license is suspended or revoked.

In the proposed act governing the operation of vehicles, sections are devoted to reckless driving, speed restrictions, railroad warning signals, meeting, overtaking, right of way rules, stopping at through highways, passing street cars, stopping on highways, leaving vehicle unattended, and other subjects.

Reckless driving, the Committee finds, is interpreted in various motor vehicles statutes under two different theories. One of these is driving wilfully and wantonly and endangering life, limb or property. The other is more broadly defined and includes practically every violation of any rules of the road even when it frequently does not involve actual danger.

THEY PAY PRICE OF CARELESSNESS

SPEED MANIA RESPONSIBLE

They carried him into the station on a stretcher and the white-faced stripling, catching a glimpse of the inert, lifeless body, turned his head the other way. The blacksmith, big and brawny, glorying with health, was hurrying home to his dinner when the stripling at the wheel of a two-ton commercial truck bore down upon him. The thing happened in a moment. The big man stepped from the shadow of an elevated railroad pillar right in the path of the monster of death. There was a harsh grinding of wheels as the brake was applied and the dull thud of a body on the asphalt and then silence.

The stripling, as well he might be, was unnerved when he realized what he had done. "I did not see him," he cried, "until it was too late. How could I? He stepped from behind the pillar and before I realized it he was right on top of me. Gawd, it's tough, tough, tough!" and he wrung his hands in agony.

It is thus that accidents happen in the city streets. They usually happen so quickly and unexpectedly that it is all over before a fellow can say "Jack Robinson." Nor is it always easy to fix the blame. Yet there is no doubt that accidents are caused by careless drivers who are entirely too willing to take foolhardy chances.

Recently a man was crushed to death between two street cars. He was in a hurry to catch a car and in running for his car he met his Waterloo. To begin with, he was on the wrong side of the street. His car stopped at the corner and he attempted to board it by running behind it. He would have made the car all right but in some unexplainable manner another car came along and bumped into the forward car and he was caught and crushed in a horrible fashion between the two cars. When he was extricated, barely alive, he held a nickel tightly in his clenched hand.

Another Type of Accident.

Another such victim, a musician, walked from behind a railroad pillar and was instantly knocked down and caught beneath the forward truck of a surface car. Volunteers attempted unsuccessfully to release him. A fire company was then summoned, but they, too, because they lacked the proper tools, were unable to get him out. At length a wrecking crew arrived. In the meanwhile policemen commandeered an automobile and went for a priest, who gave the victim the last rites of the church. The wrecking crew extricated him, but by that time he was beyond human aid.

"The streets of New York," said a traffic "cop," "are the No Man's Land of the metropolis. They are becoming more congested and dangerous all the time. The pedestrian, if he would be sure of avoiding accident, must exercise eternal vigilance whenever he crosses the street. Unfortunately a traffic 'cop' has but one pair of eyes and consequently cannot see everything that is going on. He needs the cooperation of pedestrians to help him, yet he receives little help from the walking public.

"We traffic 'cops' get to recognize types that we encounter every day in the line of duty. You do not have to be a traffic 'cop' very long to realize that there are plenty of jay walkers. Some of them take chances that should entitle them to sign up with a circus as daredevils. I am convinced that not a few of them get a thrill by purposely diving in and out among cars, snatching their quickness of eye and foot with the skill of motorists in missing them.

"From what I have observed of walkers a large percentage of them are impatient. They are always in a hurry, not because they are late or really have to hurry, but because they are used to speed. Speed is second nature with the average citizen. If he slows up he gets out of step with the procession and so he is always in a hurry whether he has to be or not.

Strangers Get Speed Habit.

"It is just the reverse with strangers. I can always spot them because they are slow and sluggish in their movements. They usually are willing to wait until they have a clear field in crossing the street, and frequently I have to assist them, especially elderly women, from curb to curb. Invariably they tell me they are strangers here. However, if these people remain here a short time the yacquire the rapid gait of our natives and fall into step with them. I do not know how many strangers have told me that on arriving here and watching the passing throngs they appear to be viewing things through a rapid-motion camera. Many of these people tell me they have stood for a long time and laughed at the rapid pace traveled by New Yorkers.

"The average person knows little of the danger of our streets today. It is well to remember that all drivers of cars are not trained and skilled to the highest degree. Saturdays, Sundays and holidays our streets are filled with strange motorists from many States. Many of them are unfamiliar with traffic conditions as they exist here today. Yet most of them are careful drivers and are careful to observe the law. However, some of them are far from being good drivers and they frequently cause jams and accidents.

"A certain class of young people are notoriously careless in driving cars. They are too ready to take all sorts of reckless chances, and when hundreds of cars are passing in a steady stream who can tell whether the drivers are sufficiently trained to drive cars? The average chauffeur is too much inclined to take chances and were it not for his skill he would be responsible for more accidents today than he is. He cuts corners with impunity and does other things not according to Hoyle. But what can a poor traffic 'cop' with one pair of eyes do except to do the best he can?"

Alfonso Sponsors New Ship Line.

SEVILLE, Spain, April 10 (AP).—A direct shipping service between New York and Seville will begin late in May. The project has been sponsored by King Alfonso. Ships will enter Seville through the new Alfonso XIII Canal direct from the sea and discharge their cargoes.

A BIRD LOVERS' HAUNT.

On the Lookout for Warblers in the New York Botanical Garden.

"Bird lovers haunt the New York Botanical Garden," says Kenneth R. Boynton, head gardener. "Almost any time of the day, the year round, you can see them, with their binoculars on straps around their necks, peering through the glasses into the trees and bushes.

"These bird lovers concentrate here particularly at bird migration times, when the pieces of natural woodland in the Garden are full of warblers—hundreds of little bits of things from the tropics.

"There's a ridge back of the Museum building, overgrown with thicket, which is a favorite stopping place of the warblers. People must keep a close eye on that thicket, because the warblers are hardly here before spots nearby are full of watchers. Some people come alone, but some old cronies come year after year together.

"We get used to certain figures tramping about. When they stop coming we miss them; but others take their places. Some Civil War veterans used to come. One by one they dropped off."

The coming of the warblers, Mr. Boynton said, varies according to weather.

NORGE IS BERTHED SAFELY AT PULHAM AFTER 29-HOUR TRIP

IT BATTLED STRONG WINDS

But Greatest Difficulty Came at Hangar, Due to Unfamiliarity With the Field.

STANDS UP UNDER THE TEST

Both Major Scott and Riiser-Larsen Say the Dirigible Is Suited for the Polar Expedition.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PULHAM, England, April 11.—The dirigible Norge, in which the Amundsen-Ellsworth-Nobile expedition hopes to fly over the North Pole, was sighted over this little Norfolk village shortly after 2 o'clock this afternoon. She had covered the distance from Rome in twenty-nine hours.

But getting above Pulham was one thing and landing quite another. For three hours and a half the Norge hovered over the airdrome here awaiting the right moment to drop to the earth. It was 6 o'clock, nearly four hours after she was first descried by the eagerly waiting inhabitants of Pulham and the surrounding villages, when she finally landed.

Calls It an Excellent Ship.

"She is an excellent ship, and will make the North Pole," declared Lieutenant Riiser-Larsen, the second in command, as he stood by the great aircraft just after she had been towed into her hangar here tonight. Lieutenant Riiser-Larsen was full of confidence in the Norge's strength and endurance after the severe test she had just had.

He described the trip from Rome to Pulham as without incident, except for the difficulty in landing at the Pulham airdrome. This difficulty, he explained, was due to variations in temperature and to the unfamiliarity of the commander with the airdrome.

Asked if the journey had been difficult, Lieutenant Riiser-Larsen shrugged his shoulders with an emphatic "No," although he was surrounded by others who were manifestly wilted.

Colonel Umberto Nobile, the commander and designer of the Norge, did not wish to talk after his thirty-hour vigil. He is a slim, intellectual Italian, wearing rimless glasses. However, he told THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent that the Norge had met all his expectations. He said he had not slept during the trip from Rome and that his main interest then was food and sleep. He expects to remain at Pulham for three or four days, or longer, according to the weather.

He said he took so long to land the Norge this afternoon because he did not wish to take any risks.

Sighted as a Speck in the Sky.

The airship was first sighted at 2:30 o'clock this afternon as a speck just above the rim of the sky. It grew larger and larger, and then gradually the outlines of the airfaring chariot grew distinct against the sky. Swift as the wind she flew, and for a time it seemed she would be in the hangar exactly thirty hours after she started from Rome yesterday.

As she drew near the Norge seemed like a great whale, lacking the grace and beauty of many airships. She circled over the airdome and the assembled population of the surrounding territory. It was thought she would land in a few minutes, but the continued to circle about, occasionally discharging gas and water.

Once she turned her nose straight down till within a few hundred feet of the ground, but then she turned up suddenly and went several miles out again. During the manoeuvring it appeared that the Norge was very awkward, but it was evident she was not likely to fall.

At another time she came within 100 feet of the ground and threw out her ropes, but then she poured out water and darted up again before the landing party had time to sieze the ropes. Then followed more apparently interminable circles before she finally landed.

The Norge is by no means beautiful, as she was built to meet special conditions at the North Pole. She has a dark gray coat with three little rectangles of color—green, white and red—on her sides. From her tail flies the Norwegian flag, and from her body hang four gondolas, three containing Maybach engines and the other the steering equipment.

She is a semi-rigid—that is to say, she has a rigid aluminum armor only over half her body, while with rigid airships the gas bag is entirely surrounded. She is able for her weight to carry more than the rigid type and able to reach higher altitudes. She can carry twenty-one tons, of which eleven tons is dead weight of engines, equipment, armor and fuel. The Norge is 340 feet long, has a cruising range of 3,200 miles, carries seven tons of fuel and 670,000 cubic feet of gas.

From Rome the Norge brought twenty-one men, officers and crew, and when she landed had enough fuel left to last eight hours more in the air.

The Norge had followed a course over the north of Corsica to Toulon, then along the coast line of the Mediterranean to Narbonne and then headed for Rochefort. Here a sharp turn northward was made and, passing near Tours, the vessel signaled at 8:48 this morning that she was over Caen. At 9:30 A. M. she had crossed the French coast line, and with a less

TOULOUSE, France, April 11 (AP). A steeple nearly 300 feet high, dating back to the fifteenth century, collapsed over the Church of La Dalbade today, wrecking three neighboring houses and causing the death of three persons occupying them.

The structure has been classified as a historical monument. It was the work of the noted fifteenth century architect, Nicolas Bachelier and was regarded as an example of pure Renaissance style.

A bill embodying an appropriation for repairs to the steeple has been before the City Council for several years.

TANKER EXPLOSION KILLS 25 OF CREW

FLAMES 100 FEET IN AIR

Many Who Jumped Into Water Are Rescued—Fire Endangering Shipping Is Subdued.

PORT ARTHUR, Texas, April 11 (AP).—Trapped as they slept in their berths, twenty-five seamen were burned to death in an explosion of gasoline on the oil tanker Gulf of Venezuela in the harbor here early today. Eleven others were injured, eight seriously. Two members of the crew were missing, but are believed to be among the dead.

The men met their fate in a caldron of boiling gasoline. The tanker was alongside the dock, where 85,000 barrels of high test gasoline had been pumped into her yesterday as she prepared to carry the valuable fuel to Atlantic ports. Hours before the men had gone to sleep in their quarters aft, and Captain John Charlton of Philadelphia was asleep in the officers' quarters forward.

The dock and the ships' harbor lay quiet when the early morning darkness was rent by an explosion that could be heard for miles. A pillar of burning gasoline leaped 100 feet into the air. The flash was blinding. It was followed quickly by several minor explosions.

In a few seconds several sailors in flames appeared on deck and jumped into the water, their bodies going through the air like flaming rockets. These men were saved, but they were badly burned. There were shrieks as a few of the men struggled for life within the steel hull that was now their burning coffin. The ship was a great steel box of leaping fire and rolling smoke.

The explosion was in the men's quarters. Captain Charlton, virtually knocked from his bed, rushed to the deck in a daze. He saw burning oil all about him. He attempted to make his way to the men's quarters, but a sheet of fire stopped him. With his night clothing scorched, he stumbled from the ship to the dock.

There he found several sailors who were slightly burned, but still able to keep their feet. Others were lying injured on the dock.

Twenty-two Unidentified.

Seven members of the ship's crew of thirty-nine were missing, but it was believed some were among the dead. A number of dock workers also were missing.

The first explosion, which was followed by several minor ones, rocked the city and brought hundreds from their beds into the streets before dawn.

Twenty-two of the dead are unidentified.

The bodies were so badly mangled by the explosion that identification was virtually impossible and there was fear that the loss of life would be much greater, as dock workers and pipe fitters were at work on or near the vessel at the time and it was difficult to check the missing.

Several bodies were hurled into the air with débris and bits of wreckage from the ship at the impact of the blast. A lifeboat from the top of the tanker was blown several hundred feet into the air, landing atop a warehouse near by.

Several lesser detonations followed.

NATIVES LOOK CALMLY ON

Hundreds of Arabian Performers Stage Dance as Premier Attends Reception at Palace.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

TRIPOLI, Africa, April 11.—As the roaring of the cannon of the old Turkish citadel firing a salute of twenty-one guns reverberated over the blue waters of the bay—where his escort of fifteen fighting craft lay grimly at anchor—and the streets of the romantic Arab seaport hummed with strange voices of the East, Premier Mussolini landed at Tripoli this morning.

On the pier stood the stately native Prince, Hushua Pasha, now Mayor of Tripoli, whose house ruled the desert land for hundreds of years, with his arm raised in the Fascist salute. He gravely welcomed the modern Roman ruler. Behind, on the shore, waited a native guard of honor of eight Savaris, clad in rich crimson robes and mounted on the whitest Arabian chargers, typifying the spirit of the desert and the proud past of a conquered ancient people.

To the westward, along a beautiful cement promenade built since the Fascisti took over the province, stretched two lines of Italian troops forming human walls against which pressed thousands of white robed Arabs. Here and there detachments of native soldiery in colorful costumes broke the monotony of the modern European khaki.

Leads Triumphal Procession.

After greeting the Governor and his staff Premier Mussolini mounted a brown Arabian horse and led a triumphal procession down the sand-carpeted street—almost 2,000 years after Scipio Africanus led his Roman cohorts on a similar march to celebrate the Roman conquest of North Africa.

Both the pageant and the appearance of its leader added a measure of substance to the simile. Seated proudly in the saddle of his beautiful mount, Mussolini looked every inch a prince. A high white plume on his bonnet added an Oriental touch to his smart Fascist uniform. Even his swollen nose, painted with iodine, the mark of the attempt on his life in Rome, failed to detract from the characteristic forcefulness and dignity of his bearing. He looked every inch a Roman ruler as stiffly he acknowledged the salute of the troops.

On each side of the street thousands of Arabs in white robes and packed five feet deep viewed the procession with expressionless faces. Squeezed amid the strange crowds which seemed to combine the wild savagery of the desert with the instinctive calm of an ancient people, the correspondent, examining one countenance after another, noticed scarcely a movement of the features of the many brown faces which protruded from their white hoods. But their bright eyes glistened as the pageant went past.

Arriving at the palace square, Mussolini swung his horse to face a detachment of African bailiilos (junior Fascisti), dressed in black shirts and white trousers, and waited while one of the most picturesque military cavalcades imaginable moved by. The writer has seen Trotsky address 15,000 Red troops in the Red Square of Moscow in the shadow of the Kremlin's walls, and he also watched the stirring armistice processions in Paris and London typifying the most impressive of Europe's pageants. He recalls the moving spectacle of New York's millions parading the streets in the Spring of 1918. But the scene this morning in the Palace Square, where East and West mingled and one of the Orient's oldest peoples passed in token of submission to the descendants of ancient Rome was unique in many ways.

A Weird, Picturesque Spectacle.

In the background rose the Turkish castle and a number of minarets. Weird cadences of the chants of Bedouins in a side street near by, "Ah,

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, April 11.—A German chemist, Dr. Reil, has discovered a direct method of obtaining essential oils used in perfumes from coal-tar products instead of the roundabout way formerly employed, thus cutting production costs at least one-half.

These essential oils also are used for manufacturing foodstuffs and fruit extracts and are harmless to the human body. Just as different element combinations produce different colors in aniline dry manufacture, so these element combinations produce different odors and tastes.

Dr. Reil made his discovery accidentally while on other research work when a series of test tubes which had been standing overnight gave off a series of different odors resembling flowers when the laboratory was opened.

BROWNING AND BRIDE PLAN TRIP TO EUROPE

GIVES FLOWERS TO GIRLS

Cold Spring Justice of the Peace Says He Was Paid "to Keep Mouth Shut."

Special to The New York Times.

COLD SPRING, N. Y., April 11.—Edward W. Browning, who was married here yesterday to fifteen-year-old Frances Heenan, thirty-six years his junior, plans a long European honeymoon for his bride. The gray-haired realty broker, debonair and smiling, permitted that item of news to be made known today through a close friend.

Browning and his bride kept out of public view most of today, remaining inside the rambling house his mother-in-law leased near this village, while the town constable paced back and forth in front of it.

Only once did he emerge from back of the protecting patrol of Constable John Lowry. That was when he made a quick trip to the Town Hall and listened to a program of hymns by the Children's Band. Ten of the eighteen members of the band are girls, and when the program was over, Browning, with courtly bows, gave to each girl a bouquet of pink and white carnations. He told how interested he was in the welfare of youth.

Doubt Law Will Intervene.

It is believed here that no legal bar will interfere with the proposed trip abroad. A proceeding by the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children is pending in the Children's Court in New York City. Vincent T. Pisarra, chief agent of the society, entered a petition seeking to have the girl's mother, Mrs. Catherine Heenan, removed as guardian, on the ground that she was unfit. Chief Justice Franklin Chase Hoyt, who heard the petition, last Friday, adjourned the matter for a week. The adjournment was based on representations that Frances, who had told of an attack by an unidentified person who had thrown acid, was too ill to appear.

Mr. Pisarra at his home in White Plains refused to comment on the wedding. In fact, he declined to make a statement of any nature. Colonel Ernest K. Coulter, director of the society, at his home in Wilton, Conn., said he was "not discussing the Browning matter today." It was said, in connection with the report that the guardian proceedings might fail, that Browning, by his wedding, assumed the mother's rôle of guardian.

Thirteen Guests at Ceremony.

Further facts about the hasty marriage by Roy W. Christian, Justice of the Peace and town taxicab magnate, came out during the day. It appears that there were thirteen guests at the simple little ceremony and that it was not, as first understood, performed in the office of the Christian taxi enterprise. The parlor of Grant Wright was utilized.

Mr. Wright is a veteran of the Seventh Cavalry. He fought in the Indian wars of the '90s and in the Spanish-American War. He tried to get into the late war, and failing, went over to Paris as an adviser on arms to the French Government. His home is just outside the village limits. He divides his time between supervising the Twin Oaks Inn, which he owns, and a cider mill alongside his home.

About 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon Mr. Wright was out in his front yard burning some brush. Francis Dale, long a resident of Cold Spring, came along the road. Mr. Dale, a lawyer in Manhattan, has been Browning's attorney for years.

"We want to use your parlor," he said to Wright. "We've got a wedding on."

Mr. Wright said that he had no objection. Dale drove off and soon three cars came dashing up, bearing the principals and the guests. Browning and the bride and several others rode in the broker's blue Rolls-Royce sedan. They had just come from the office of Town Clerk Gilbert Forman, who had issued the license, which listed the bride-to-be as a resident of Cold Spring.

Paid for "Keeping Mouth Shut."

The veteran soldier ushered the party into the parlor and Justice of the Peace Christian tied the knot. In between calls for his machines today Mr. Christian was singularly reticent about the ceremony. He disclosed that he

Amicable Settlement Seems Indicated in Correspondence Now Made Public.

SOME MINOR PHASES REMAIN

But Washington Is Satisfied That Americans Will Be Protected by Courts.

ALIEN PLEDGE IS ABORTIVE

Mexico Admits Our Right to Protect Nationals Against Injustice.

WASHINGTON, April 11.—The long-standing controversy between the United States and Mexican Governments over the right of American citizens to retain property in Mexico acquired under the laws of that country has reached an apparently amicable conclusion after intensive exchanges since November.

The official correspondence, comprised in ten notes and memoranda made public simultaneously today in Washington and Mexico City, shows that the major American objections to the Mexican attitude have been removed. These objections applied to certain features of Mexican land and petroleum laws, which in the view of this Government were confiscatory of properties owned by American citizens in Mexican territory.

No formal acknowledgment is made by the United States that it is satisfied with the adjustment effected, but it is the understanding that neither Government expects any further fundamental disagreement. This Government may rely on interpretations of Mexican court or the correspondence will be renewed with reference to remaining points requiring clarification that are virtually minor in comparison with those objections that have been overcome.

This controversy excited grave apprehension on the part of the United States Government, which saw a prospect of a considerable number of its citizens, oil well and mine operators and owners of some large and many small ranches deprived of the lands they had bought.

Situation Fraught With Danger.

Such an outcome would have brought this Government face to face with the problem of adopting measures to protect the interests of those Americans who had purchased Mexican lands in good faith under the laws of the republic. The whole situation was full of danger to international good relations.

The last Mexican note, dated March 27, gave a pledge that the laws regarded by the United States as confiscatory of American property would not be applied retroactively, but that renewable concessions would be given to American owners confirming their old ownership titles. In that note, Señor Saenz, Mexico's Foreign Minister, said:

"I take these purposes (i. e., executive decrees) of the President of the republic for my basis in extending to your excellency's Government my assurances that in the regulations on the subject the rights to the sub-soil held by American citizens who had performed any of the positive acts enumerated in my note of Jan. 20, will be confirmed."

The "positive acts" referred to, and certain police powers governing the execution of the laws, are among the points remaining for clarification, either by the Mexican Congress or the Mexican courts or by both.

Beginning of the Controversy.

The Mexican constitution adopted in 1917 provided that thereafter ownership of all subsoil properties should be vested in the nation. Such constitutional provisions were to be carried out by laws of the Mexican Congress. These laws—the land law and the petroleum law—were enacted recently. Under them no alien may own land

FEDERATIONS WET IN TREND

Officials Report 23 of 32 Favor Wines and Beer, With 15 on Record.

REPEAL DEMANDED BY ONE

Three Are Declared to Be Dry and Six Divided, Though No Vote Has Been Taken.

QUESTION RAISED IN HEARING

Because of the question raised at last Friday's prohibition hearing in Washington as to how many State Federations of Labor had taken action similar to the resolution of the American Federation of Labor favoring modification of the Volstead law to permit light wines and beer, THE NEW YORK TIMES, through its correspondents in the various States, asked officials of the forty-eight State Federations of Labor for this information.

The first thirty-two replies received last night showed that fourteen State Federations had adopted resolutions for modification and for wine and beer and one for repeal of the Volstead law. In addition, the members of eight other State Federations, although no formal action had been taken, were in favor of modification, according to their officials. Thus, 23 of the 32 State Federations were declared to be in favor of modification.

None of the remaining nine State federations has taken any formal action. Officials of three said that the prevailing opinion among the membership was dry. In the case of the other six, officials said opinion was so divided that it was impossible to say whether the majority would be wet or dry in a referendum.

How the Federations Stand.

New York.
Wisconsin.
Massachusetts.
Colorado.
Pennsylvania.
Indiana.
Illinois.
Kentucky.
Louisiana.
Minnesota.
Missouri.
Montana.
California.
Utah.

The State Federation that has adopted a repeal resolution is:

Wyoming.

The State Federations that have taken no formal action one way or the other, but in which the majority opinion, according to their officials, is in favor of modification, follow:

Nebraska.
New Mexico.
Washington.
Delaware.
South Carolina.
Iowa.
Georgia.
Texas.

The State Federations that have taken no formal action, but in which the majority opinion, according to their officials, is dry, follow:

Arkansas.
Oregon.
North Carolina.

The State Federations that have taken no formal action, and in which it is impossible, according to their officials, to determine the majority opinion at present, follow:

Tennessee.
South Dakota.
Arizona.
Kansas.
Michigan.

NORRISTOWN, Pa., April 11 (AP).—Ralph Beaver Strassburger, a Norristown publisher, in a cablegram from Europe made public here tonight, asked Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, President of Columbia University, to aid Representative Vare in the primary contest for nomination for United States Senator for Pennsylvania. Both Dr. Butler and Mr. Vare advocate modification of the prohibition laws.

Mr. Strassburger was a delegate to the Republican National Convention at Cleveland, where he proposed a wet plank in the national platform. His message to Dr. Butler said, in part:

"If Republicans like you unite, it will be impossible for the Republican Convention in 1928 to avoid the issue. • • •

"In the Senatorial primary in Pennsylvania the issue is clear-cut. There are three candidates—a dry, a wet and one who is both wet and dry, depending on which way the wind blows. The dry is Governor Pinchot, the wet is Congressman Vare and other is Senator Pepper.

MARSHALL OPPOSES STATE REFERENDUM

DOUBTS LEGALITY OF POLL

The State prohibition referendum, proposed by the Karle-Phelps bill pending in the Legislature and understood to have been suggested by Elihu Root, has no foundation in law or justification in common sense, according to the opinion of Louis Marshall, well known as an authority on constitutional law, given in a letter to Carlton M. Sherwood, executive secretary of the Citizens' Committee of 1,000 for Law Enforcement. The letter was made public yesterday.

At the request of the committee, of which Elbert H. Gary, John D. Rockefeller Jr. and R. Fulton Cutting are active members, Mr. Marshall studied the bill on the basis of law. His conclusion was that, even if the voters of the State should vote in the affirmative, "it would be beyond the power of Congress to pass an act permitting the States to define for themselves the meaning of the phrase 'intoxicating liquors,' as employed in the Eighteenth Amendment.

He added that such an act on the statute books would make the United States the laughing stock of the world."

Mr. Marshall's Opinion.

In his letter, Mr. Marshall said:

"Pursuant to your request I have hastily jotted down my views with regard to the Karle-Phelps Referendum bill, whereby the people of this State are to be asked to answer the question which, briefly stated, is: 'Should the Volstead act be modified by Congress so as to permit the States to define intoxicating liquors for themselves?'

"In my judgment its submission would be as futile as if it read: 'Is the pen mightier than the sword?' or 'Should capital punishment in Oklahoma be abolished?' In fact, it is even more objectionable, because, even if a majority of the New York electorate were to vote in the affirmative, it would be beyond the power of Congress to pass an act permitting the States to define for themselves the meaning of the phrase 'intoxicating liquors' as employed in the Eighteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

"The Supreme Court of the United States, in the national prohibition cases, 257 U. S. 350, has comprehensively construed that amendment:

"(a) The first section, which embodies the prohibition provision, is declared to be operative throughout the entire limits of the United States, to bind all legislative bodies, courts, public officers and individuals within those limits, and of its own force invalidates every legislative act, whether by Congress, by a State Legislature or otherwise, which authorizes or sanctions what the section prohibits.

"(b) The second section of the amendment, which relates to the concurrent power of Congress and the several States to enforce the article by appropriate legislation, has been interpreted as limiting the powers of Congress and of the several States to the enforcement of prohibition by appropriate means, and as forbidding them to defeat or thwart it.

"(c) The 'concurrent power' conferred does not require legislation by Congress to be approved or sanctioned by the several States, does not signify that the power to enforce is divided

75 TO DEFEND THE DRY LAW

Women Leaders Will Get Two Hours to Oppose Modification.

PLAN 1-MINUTE SPEECHES

Claim to Represent 18,000,000 and Insist Women Want More Rigid Enforcement.

CONVENTION IN WASHINGTON

President In a Message Extols as "Heartening" Their Efforts for Law Enforcement.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 11. — While seventy-five women leaders were completing their plans to appear before the Senate sub committee tomorrow in opposition to amendment or modification of the Volstead act, the camp of the dry cohorts was greatly elated today when President Coolidge sent a message to the Woman's National Committee for Law Enforcement, telling them that their support was heartening to those officially charged with the duty of seeing that the laws are obeyed.

President Coolidge's message read:

Please convey my greeting to the members of the Woman's National Committee for Law Enforcement.

This earnest manifestation of interest in the enforcement of law is gratifying.

Such interest on the part of those citizens not officially connected with the execution of law is heartening to those charged with that responsibility.

In this message I desire to reiterate the following statement, which is made on the subject of your present deliberations:

"The law represents the voice of the people. Beyond it, and supporting it, is a divine sanction. Enforcement of law and obedience to law by the very nature of our institutions are not matters of choice in this republic, but the expression of a moral requirement of living in accordance with the truth.

"They are clothed with a spiritual significance, in which is revealed the life or the death of the American ideal of self-government."

Message Is Read to Women.

President Coolidge's message was read by Mrs. Henry W. Peabody of Boston, Chairman of the Woman's National Committee for Law Enforcement at today's opening session of their convention at the historic New York Avenue Church, where Abraham Lincoln worshiped and widely known as the "Church of the Presidents"—a meeting at which strict enforcement of national prohibition was demanded and all proposals for modification vigorously opposed.

Mrs. Peabody will marshal the women leaders who will appear before the Senate liquor investigating committee at 10 o'clock tomorrow to present their side of the case in opposition to the demands of the wets for modification of the Volstead law so as to grant beer and light wines. It was plainly evident from the speeches and reports at today's convention of the Woman's National Committee for Law Enforcement that instead of yielding an inch of ground in favor of modification they will insist that the Volstead law be "tightened up" and most rigidly enforced.

"We speak for millions of American women," said Mrs. Peabody tonight. "The National Woman's Committee for Law Enforcement will present seventy-five witnesses at tomorrow's hearing before the Senate investigating committee. They will speak for women's organizations throughout the country—all national organizations—having a membership of 18,000,000 women, and when the churchmen for whom they will speak are included, they will, as a group, speak for an aggregate of many more millions.

Insists Women Favor Dry Law.

"We resent the claims of the wets that the American woman has been ruined or degraded by prohibition. While it may be true that some types of woman may have been adversely influenced through violations of the Volstead act, we insist that the great body of American women are opposed to liquor and intoxication. We are indignant over the charges and insinuations of the wets that the American woman favors intoxication or that there has been any increase of drunkenness among women under prohibition."

The wet forces are standing aside tomorrow as an act of courtesy to the women leaders to enable them to take advantage of their presence in Washington at this time in annual convention to present their side of the case to the Senate committee. The investigation is being run according to a schedule under which the wets are accorded twenty-four hours in which to submit their arguments for modification, the days being allowed up

It became known yesterday that Mrs. Clarisse Coudert Nast, former wife of Conde Nast, the publisher, had been married to J. Victor Onativia Jr., a prominent broker, on Saturday at the Municipal Building. The couple—both of whom are prominent in society, had made no announcement of their plan to be married. The ceremony took place a short time before the closing of the license bureau on Saturday noon.

Mrs. Nast filed a petition for divorce in a Paris court early last Summer. She was married to Mr. Nast in New York in 1902. Mrs. Nast was one of the children of the late Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Coudert of this city. Her father was a member of the law firm of Coudert Brothers of this city and Paris, one of the oldest international law firm in this country. She and Mr. Nast had been living apart for several years prior to the divorce.

When her daughter, Miss Natica Nast, was introduced to society in 1923, entertainments for her were given separately by her parents, the first a ball by her father at the Ritz-Carlton, where a few weeks later a small costume party was given for her daughter by Mrs. Nast. They also have a son, Charles Coudert Nast.

Mrs. Onativia is an accomplished singer and it was thought at one time she would follow a professional career. She has passed much time in Paris where she has two sisters, Mrs. Frank Glaenzer and Mrs. Constance Coudert Garrison, who three years ago obtained a divorce in Paris from her husband, William Garrison, son of the late William Garrison of New York.

Mr. Nast is publisher and chief owner of Vanity Fair and Vogue magazines.

Mr. Onativia is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jose Victor Onativia of 1,141 Park Avenue. He was graduated from Harvard in 1908, and is a member of the Union, Racquet and Tennis, and other clubs. He is a member of the New York Stock Exchange and his brokerage office is at 11 Wall Street.

Mr. and Mrs. Onativia have gone on a short wedding trip. They are expected back in New York late in the week.

Sir Oswald Mosley Rebukes Lady Cynthia And His Son for Talk of Giving Up Titles

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 11.—Statements attributed to Captain Oswald Mosley and his wife, Lady Cynthia, that they desired to relinquish their titles brought a rebuke from Captain Mosley's father, Sir Oswald Mosley, Bart., who has already repudiated the politics of his Socialist son.

Writing to The Daily Mail Sir Oswald says:

"It has occurred to me that more valuable help would be rendered to the country by my Socialist son and daughter-in-law if instead of achieving cheap publicity about relinquishing of titles they would take more material action and relinquish some of their wealth and so help make easier the plight of some of their more unfortunate followers."

Captain Mosley, speaking to a London newspaper reporter on March 29, is quoted as saying:

"Lady Cynthia Mosley has no intention formally of renouncing her title. What she said was what she always has said—that the title means nothing to her. There is no reason why she should bother about formally renouncing a title which she has already dropped."

Lady Cynthia is one of the three daughters of the late Marquis Curzon by his first wife, who was the daughter of Levi Z. Leiter of Chicago. It is understood that Lady Cynthia and her two sisters receive approximately $125,000 yearly between them from the Leiter estate. It is also stated that Lady Cynthia got $100,000 on the death of her grandmother, Mrs. Mary Leiter, in 1923.

LONDON, April 11.—Captain Oswald Mosley, as if aware of his father's letter to The Daily Mail writes to The Daily Herald, the labor organ, respecting their titles and wealth and declares that the question of a title is a "trumpery matter. Lady Cynthia, he adds, "won't even pay inverted snobbery the tribute of putting herself to the inconvenience of trying to disburden herself of the title," and, although when his father dies, he cannot escape succession to the Baronetcy, he declares he will not use the title.

With regard to the familiar question of "Why not abandon wealth to help the poor?" he says:

"The simple answer is that it would not help the poor. The only way to help the poor is to use ourselves and every resource given to us in the struggle to abolish the system which keeps the poor dependent on charities. It would admirably suit the purpose of capitalism if we made ourselves as powerless as those we seek to aid."

equal length of time in which to urge enforcement and oppose modification of the law.

Wets Have Used 16 Hours.

So far the wets have used nearly sixteen hours of their allotted time, which means that they have little more than seven hours remaining in which to drive home their arguments for modification. The drys, who will be heard under the general direction of Wayne B. Wheeler, General Counsel of the Anti-Saloon League of America, have used none of their twenty-four hours. When the women go on the witness stand tomorrow they will address the committee for two hours—between 10 o'clock and noon—that being all the time allowed them.

There will be no session of the Senate committee tomorrow afternoon, but on Tuesday morning the wets will resume. Since the committee has been devoting two to three hours daily to the wets, it will require several days to utilize the remaining seven hours available for them. Following that, probably on Thursday afternoon or Friday, the drys will be heard again and will use up the twenty-two hours remaining of their allotment.

As seventy-five women are to be heard tomorrow, and all they have to say must be set forth in the two hours immediately preceding the meeting of the Senate itself at noon, they plan to deliver one-minute speeches in the main. They say that what they present will be snappy and to the point and that it will be thoroughly representative of the well-organized campaign they are now conducting in an appeal to the women of the country to "put the force in prohibition." That, the leaders asserted tonight, is to be their slogan.

Mrs. Peabody declared tonight that the Woman's National Committee on Law Enforcement is not only representative of the leading women organizations of the country, but that it is entirely distinct from and not identified with any of the masculine "dry" organizations.

"We admire the men in these other organizations," she said, "admire them for the courage of their fight against modification, but are not identified with them."

New York Women to Be Heard.

Among the women in the group of seventy-five to be heard tomorrow, Mrs. Peabody said, will be Mrs. Everett Wald of New York, and others representing the Council of Women for Home Missions, Lieut. Commander Hamon, representing the Salvation Army and a worker in its ranks in New York City for twenty-five years, and Mrs. Robert T. Speer of New York, National President of the Young Women's Christian Association.

Other speakers will be Mrs. E. R. Silverthorn of New York, President of the Federation of Foreign Mission Boards representing 5,000,000 women, and Mrs. J. W. Emrich of New York, representing the women of the Federal Council of Churches, representing 25,000,000 church women. Mrs. S. Parkes Cadman of New York, national head of the Women's Section of the Council, unable to attend, authorized Mrs. Emrich to testify as its spokeswoman. Mrs. John B. Sherman, President of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, has authorized Mrs. Kate Abrams of New York City, Legislative Vice Chairman of that organization, to act as its principal spokesman. The Woman's Christian Temperance Union and other woman organizations will be represented in the long line of feminine opponents of modification.

"Among them," added Mrs. Peabody, "will be Mrs. Nellie Somerville, the only woman member of the Legislature of Mississippi. She will tell how well prohibition works in Mississippi, where the law is enforced. They have no trouble in enforcing it in that State."

Mrs. Peabody said that Virginia will send a large delegation headed by Mrs. Carter Glass, and also Arkansas with a group led by Mrs. Joseph T. Robinson, wives of United States Senators. Another speaker will be Miss Grace Abbott, head of the United States Children's Bureau, who will present data in an effort to show from available statistics that there had been less juvenile delinquency under prohibition than before the Eighteenth Amendment. Miss Helen Davis of New York, President of the Y. W. C. A., will present a statement challenging the allegation there is more drunkenness among women under prohibition.

Convention Adopts Resolution.

The opening session of the women's convention at the New York Avenue Church today was a curtain-raiser to their descent upon the Senate committee tomorrow. Resolutions were adopted opposing modification as weakening the high moral standard which had been erected, and disastrous to the temperance cause, and calling upon the "47,000,000 church people of this country" for vigilance in enforcement of the law and against its alteration. Advocates of modification were denounced as natural opponents of temperance.

The straw votes recently taken were characterized as "ridiculous" because only a million votes were polled—many of the million being non-voters, it was said.

The keynote speech was delivered by Mrs. Henry W. Peabody, who said tonight that none of the 75 women scheduled to testify tomorrow had come to Washington "under subpoena and all are paying their own expenses."

"The test of each political party is its record on law enforcement," said Mrs. Peabody. "The test of the women is their willingness for the sake of their children and this great Republic to assume their full responsibility as citizens carrying allegiance to the Constitution into every part of daily living and registering their referendum at the ballot box.

"We are assured that the men who formerly supported the saloon and made fortunes from it would on no account bring it back. They only ask for nullification of the Eighteenth Amendment and a modification of the Volstead act to allow the manufacture and trade in wine and beer. We are not told just what they would call the places where these liquors would be dispensed nor how it would be possible to regulate such sales. On no account, they state with wet tears, would they be called saloons. Liquor must, however, be sold under license or freely dispensed from any drug store, soda fountain or grocery store.

Attacks the Canadian Plan.

"We are told again that the plan adopted in Canada is ideal. Access to the Canadian press is not difficult. The Montreal Witness, on the ground, states recently that under the Canadian plan there are 1,000 or more illicit liquor selling places in Montreal. The same copy of The Montreal Witness bears pathetic testimony from a Catholic priest who pleads for relief from the wave of drunkenness which, under this model Canadian law, is sweeping over his parish in Quebec.

That there is a serious situation we do not deny, but we believe that the propaganda of politicians and liberalists in certain great city papers and magazines and the recent agitation in Congress are responsible for a letting down of authority in the nation. We do not, however, find our great groups of good Christian church people, Bible classes, young people's organizations, leagues and guilds carrying hip flasks. That is confined to a comparatively small group, and we must remember that it 'takes a great many hip flasks to make a saloon.'

"The constitution has met attack before, and will survive when the men who have made personal liberty rather than national loyalty their aim have passed into oblivion. As we have heard the clamor, the shouting and the tumult, the talk and the filibustering of our statesmen, we keep in mind the gentle feminine policy settled ages ago, to say the last word, which will, we believe, take form in the woman's vote on this and all other issues which challenge women. If things are really as bad as they tell us and if only wine and beer will prevent the fall of the nation and degeneracy of the people, then women are called immediately to their special task at this season of the year's housecleaning. There the eternal feminine is at an advantage. She will function in the Government, local, State and national, as she does in the home, using her broom and vacuum cleaner to sweep out corruption.

"If there are any outlaw States, those which have not provided laws for the protection of their people, let us see to it that they fall in line with the Constitution and the Federal Government, enact State enforcement laws, and cease to make impossible conditions, only to argue speciously from these conditions that our laws cannot be enforced, therefore cancel the laws. Every mother and teacher knows the peril of such a policy. The task today, yours and mine, is not to destroy the Constitution but to make our democracy safe for the Constitution and all its laws."

Says Law Never Had a Fair Trial.

At today's session the Health, Morals and Economics Commission of the Woman's National Committee for Law Enforcement submitted a report in which it was declared that "enforcement has never had a fair trial," and appealing to women throughout the country to insist upon most rigid enforcement of the Volstead and all others enacted to give force to the Eighteenth Amendment.

"We call upon all who are charged with the responsibility of enforcement to exert greater diligence in the detection of violation of the law," the report of this commission declared; "to seek quick trials and adequate punishment for such violators, and to safeguard the permit system to prevent leakage for beverage purposes. We protest against any modification of the Volstead act that would lower the present standard and so make enforcement more difficult. We call upon all women particularly to set the standard of obedience to the law in the home, at social functions and on all public occasions, and we appeal to all Americans in the interest of health, morals, financial prosperity and patriotism to put the obey in obedience through creating a respect for the law and arousing a desire to share its benefits."

Declares Prohibition Has Done Great Harm to College Students.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., April 11.—Willard M. Woll, a senior at the Institute of Technology and a son of Matthew Woll, Vice-President of the American Federation of Labor, amplified his father's statements before the Senate wet prohibition sub-committee when asked if he agreed with his father's attitude.

"It is getting now so that a college student cannot dance unless he is half intoxicated," young Woll said. "Prohibition, as it is practiced, has worked more harm to college youths than any other factor in American life.

"I suppose there have always been drinking bouts among college students. Well, I'll guarantee there are more now than before prohibition. Physical ailments are usually the result. Even the best of the bootlegger liquor obtainable in Boston is worse than the rankest whisky once sold over the bar in the worst saloons. Students as a rule, have but little money to purchase liquor with, and the kind they get is the worst of the bootleg stock.

"Juniper flavored alcohol, denatured in dens in the slums of the city, is what students are drinking today. How much serious thought can a student give to lectures or studies the next day after a night at a party where such stuff is provided? Most of the scholastic failures can be charged to drinking."

MODIFICATION BODY FORMS.

Federation of Personal Liberty Plans Pennsylvania Drive.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, April 11.—The Pennsylvania Federation of Personal Liberty has organized here this afternoon for the announced purpose of working for modification of the Volstead act. According to its sponsors, it will begin immediately an active campaign for the organization of every county in the State.

More than 100 men attended the initial meeting, including delegates from ten western counties. Letters were read from people in eighteen other counties signifying their intention to join.

State officers were elected as follows: President, John B. Cooper; Vice President, John Rennie; Secretary and Treasurer, W. A. Roberts.

Mr. Cooper is the Exalted Ruler of Pittsburgh Lodge No. 11, B. P. O. E.

Secretary Roberts said that the men at the organization meeting were virtually all business men. Liberal candidates for public office would be supported by the federation, he said, and all who desire to assist in liberalizing the liquor laws would be invited to join.

A State convention will be held in Erie on May 10, and, as the State Federation of Labor will be in session there at that time, it is planned to ask that body to endorse the personal liberty movement.

It was announced that The National Liberty Journal, an official organ, would appear soon.

MALT-TONIC VENDORS HELD.

Gary (Ind.) Authorities Arrest Two Under State Law.

GARY, Ind., April 11 (AP).—George Piamankos, proprietor of a confectionery, and Paul Rammanos, his clerk, were arrested here last night and placed under $1,000 bond after the two placed on sale the 3.75 per cent. malt tonic recently permitted in an order by Lincoln C. Andrews, National Prohibition Director.

The men were arrested under the State "bone dry" law. It is not believed the tonic has been put on sale at any other place in Indiana.

The two men brought the tonic into the State and quietly put it on sale after Mayor Williams had placed his ban on the beverage and local dealers had announced they could not make deliveries for a week. The man placed it on sale for 50 cents a bottle.

They will be tried Monday.

State Labor Leaders Tell of Sentiment on Prohibition

ican Federation of Labor, testified that the American Federation of Labor had adopted several resolutions, the last one in 1923, favoring modification of the Volstead law and a return to light wines and beer.

Under questioning by Senator Walsh of Montana, a dry, he was unable to say how many State Federations of Labor had adopted resolutions either for or against the Volstead law. He did say that he thought "quite a number" had done so, and that he believed they all endorsed the action of the American Federation of Labor because none of the State Federations had protested against it.

To elicit the lacking information, THE TIMES telegraphed the following message to correspondents:

"Please ascertain from State Secretary of the Federation of Labor what if any action has been taken by State Federation to express approval or disapproval of Volstead act and when such action was taken. If there was no official action, what is the prevailing sentiment of labor in the State and how is it indicated?"

The replies so far received follow:

Arizona Labor Not on Record.

PHOENIX, Ariz., April 11.—B. P. Carpenter, Secretary of the Arizona Federation of Labor, says that no action has been taken by that body with reference to the Volstead act and that none is contemplated. If left to the officers of the federation, he believes, the expression of sentiment would be wet, but there is strong dry sentiment in labor throughout the State.

Labor took an active part in the campaign for State prohibition in 1914, and it was largely through its influence that the State at that time went dry. The only organizations then opposing that action were the bartenders' and the cooks' and waiters' unions. It is admitted by dry labor men that there has been some change of sentiment since then.

Arkansas Workers Favor Dry Law.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., April 11.—The subject of the Volstead act and prohibition never has been taken up officially by the Arkansas Federation of Labor and it is hardly likely that it ever will be, according to H. M. Thackrey, Secretary.

"It seems to be the opinion of our officials that prohibition is not a subject for our consideration, and it never has been brought up in a federation meeting," Mr. Thackrey said.

"So far as I know, none of the labor organization officials of Arkansas are drinking men, and I believe that a majority of our membership endorses prohibition and the Volstead act. Our organization stands openly and firmly for law enforcement, prohibition laws included."

The State Federation meeting will be held on April 27, but Mr. Thackrey says that the program makes no provision for a formal discussion of the liquor issue, and informal discussions probably will be very limited.

Other officials of labor in Arkansas support the statement by Mr. Thackrey, and there seems to be a general sentiment in favor of the enforcement of the Volstead act.

Annual Wet Resolutions in Illinois.

CHICAGO, April 11.—The membership of the Illinois Federation of Labor is almost unanimously opposed to the Volstead act, and at almost every annual convention resolutions are adopted urging a modification of the law to permit the sale of wine and beer. At the annual convention at Rockford, Ill., in October, 1922, the State labor body unanimously passed a resolution favoring a change in the liquor act.

"The Eighteenth Amendment and the sham Volstead Enforcement act," said the resolution, "are principally responsible for the prevailing high taxes, increased crime, increased number of drug addicts and the endless trail of its demoralizing effect is daily manifested.

"We concur in the action of the American Federation of Labor and its prepared program of legislation toward modifying or repealing the Volstead act."

Indiana Body Voted for Change.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., April 11.—The Indiana State Federation of Labor is on record as favoring the modification of the Volstead act to permit the manufacture of light wines and beer. Action favoring this modification was taken at a meeting of the State Federation in South Bend in 1924.

Adolph J. Fritz, Secretary of the Federation, said tonight that in his opinion the majority of the members of organized labor in Indiana are in favor of modification.

"I recently made a trip through Southern Indiana and found there that most workers favor the return of light wines and beer," said Mr. Fritz.

"Members of laboring bodies do not favor the return of the old time saloon, however. All they want is the privilege of having beer and wine in their homes.

"Laborers believe that the administration of the law is unfair," continued Mr. Fritz. "They feel that the rich can buy distilled liquor with impunity, but the poor man cannot even buy a glass of beer without being arrested.

"I am satisfied that fully 80 per cent. of the members of the State Federation favor modification of the law," he concluded.

Iowans Divided on Issue.

Special to The New York Times.

DES MOINES, Iowa, April 11.—Laboring men in Iowa are divided on the question of modifying the Volstead act, according to Secretary Michael H. Sherman of the Federation of Labor, but there is a strong sentiment for light wines and beer.

There has been no official disapproval of the Volstead act. A resolution of this nature failed of adoption at the annual convention in 1921. Last year a similar motion was defeated by a few votes. The Secretary himself does not believe that this refusal to recommend modification indicates a majority against it, but ascribes it to a desire to keep issues clear. The members feared lest their own motions suffer with the wet cause, he said.

"I believe there is a slight majority in favor of light wines and beer," he said. "Most of the leaders are violently opposed to any form of liquor, but I personally think the majority would like moderation. No one wants the saloon."

Action Thus Far Refused in Kansas.

TOPEKA, Kan., April 11.—The Kansas Federation of Labor has taken no action on the approval or disapproval of the Volstead act. Two years ago the State Federation refused to take action.

Dr. C. V. Hope, Secretary of the Topeka Federation and prominent in State labor activities, said the question might come up at the State meeting in May. He was the closest friend of Samuel Gompers in Kansas. He accompanied the labor chief to Mexico, when Mr. Gompers died on the return trip.

"The Federation of Labor always stands for the initiative referendum and recall," Dr. Hope said. "Labor wants the prohibition issue submitted to a vote of the people of the United States. When that is done Labor will stand back of the majority so expressed and see that the will of the people is executed."

Asked if he believed that Kansas, the original prohibition State, would again declare for sustaining the Volstead act, he said:

"I am not so sure of that, but I do know that Kansas, while it might declare for modification in a test vote, would stand with the Federation of Labor throughout the country unalterably against the return of the open saloon."

For Wine and Beer in Kentucky.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., April 11.—The Kentucky State Federation of Labor, with a normal membership of more than 100,000, is for modification of the Volstead act to permit the sale of light wines and beer, having taken this stand at the convention in September, 1925.

This has been the stand of the Federation, Peter J. Campbell, Secretary, said today, since enactment of the law. Prior to prohibition it went on record against "the whisky traffic," and urged that the sale of light wines and beer be put under the Pure Foods and Drugs act.

Mr. Campbell appeared before the Volstead committee in Washington before enactment of the law and, as a representative of the Kentucky Federation, urged a provision for continued sale of wines and beer.

Louisiana Labor Just Voted Wet.

SHREVEPORT, La., April 11.—Resolutions favoring the modification of the Volstead act were adopted here on Tuesday by the Louisiana State Federation of Labor in convention by a vote of 42 to 18, after a heated discussion.

The convention authorized forwarding a copy of the resolution to the Senate Judiciary Committee, the Senators and Representatives of the State of Louisiana and to William Green, President of the American Federation of Labor.

Subject Never Broached in Michigan.

Special to The New York Times.

DETROIT, Mich., April 11.—Official action, either in support or in condemnation of the Volstead act, has never been taken by the Michigan Federation of Labor, according to John J. Scannell, State Secretary. The subject has never been brought before the Executive Board.

Minnesotans Wet Since 1923.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. PAUL, Minn., April 11.—Minnesota's Federation of Labor took a decided stand in favor of modification of the Volstead law as far back as 1923, when at a State convention at Crookston a resolution was adopted. Today, according to George W. Lawson, State Secretary, labor now, if anything, "is much more in favor of modification."

"Modification of the Volstead act, in the opinion of the vast majority of the members of the State Federation of Labor, is a necessity," Mr. Lawson said.

"There has been no necessity for a reiteration of the stand of the labor members since the Crookston convention, and if a vote were to be taken tomorrow I am sure that the results would be overwhelmingly in favor of modification as soon as possible."

Always Against Dry Law in Missouri.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., April 11.—Organized labor in Missouri still is unanimously opposed to prohibition, in the opinion of George R. Patterson, Secretary of the State Federation.

Mr. Patterson says that every State Labor convention since the prohibition issue came up has adopted resolutions opposing the dry law. He added that the passage of such laws was opposed by earlier convention.

He is not able to recall a dissenting vote on the proposition at any of the conventions. The next convention will be in Jefferson City on May 24 and at that time it is very likely that resolutions again urging modification of the prohibition laws will be submitted and adopted according to Mr. Patterson.

Montana Voted 85 Per Cent. Wet.

Special to The New York Times.

HELENA, Mont., April 11.—No action was taken by the Montana Federation of Labor with reference to the Volstead act at the State Convention at Missoula last year, Edwin H. Manson, State Secretary, said today, but at the annual convention in Butte, two years ago, a resolution was adopted favoring the modification to permit light wines and beer, with at least 85 per cent. of the eighty-four delegates voting in favor of the resolution.

"I am satisfied that the sentiment of labor in Montana at the present time is overwhelmingly in favor of a modification of the Volstead act permitting the sale of light wines and beer," said Mr. Manson, "and I believe the sentiment of the majority of labor in Montana is in favor of legislation that will permit governmental regulation of the purchase and sale of liquor of all kinds."

Twice Voted for Change in Bay State.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, April 11.—Martin T. Joyce, Secretary of the State Federation of Labor, says that the workers of Massachusetts do not want to see the saloon back again, but favor a modification of the Volstead act to legalise light wines and beer.

"The laboring man of Massachusetts realizes that hard liquor as a beverage and efficiency with its resulting opportunity to succeed in his work do not go hand in hand," says Mr. Joyce. "On the other hand, for the past two years resolutions have been passed by overwhelming majorities at the State conventions in favor of the return of light wine and beer.

"Fully 90 per cent. of the working men of this State are in favor of a wine and beer amendment and at least half of the remaining 10 per cent. do not oppose it. Five per cent. would neither go on record for it or against it."

No Test Yet Made in Nebraska.

Special to The New York Times.

LINCOLN, Neb., April 11.—I. S. Betzer, President of the Nebraska Federation of Labor, says that the State body has not in recent years taken any action on the issue of prohibition.

"While we have had no test, my impression is that the labor unions of the State, were the issue put to a vote, would favor light wines and beer," he says. "At any rate they would favor some modification of the Volstead act.

"The greatest membership of the unions, of course, is in the larger cities. Personally, I favor the Volstead law and its enforcement, but I am looking at things as I believe they are."

Ex-President Frank M. Coffey of the State Federation recalls that about ten years ago a delegate at the State meeting introduced a resolution favoring prohibition. A substitute resolution prevailed which declared for just and equitable regulation of the liquor traffic.

Vote in New Mexico This Week.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., April 11.—New Mexico labor would favor modifying the Volstead act to allow light wines and beers, J. H. Hanks, Secretary of the State Federation, said today, but no official action and no attempt to determine the exact attitude toward the Volstead act has been taken. However, a labor referendum on the question will be started this week.

"After a personal, yet specific, inquiry, I can safely say that 85 per cent. of the labor class are in favor of light wines and beer," declared Mr. Hanks.

"Albuquerque's Central Labor Union, of which I am President, makes up 90 per cent. of the State Federation's membership. It is among the local group that I have inquired.

"The feeling here against the present law, I find, is not as intense as in other sections of the country. There seems to be very little drinking and less individual manufacture, and I can add that we are absolutely opposed to the return of the saloon and to the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment."

On Record Seven Years in New York.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., April 11.—"The State Federation of Labor has been on record for seven years as favoring a modification of the Volstead law," said State Secretary John M. O'Hanlon, tonight.

"It has been included in our annual legislative programs and we have never attempted to hide our standing on the subject. We are in favor of modification now, just as we have been.

"At the meeting of the Executive Council in Albany last December the Federation passed a resolution authorizing the President, John Sullivan, to attend the Washington hearings and to represent the State Federation.

"At every convention we have either discussed the subject or passed resolutions regarding it.

"The sentiment for a modification of the Volstead act is very evident in our membership. Individual members have expressed themselves as opposed to the present law."

Oregon Labor Preponderantly Dry.

Special to The New York Times.

PORTLAND, Ore., April 11.—The Oregon State Federation of Labor has taken no action relative to altering the Volstead act and none is contemplated, according to B. W. Sleeman, President.

Mr. Sleeman said today that he did not think that any action could be taken until after the national meeting in September, in case the matter was brought up at that time. He did not care to express his opinion on the question, but the consensus of opinion of the State Federation is in favor of prohibition.

One prominent labor leader said today that during the ten years since the State went dry many have forgotten what life was like when saloons flourished and have been led to believe that modification of liquor laws would not be detrimental. He declared, however, that the laboring man is far better off without the saloon and without even light wines and beer.

Pennsylvania Thrice on Record.

Special to The New York Times.

HARRISBURG, Pa., April 11.—The Pennsylvania Federation of Labor has gone on record upon several occasions in State convention in favor of modification of the Volstead act, according to information at the federation's State headquarters.

A resolution in favor of light wines and beer was first adopted at the annual meeting at Scranton in 1922 and reaffirmed in 1923. A similar resolution was adopted at the 1925 convention at Harrisburg.

No Action in South Dakota.

PIERRE, S. D., April 11.—E. Pfeiffer, President of the State Federation of Labor, says that no action has been taken by the organization in regard to the Volstead act and that he does not expect any such move.

He says that the sentiment is divided, but he would not attempt to state at this time just what percentage would ask for any change in the prohibition law.

Not Discussed in Tennessee.

Special to The New York Times.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., April 11.—Prohibition has had no part in the deliberations of any convention of the Tennessee State Federation of Labor since before the beginning of the World War, according to W. C. Birthright, Secretary of the Federation.

"We have not even discussed prohibition or the Volstead act at any convention since I have been Secretary, which is about ten years," Mr. Birthright said.

"Therefore I do not know the sentiment of organized labor in the State. We have been busy on industrial problems that have more to do with human welfare.

"But so long as the Volstead act is a statute Tennessee organized labor will back its enforcement."

May Vote on Issue in Texas Next Week.

Special to The New York Times.

DALLAS, Texas, April 11.—The Texas Federation of Labor has never voted officially on the issue of a repeal or modification of the Volstead act. The El Paso convention in 1922 refused to consider a resolution favoring light wines and beer on the ground that any action looking to a change in prohibition must come from Congress.

Secretary George H. Slater, who at the time was President of the Federation, said today it was also felt that the position of the organization would be weakened in the State if such a resolution were approved, though he and a large majority of the delegates were favorable to it.

"At that time there was no national movement of consequence for a change in the prohibition laws," Mr. Slater added. "Such a resolution coming before the Federation now would receive an entirely different reception."

Asserting that the question probably would come before the Federation at its convention in Houston, April 19 to 25, he said:

"There is no question that an overwhelming majority of the Federation's members are for the modification of the Volstead law."

Vermont Dry But Not on Record.

MONTPELIER, Vt., April 11.—The Vermont Federation of Labor has not taken any action upon the Volstead act or other angles of the prohibition law, Secretary Fred Suitor of Barre said today.

"As far as I can ascertain, there is nothing on record indicating the Federation's stand on the question," he said. "The subject has never been discussed formally.

"Neither President W. P. Eager nor I are in a position to state what the sentiment is among the members, though, personally, we favor the law as it now stands without modification.

"The only instance of which I know that a le or body in this State went on record is the vote of the Barre Central Labor Union favoring the law without modification. But that was some time ago and I do not know whether sentiment has changed since then."

Committed to Change in Utah.

Special to The New York Times.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, April 11.—Organized labor of Utah is not only in favor of modification of the Volstead act to permit light wines and beer, but is also actively prepared to petition the support of Utah members of Congress for modification, F. B. West, Secretary of the State Federation of Labor, declared today.

At the 1925 meeting the State Federation went on record favoring light wines and beer, and Mr. West said that this action would be affirmed at the 1926 meeting.

"While the organized laboring men of Utah as a whole are in favor of light wines and beer, there are many members of the Federation who favor the complete repeal of the Volstead act," Mr. West said. "Such pre-prohibition organizations as the Bartenders' and Brewerymen's Unions are still in existence with members keeping up their dues, with the confident belief that permission to follow their calling is but a short time away."

Sentiment Wet in Washington.

SEATTLE, Wash., April 11.—Although the Washington State Federation of Labor has never officially gone on record relative to prohibition, this organization is decidedly wet in sentiment, according to Vice President G. W. Roberts.

"The rank and file of organized labor in this State feel that the present prohibition law should be modified, not to permit a return of saloons, but to allow the sale of wines and beer," he said.

Wisconsin Annually on Record Wet.

Special to The New York Times.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., April 11.—Organized labor of Wisconsin stands unreservedly for the modification of the Volstead act and the Eighteenth Amendment, James F. Sheehan, Chairman of the State Federation Executive Committee, declared today.

"Every year since the Volstead act became a law, the Wisconsin Federation of Labor has gone on record for its modification," Mr. Sheehan said.

"This year sentiment is stronger than ever in labor circles for modification. In all probability a strong resolution will be adopted at the annual State federation convention in July, again asking for modification of the Federal dry laws."

The adoption of resolutions favoring modification of the dry law by the Wisconsin federation for six years past has met with but little opposition, and often was by unanimous vote.

California Long on Wet List.

Special to The New York Times.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., April 11.—The California State Federation of Labor some time ago placed itself on record as favoring modified prohibition, namely, light wines and beers, Secretary Paul M. Scharenberg said here today.

"This is the prevailing sentiment throughout the ranks of labor in California," he said.

Colorado Voted in 1921 and 1923.

DENVER, Col., April 11.—The Colorado Federation of Labor on June 7, 1923, reaffirmed a resolution unanimously adopted at the 1921 convention urging the adoption of a modified prohibition act permitting the manufacture and sale of light wines and beer, according to John E. Gross, State Secretary.

No official action has been taken since 1923, he said, but the State Federation stands firmly behind the position taken by the American Federation.

No referendum has been taken by the Colorado body and none will be taken, he said, but the sentiment of individuals, as well as that expressed at meetings, is for a modification, though opposed to the return of the saloon.

Not Brought Up in Delaware.

Special to The New York Times.

WILMINGTON, Del., April 11.—No meeting of the Delaware State Federation of Labor has been held since the agitation over the prohibition question arose. State leaders declared that while no action had been taken, the general sentiment of union men here would be to follow the lead of the American Federation of Labor.

Georgia Wet but Unrecorded.

ATLANTA, Ga., April 11.—"The American Federation of Labor has gone on record as favoring modification of the Volstead act, and, under the circumstances, the Georgia Federation could take no action antagonistic toward that movement," C. W. Cunningham, President of the State Federation, said tonight.

Mr. Cunningham asserted that the State Federation, which met in Columbus about a month ago, had taken no action on the matter and would not commit himself on the subject.

Prominent labor leaders in Georgia, however, declared that labor was at least 90 per cent. in favor of a change. It was stated that the only reason the question has not been brought up for a vote was that it was feared that such action would bring about debate, which it was desired to avoid.

North Carolina Labor Dry.

Special to The New York Times.

ASHEVILLE, N. C., April 11.—North Carolina labor has taken no stand either for approval or disapproval of the Volstead act, according to C. G. Worley, Secretary of the State Federation.

"We are overwhelmingly dry in this State," Mr. Worley said, "so much so that it can hardly become an issue.

"We had prohibition long before it became a Federal law and the younger men now were babies when the change was made and the saloon disappeared.

"Of course, it is true that we have bootleggers and a lot of bad whisky, but so do we have murderers and robbers. North Carolina recently has been receiving a lot of people from other States, but so far the percentage is far too small to change the State in the matter of its dry sentiment.

"I am quite sure that if the question were brought before the State Federation tomorrow they would be overwhelmingly dry."

Repeal Voted For in Wyoming.

CHEYENNE, Wyo., April 11.—"We take the same stand as the American Federation of Labor—we are for the repeal of the Volstead act," said Ward Hudson, Secretary of the Wyoming Federation of Labor, in reply to a question concerning the attitude of organized labor of this State toward prohibition.

"Furthermore," said Mr. Hudson, "I believe that the sentiment of Wyoming labor, if it were expressed today by a vote on the question, would favor repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment.

"We have not taken a vote on prohibition since we passed a resolution favoring repeal of the Volstead act four years ago, but sentiment against prohibition undoubtedly is stronger now.

"If repeal of the Volstead act is not possible, we favor modification of the act to permit the sale of light wines and beer, provided they are not too light."

South Carolina Sentiment Wet.

COLUMBIA, S. C., April 11.—While no official ballot has been taken by the South Carolina Federation of Labor on approval or disapproval of the Volstead act, sentiment is decidedly in favor of light wines and beer, according to labor leaders.

This fact has been brought out in discussions which have been held, and the opinion is expressed by men closely in touch with the situation that, were a vote taken today, light wines and beer would win. The matter will probably get official attention at the next meeting of the State Federation to be held in Charleston.

between Congress and the several States, and is in no wise dependent upon or affected by action or inaction on the part of the States or any of them.

"(d) Moreover, it was expressly decided that it is within the competency of Congress, regardless of action by the States, to define as 'intoxicating liquors,' such as contain one-half of 1 per cent. of alcohol by volume, and as are fit for use for beverage purposes.

"It would seem to follow, therefore, that while Congress may change the definition of 'intoxicating liquors,' it is not conceivable that it would or could permit the States to define what is or is not 'intoxicating liquor' in a manner which does not conform with the definition of that term by Congress were to continue the present to permit a greater percentage of alcoholic content than is prescribed by Congress. That would result in a manifest absurdity. If, for instance, Congress were to continue the present definition, which has been held valid by the Supreme Court of the United States, limiting the alcoholic ingredients to one-half of 1 per cent., and that same Congress were, directly or indirectly, to permit the State of New York to define as intoxicating liquors containing more than 5 per cent. of alcohol, Pennsylvania 6 per cent., Ohio 7 per cent., Illinois 10 per cent. Massachusetts 2 per cent., and so on, we would become the laughing stock of the world. Nobody can seriously believe that Congress would so stultify itself as to enact such a monstrosity in legislation; nor has it the constitutional power to do so."

Mr. Marshall added that he was of the further opinion that it was beyond the power of the Legislature of this State to submit a proposition of this character, because the State Constitution permitted only the submission to the electorate of three propositions: a proposal to hold a State convention to revise the Constitution, a proposal to ratify a proposed amendment to the Constitution and a proposal as to whether or not a debt should be contracted by the State.

"Nowhere is there any provision which directly or indirectly authorises a referendum vote on a subject such as that now under discussion," Mr. Marshall continued. "The submission of such a proposal would, in effect, be an attempt on the part of the Legislature to delegate its power to the people at large and thereby to escape the duties and responsibilities which rest upon it by virtue of Article III, Section 1, of the Constitution, which vests the legislative power of the State in the Senate and Assembly. Ours is a representative Government. It was never intended that it should be converted into a pure democracy under which the people frame and enact their own laws or declare the policies of the State.

"Nor was it intended that the Senate and Assembly might evade the duties resting upon them, or shift their responsibility back to the people who deliberately imposed it. The Senators and Assemblymen are selected by the electors of their respective districts to represent them in the Legislature, there to take such action as shall be requisite and advisable. Although it is true that all legislative power is derived from the people, yet, when the people adopted their Constitution they surrendered the law-making power to the Legislature and imposed it upon that body as a duty. They did not reserve to themselves the power of ratifying by adopting laws or of declaring policies except in the three instances to which reference has been made."

Mr. Marshall gave it as his opinion that, if the referendum were held at a special election, it could be enjoined by a taxpayer's action as an unjustifiable expense. "If an extra-constitutional referendum is permissible, there is no limit to which this practice may be extended," he said. "Should it come into vogue, the electorate of New York might be permitted tomorrow to vote with regard to our participation in the World Court or the League of Nations or with respect to the acceptance or rejection of a treaty or the settlement of the debts owing by foreign nations to the United States.

"On the next day the people might be called upon to express their views as to the scope or soundness of decisions rendered by the Court of Appeals of our State or the Supreme Court of the United States on constitutional questions. This is not idle speculation. The subject of the recall of decisions was at one time extremely mooted. It might again for a time be regarded as a political panacea."

BUCKNER DRY STAND ASSAILED BY POLAND

Anti-Saloon League Counsel Charges Ambition to Become Governor Influences Him.

ATTACKS WADSWORTH ALSO

Says He and Smith Have Good Working Agreement—Dr. H. B. Fisher Comes to Buckner's Defense.

Asserting that United States District Attorney Emory R. Buckner was attempting to scare advocates of prohibition enforcement by "specious" arguments and excessive estimates of its cost, Orville S. Poland, counsel of the New York State Anti-Saloon League, declared last night that the explanation for Mr. Buckner's attitude was to be found in his "ambition" to become the Republican nominee for Governor with "wet" support. Mr. Buckner testified before a Senate committee in Washington last week that it would cost $75,000,000 a year to enforce the prohibition law properly in New York State and pictured the difficulties of law enforcement in this city and vicinity under present conditions.

Mr. Poland's charge that Mr. Buckner's position on prohibition enforcement was influenced by political ambition was made at the annual meeting of the Anti-Saloon League and the Methodist Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals in the Eighteenth Street Methodist Episcopal Church. The meeting was under the auspices of the Methodist Conference, which is having a session in this city.

Comes to Buckner's Defense.

The Rev. Dr. Harry B. Fisher, metropolitan secretary of the New York Civic League, who has cooperated with Mr. Buckner's office in bringing about the padlocking of more than 200 night clubs and other liquor selling resorts since Sept. 1 last, came to Mr. Buckner's defense. He told those at the meeting that, if they knew the truth about the enforcement work done by Mr. Buckner, they would not "stand on the banks of the stream and throw stones at the man who was trying to paddle the enforcement canoe against the current."

Mr. Poland was not present when Dr. Fisher defended Mr. Buckner, having left the church immediately after his speech. Mr. Poland also attacked United States Senator James W. Wadsworth, Jr., and declared he had been informed by politicians that Senator Wadsworth and Governor Smith had "a good working agreement." He added that he had been informed also that Senator Wad

MORE SPACE BADLY NEEDED

Rare Works Now In Storage Can Be Exhibited in New Structure—Style Is Modified Italian Gothic.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, April 11.—A gift of $1,000,000 to Yale University for an art museum has been made by two anonymous donors, according to an announcement by the university today.

The new building will stand at the corner of High and Chapel Streets, opposite the present Art School on High Street. On Chapel Street it will extend approximately half way up the block; on High Street it will run from the corner to the property of the Russell Trust Association.

Designs for the building have been prepared by Egerton Swartwout, '91, of New York City. The museum will be of stone, in a modified Italian Gothic style harmonizing with the other Yale buildings in the vicinity.

By the erection of the museum the university will complete a substantial portion of a comprehensive system of art galleries, plans for which have been maturing for some time under the leadership of the Associates in Fine Arts at Yale, an organization formed last year to stimulate interest in the Yale collections, and the School of the Fine Arts.

Professor Everett V. Meeks, Dean of the school, said today:

"Both the university and the city are to be congratulated on a development which will materially improve the appearance of New Haven and the Yale properties. Mr. Swartwout has properly felt that the commanding site requires dignified monumental treatment. In addition, both public and students will now have access for the first time to all the great Yale collections."

Gets Valuable Collections.

For many years, the university announcement stated, the collections have been unsatisfactorily housed in the old Art School Building, erected in 1864. They have grown remarkably in recent years, so that much rare material has had to be kept in storage. The university has been put to great expense to make the old galleries fire and burglar proof, but these efforts have merely relieved somewhat a situation which would otherwise have been intolerable.

Yale owns the Jarves collection, the finest group of Italian primitives in America, and the Trumbull collection, one of the best collections of early American canvases in the world. These will now be exhibited for the first time under proper conditions.

The university has recently received from Maitland F. Griggs, '96, of New York City five extraordinary examples of medieval French sculpture, and from Frederic G. Archelis, '07, of New York City the rare and valuable collection of Rembrandt and Dürer prints assembled by his father. These will be accommodated in the new museum.

The building will also provide muchneeded additional quarters for the work of the School of the Fine Arts. Weir Hall, devoted to the department of architecture, is already filled. The 133 students in painting and sculpture are working under great handicaps because of the restricted quarters provided in the old building.

Will Have Public Lecture Hall.

The students in sculpture work in the basement. Galleries have been converted into studios for the painters, so that exhibition of many of the best pictures is impossible.

When the new building is opened Yale will be able to make its art treasures available to the public, as it has its scientific collections in the Peabody Museum, which has been visited by 70,000 people since it opened on Jan. 1, 1926.

Since the old Art School contains no recitation rooms, the art lectures and classes have been held in buildings intended for the use of other branches of the university. In the museum will be workrooms for a large number of students and classrooms meeting all the needs of the school, as well as a hall for general and public lectures.

The main floor on the Chapel Street side will contain an exhibition gallery for sculpture 113 feet long, and behind this another room which can be used for lecture and exhibition purposes. On the High Street frontage will be the school's administration offices. A classroom accommodating 150 will be on the north side toward the Russell Trust Association property. The mezzanine floor will be devoted to five classrooms, each having from 150 to 75 seats.

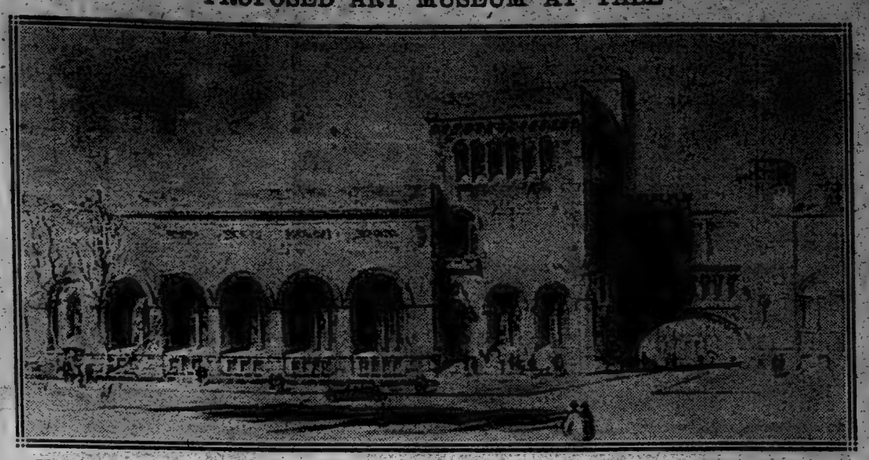
Arch to Old Building Planned.

The Jarves collection will occupy the High Street side of the second floor. The Trumbull and early American collection will be housed in a large gallery in the centre of the Chapel Street wing. This will be surrounded by smaller rooms in which the Belgian collection, prints and loan collections will be exhibited. Several large studios on the third floor will provide working space for members of the Faculty and advanced students.

The university has filed a petition with the New Haven Board of Aldermen asking permission to connect the new gallery with the old Art School by an arch across High Street. There has also been begun, with the approval of the city authorities, a suit seeking a declaratory judgment defining the powers of the city and the university in this matter.

By stipulation of counsel for the city and the university this suit has been reserved for the advice of the Supreme Court of Errors. Should the city and the court act favorably and the arch be erected, it would allow a clearance at the centre of the street of seventeen feet, and at the sidewalks fifteen feet. University officials said today that such an arch would not interfere with traffic, but would add greatly to the beauty of the city.

PROPOSED ART MUSEUM AT YALE



The sketch above shows the projected building for which the university has received $1,000,000 from two anonymous donors. It is proposed to connect the new building with the old one, shown on the right by means of an arch over the street.

BANKS HERE SEND $80,000,000 TO CUBA

PICKPOCKETS ROB CROWDS

HAVANA, April 11 (AP).—Currency to the amount of $80,000,000 is being brought to Cuba by American and Canadian banks to meet the demand of their depositors for payment of deposits, which reached its crest yesterday when the Royal Bank of Canada was besieged by thousands of small depositors.

An official treasury announcement today said $35,000,000 would arrive here tonight on board the cruiser Cuba for the Federal Reserve Bank branch, and $45,000,000 more by Tuesday morning. Government funds deposited in the Royal Bank of Canada and the National City Bank of New York were transitory, the statement added, and with the arrival of the two shipments the banks would be, in point of actual monetary reserve available, the strongest in the world.

A special train left Havana early this morning for cities east of Havana with $13,000,000 in currency for the Royal Bank of Canada branches in the Republic. The run extended throughout the island, with the Royal Bank of Canada the chief sufferer. Cuban banks reported no unusual activity.

Government Reassures Depositors.

Reassuring statements by President Machado, Secretary of the Treasury Carvaya and other Government officials have been published. The Federation of Economic Societies, which includes chambers of Commerce and other business organizations, published a manifesto to the public asserting there was no danger of a banking crisis. The Secretary of the Treasury declared there was no reason for the run and that all banks operating in the Republic were sound financially and the situation was caused by false rumors.

As soon as the banks opened their doors yesterday police began receiving reports of activities of pickpockets in the crowds besieging the doors of the institutions. Losses as high as $10,000 were reported.

One old woman, feeble and infirm, had stood in line for several hours with her savings book clutched in her hands, with fear plainly showing on her wrinkled face, haggard from lack of sleep. She drew $5,000, her lifetime savings, and the only bulwark against poverty. As she tremblingly made her way through the crowds, her face was joyful. Two blocks from the bank she shrieked and sank to the pavement. A pickpocket had stolen her money. She told police she was penniless.

Ships Currency to Reserve Bank.

ATLANTA, Ga., April 11 (AP).—The $27,000,000 shipped from the Sixth District Federal Reserve Bank here to the branch Federal Reserve Bank at Havana, Cuba, to stem runs on island banks, late today was at Key West awaiting transportation to Havana, M. B. Wellborn, Governor of the Atlanta bank said. An additional $10,000,000 was en route to Havana from the New Orleans Federal Reserve Bank, Mr. Wellborn said.

Within the past three days, the Atlanta bank and the bank at Jacksonville, Fla., have dispatched $18,000,000 additional to the Havana bank, which, he said, already has arrived in the Cuban capital. The amount shipped from Jacksonville, Mr. Wellborn did not recall, but knew that the amounts sent in the two shipments from Atlanta, one from New Orleans and one from Jacksonville, totaled $50,000,000.

The two Atlanta shipments and the Jacksonville shipment, he said, went via Key West, while the New Orleans shipment went by direct ship from that port.

Mr. Wellborn expressed regret that news of the shipment of the money leaked out before it reached its destination, fearing possible embarrassment. Special guards were employed at Key West to care for the money there.

AETNA TO REORGANIZE SUBSIDIARY CONCERN

Gets Approval to Increase Stock of Auto Insurance Company to $5,000,000.

Special to The New York Times.

HARTFORD, Conn., April 11.—Formal approval was announced today by State Insurance Commissioner H. P. Dunham of the Aetna Life Insurance Company plan for reorganizing and rehabilitating its subsidiary, the Automobile Insurance Company of Hartford. The Automobile company's stock recently dropped from 300 to 200, and its manager, Charles H. Remington, who was Vice President of the Affiliated Aetna Companies, resigned after a session with President Morgan B. Brainard.

Following Commissioner's Dunham approval, the Aetna Life tonight is mailing notices to stockholders of the Automobile Insurance Company recommending an increase in capital stock from $4,000,000 to $5,000,000 by issuing 10,000 shares at $1,200 a share at a special meeting next Friday. The Aetna Life, which owns three-fourths of the automobile stock, will pay its part by means of a recent issue of 50,000 shares of Aetna Life at $200 a share.

It is understood that 50 per cent. of the subscription price, amounting to $6,000,000, will be paid in to the Automobile Insurance Company on April 20, and the balance in equal instalments on July 15, Sept. 15, Nov. 15 and Dec. 15. This new financing will give the company a capital of $5,000,000 and a present surplus of about $6,000,000.

The Insurance Commissioner said:

"The financial structure of the Automobile Insurance Company has proved to be inadequate to carry the business placed on its books. The management erred, through eagerness to get new business, and failed to provide adequate financial safeguards. To protect the interests of its policy holders the Insurance Commissioner demanded that additional funds should be made available immediately. The question of personal honesty never entered into the situation. Everything now centres around a reformed business management.

"The principal stockholder of the Automobile Insurance Company is the Aetna Life Insurance Company, and this company agreed to furnish the financial help necessary and at once took steps to put itself in a position to do this. Naturally, this situation has been one of great public interest. The money to reconstruct the finances of the Automobile Insurance Company was made available.

"Connecticut men skilled in insurance underwriting and with long careers of successful management behind them have given their counsel, and the Insurance Department feels that the situation has been handled in a way to protect the interests of the policy holders. The Insurance Department has endeavored in its supervisory capacity to be of assistance in these constructive plans and believes an honest and conscientious effort has been made properly to rehabilitate the company.

"Connecticut is unique in being the home of such large insurance interests, and they have never failed to make every endeavor to meet the obligation of their contracts. The Aetna Life Insurance Company and its stockholders have stood back of the automobile insurance company, just as every one expected they would."

HOT FIGHT AHEAD ON REAPPORTIONING

Introduction of Bill at Albany Tomorrow Will Be Signal for Hostilities.

TAMMANY VITALLY AFFECTED

Proposed New District Lines in Greater New York Would Weaken Its Power.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 11.—For the closing weeks of the legislative session, which will probably end on April 23, has been reserved its most spectacular fight. The introduction of the Reapportionment bill, which probably will occur on Tuesday, will be the signal for hostilities to begin.

For many weeks Committees on Reapportionment of the Senate and Assembly have been at work carving out new Senate districts, based on last year's census, and apportioning the number of Assembly districts to be allotted to each county, also with the 1925 census as a basis. It is expected that the measure will be in final form when the law-makers return here tomorrow evening to resume their labors, so that it can be submitted to the two committees for final approval. This formality over with, the measure will be presented in the two houses, it is expected, some time on Tuesday.

While the fight may be expected to rage bitterly on party lines, it probably will serve no real purpose as far as the dominant Republican majority in the Legislature is concerned. It is regarded as certain that the bill is foredoomed to defeat at the hands of Governor Smith in the exercise of his veto power. Should this prediction prove true, Senators and Assemblymen will continue to be elected this Fall from districts which have been in existence since the last reapportionment, which was made in 1916.

Would Cut Tammany Power.

Between the lines of the Reapportionment bill, which will go in this week, can be read the death sentence of Tammany Hall as the dominant Democratic Party organization within the City of New York, according to political observers here. The sceptre would pass to the Democratic organization in Kings, which, under its present leadership, is not regarded as on anythink like a friendly footing with Tammany since the recent city election. It is declared that Tammany would be compelled to make alliances outside Manhattan, with the organizations in the Bronx and Richmond, presumably, to maintain a semblance of the Democratic status quo within the Greater City.

Representation on the State committee and in State conventions, entirely aside from representation in the Legislature, would be seriously affected by the proposed new reapportionment. In the State committee it would mean a loss of four seats and in State conventions a loss of strength in proportion.

The representation in the State committee is based on the Assembly District as a unit, and Manhattan is due to lose four Assembly Districts owing to a shrinkage in population as revealed by the census of last year, chiefly in the Tammany strongholds below Fourteenth Street. The First Assembly District, in which Governor Smith grew up politically, and in which until very recently he voted, probably would go by the board despite anything the Manhattan Aldermen, Democratic almost to a man, could do in carving out the new district lines, which will be their function. The Republican Legislature will fix the number of Assembly Districts within each borough.

Republicans Also Would Lose.

Samuel S. Koenig's Republican organization in Manhattan will suffer a similar loss in representation on the Republican State Committee and in potential representation in the Assembly and the Senate. But the loss will not mean as much to the Republicans where the Legislature is concerned. In fact, it may prove helpful to some extent. The Republican constituencies are, for the most part, in the upper residential sections of Manhattan, where the loss of population has not been pronounced, and, in a general way, with the Borough of Manhattan as heavily Democratic as it is, the Republicans have less to lose than have the Democrats through the proposed change in the number of districts.

Manhattan stands to lose two seats in the Senate, of which one will go to Brooklyn and one to Queens through the new reapportionment. Brooklyn probably will gain one Assembly seat, Queens three and the Bronx two, so that the City of New York will profit to the extent of two additional seats in the lower house.

Of counties outside of New York City only one—Nassau—stands to gain additional represenation in the Assembly. Nassau now has two Assembly district, but will have three if the reapportionment committees accept the report of the sub-committees. To make up for the gains in New York City and Nassau three counties up-State—rock-ribbed Republican St. Lawrence in the north, Steuben in the southern tier and Duchess on the eastern margin of the Hudson—each stands to lose one of its two Assembly districts. Under the Constitution the number of Assemblymen is limited to 150.

The final plan of the two sub-committees calls for a Senate composed of fifty-two instead of fifty-one members. The additional seat would be allotted to Suffolk County, which would be known as the First Senate District. Nassau would be a separate Senate District also—the Second. The Third, Fourth and Fifth Senate Districts would be in Queens.

Nassau and Suffolk at present constitute one Senate district, represented by Senator George L. Thompson, who, if he desires to continue in the Senate, being a resident of Suffolk, undoubtedly could be elected from the new first, should the reapportionment go through. Nassau in citizen population is above 193,000, the quota for a Senator. Under the circumstances Nassau could not be denied a Senator of its own.

When Suffolk was reached the men carving out the districts found themselves in serious difficulties. Suffolk is some 60,000 below the quota figure. But, located as it is, at the eastern tip of Long Island, there was no contiguous territory, except Nassau, with which it could be hooked up. A county cannot be divided and a part combined with a part or the whole of another county in making a Senate district under the terms of the State Constitution. So there was nothing to do but to give Suffolk a Senator of its own, especially as it was a growing county and had the largest population of any county not having a full quota.

There will be virtually no changes in Senate district lines north and west of Oneida to upset the political status quo. In the immediate vicinity some changes were found necessary, and these will affect, among others, Montgomery County, the home of George K. Morris, Chairman of the Republican State Committee. The Thirty-fifth Senate District, represented by Senator Jeremiah Keck of Fulton County, and the Thirty-ninth, represented by Willis Wendell of Montgomery, would be most immediately affected. Senator Keck and Senator Wendell, if the new reapportionment went into effect, would find themselves thrown together in the same Senate district. But neither wants to be returned to the Senate. Senator Keck is getting along in years, and Senator Wendell has been very ill and wants to retire from political life.

EXPECT SENATE TO PASS REFERENDUM TONIGHT

Wets Also Predict Adoption by Assembly Later and Defeat of Jenks Bill.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 11.—Passage of the Karle-Phelps resolution providing for a referendum at the Fall election as to whether Congress shall be asked to allow the State to modify the Volstead act is scheduled for adoption in the Senate tomorrow night.

Advocates of the resolution say it will go through the upper House with several votes to spare. At least seven if not ten Republican Senators are expected to vote in the affirmative with the twenty-two Democrats. The fight against the proposal will be led by Senator Knight, Republican leader, but he is expected to make it plain to the members that he is speaking personally and not for his party.

The State Enforcement bill, sponsored by Assemblyman Jenks, will be on the calendar of the Assembly for final action tomorrow night, but if present plans are carried out a final vote will be deferred until Tuesday. The calendar in the House will contain about 120 bills, and with a battle over prohibition the session might easily last till daybreak.

Foes of the enforcement proposal were more than confident today that the Jenks bill would go down to defeat. They maintain that the drys will not be able to muster more than sixty-nine votes, whereas seventy-six votes are needed for passage.

After the enforcement has been defeated on Tuesday the wets will proceed, if present plans are carried out, to pass the Karle Phelps referendum resolution.

If there should be delay by the Assembly Rules Committee in reporting the Karle-Phelps resolution, after it has been sent over from the Senate, Assemblyman Bloch, the Democratic leader, will move to discharge the committee. His first motion will not be on the Carle-Phelps resolution, however, but on an identical one sponsored by Assemblyman Cuvillier.

There is a feeling, however, that the Rules Committee will report the Karle-Phelps proposal once it has been adopted in the Senate.

Those who are backing the Karle-Phelps proposal insisted today that they would have six or eight more votes in the Assembly than they will need to have the proposal adopted. Seventy-six would be enough to pass it.

Early this week the Senate is expected to pass the Republican resolution proposing an amendment to the Constitution to provide a four-year term for Governor and other elective State officials, a four-year term for Senators and a two-year term for members of the Assembly. Under the proposal the first election would take place in 1928 and every year thereafter when a President is being elected.

The Downing-Bloch resolution providing a constitutional amendment to permit the Legislature to raise the salary of Governor to not less than $25,000 a year is scheduled for early passage in both houses.

The week will see the passage of a dozen bills designed to curb crime.

had used the ritual of "the full Methodist hymn book," and had received 75 cents. A check for $75 was reported to have been sent to him later, but Mr. Christian would not talk about that.

"I was well paid for keeping my mouth shut," he finally revealed, "and I intend to keep on keeping my mouth shut."

He then admitted, in a burst of communicativeness, that the night before the wedding the guests had toured Putnam County roadhouses in a prenuptial celebration. Mr. Browning is very fond of dancing. Mr. Christian said that he had had an offer from a newspaper for the story of the dancing party, and was considering it.

After the wedding, the party climbed back into the automobiles and drove to the Heenan dwelling in Paulding Avenue, Clear Springs, a hamlet of 1,500 people near this village. The two-story house of fifteen rooms was leased last Thursday by the bride's mother from James Vincent Ball for $1,500 a year. Mrs. Heenan paid the rental in full and in cash. The house is owned by Mrs. James Boyd, widow of a druggist in business here for many years. It stands in grounds of approximately two acres.

Went to Bronxville Hotel.

After a reception at the Heenan home the bride and bridegroom motored over to the Gramatan Inn in Bronxville, being accompanied only by the Browning chaffeur. They were met at the hotel by Mr. Dale, who had reserved a suite for them on the third floor. The suite consisted of dining room, bedroom and parlor. They reached the Gramatan at 9 P. M. A few of the guests in the lobby recognized Browning. After breakfast in the suite this morning Mr. and Mrs. Browning checked out and returned to the Heenan home.

Mrs. Heenan, who had remained in the Paulding Avenue house alone, had her rest much disturbed by a group of young persons who were unaware of the flight of the broker and his bride. The young folks who were at a week-end party at a house near by paraded over to the front of the Heenan home and serenaded heartily. Mrs. Heenan was astir early, however, to welcome back her daughter and her new son-in-law.

Shortly after the Brownings returned a group of children began to haunt the front of the house. They grew a bit noisy and Mrs. Heenan made a momentary appearance on the porch.

"Please be quiet," she shouted to the children, and when the noise continued unabated Constable Lowry appeared. It was explained that Mr. Browning had telephoned to Mr. Dale, who had summoned the Police Department. Later two Deputy Sheriffs joined the guard.

Those who lingered in front of the Heenan home saw a perfect vista of shaded windows and blank porch. Once the bride peered through a window. Then it was noticed that her throat was still bandaged. In her story to the police in New York City she declared that acid had been poured on her chin and throat as she slept in her mother's apartment at Iris Gardens, 625 West 169th Street. At the wedding yesterday a silken scarf concealed the bandages.

At 4 o'clock the machine of Mr. Dale rolled up to the door. Mrs. Dale was driving. Browning and his own chauffeur came out.

The party whirled down to the Town Hall, where the band concert was scheduled. The children's musical efforts are a hobby of Mr. Dale's, his son, Thomas, a cornet player, being one of the eight boys in the band. "America" opened the concert. At its close Mr. Dale bowed to Browning, who was seated at the rear of the hall, and the broker went up to the platform.

"I came here with considerable trouble," said Browning, "to show my interest in your orchestra. I have always been interested in the welfare of young people and in anything which contributes to their happiness.

"There is nothing which does more to this end than good music. I want to express my appreciation of your excellent program here this afternoon."

He Passes Out Bouquets.

He then beckoned to his chauffeur, who moved forward bearing a huge box of flowers. Browning, who appeared to be enjoying himself keenly, lifted the cover and passed out the bouquets to the girls. Mr. Dale thanked Browning for his interest and one of the musicians slipped a white carnation in the attorney's lapel.

As Browning left the hall he was approached by reporters. He was clipping the end off a cigar. He beamed amiably upon the group.

"How do you do?" he greeted them.

"Are you going to Europe?"

"I'm not discussing that," he said, still smiling.

"What are your plans?"

"I'm not discussing that," he replied, and the smile lingered but a trifle less brightly.

"Don't you think" hazarded a questioner, "that the difference in age—"

The smile fled. Mr. Browning bit the end off the cigar. He thrust it into the corner of his mouth and silently drove away. Subsequently a friend admitted the European plans and added that he would urge an immediate departure upon the broker as a quick way out of publicity.

About 10 o'clock tonight Mr. Heenan, Browning's new father-in-law, arrived by motor from his home on Long Island. It took Heenan more than twenty minutes to convince the man on guard that he should be allowed to enter.

Not long after Heenan's arrival five men arrived in another automobile. One of them was Leo Gates, manager of boxers. The men went inside for a time and later four of them took up posts around the house. When Heenan came outside about an hour later he was asked about the presence of the four men.

"Mrs. Heenan is nervous and I guess it's all right for Mr. Browning to hire four pugilists to act as a guard, isn't it?" he said.

TREASURY TO REDUCE THIRD LIBERTY LOAN

It Is Under Mandate to Retire or Refund Entire Issue by Sept. 15, 1928.

$2,570,000,000 OUTSTANDING

This Amount It Is Hoped to Cut to $2,000,000,000 by Purchases Before July 1, 1928.

OPERATION HAS SNARLS

Final Decision on the Program Waits Because of the Many Factors in Problem.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 11.—The Treasury Department is shaping its policies for the retirement or refunding of the public debt with the object always in view of reducing, as rapidly as possible, the total of outstanding Third Liberty Loan 4¼ per cent. bonds, which mature Sept. 15, 1928.

This task has been made somewhat more difficult by the fact that when the bonds were issued in May, 1918, no provision was made under which any part of the issue might be called in for purchase at par by the Government before the date of maturity, and the law provides that the Treasury shall not pay more than par for any bonds or other securities which it purchases for retirement, either from the holders themselves, or in the open market.

In its refunding and retirement operations, the Treasury also must take into consideration all of its other obligations in determining how much may be used out of the public funds to whittle down any individual issue.

The task of reducing the amount of outstanding Third Liberty Loan bonds to a total which will be more easily managable when it is mandatory upon the Government to make final payment has been considered one of the most important matters confronting the Treasury, because of the large total involved. Congress, in May, 1918, gave the Treasury authority to sell about $8,000,000,000 of these bonds at an interest rate of 4¼ per cent., and the total sales were $4,175,650,050. This latter figure has since been reduced either by purchases for retirement or by exchanges, until the total outstanding early this month had been brought down to just about $2,570,000.

That is the amount which the Treasury Department must retire by purchases, or refund by voluntary exchanges, before Sept. 15, 1928. It is the hope of the department to cut down the total by purchases out of the sinking fund, to slightly less than $2,000,000,000 by June 30, 1928, the end of the fiscal year 1927-28, even though no refunding exchanges are offered before that time.

It is entirely possible, however, that in addition to the gradual whittling down process by purchases out of sinking fund moneys, new issues in exchange for Third Liberties may be offered in the Spring of 1928, or even before that time. Decision as to this will be guided by conditions in the money market and by the financing needs to handle other notes, certificates or bonds which mature in the meantime or are callable before then.

The money set aside in the sinking fund for debt retirement during the fiscal years 1926-27 and 1927-28, which intervene before the Third Liberties mature, will amount to about $700,000,000, and if other factors indicate that such is the wisest course, and the Treasury can make purchases at a price which will not be construed as a violation of the edict that Government securities shall not be purchased at more than par, most of this sum probably will be used in the retirement of the Third Liberty bonds.

Bonds Now At a Premium.

This program would seem to be complicated by the fact that the Third Liberty bonds are now quoted in the open market at $101.10 for each $100 value of bond.

To a certain extent this handicap is overcome by the fact that the law, in stating that the Government shall not pay more than par in purchasing bonds for retirement, has been construed to mean that no more than par shall be paid for all bonds purchased for retirement when an average is struck, although more than par may be paid for some of the purchases and less than par for others.

In the purchases so far made by the Treasury for retirement some were accomplished when the Thirds were selling below par, and some, as in the last purchase of about $125,000,000 made direct from holders of the bonds, at more than the par figure. At present the operations of the kind have left the Government with a favorable margin of about $4,000,000.

Thus if the Government were to make purchases at today's quoted price of about $101.10, it could purchase slightly less than $400,000,000 of the bonds and still remain within the meaning of the law.

Treasury Sees No Cause for Concern.

Any purchases the Government may make out of the sinking fund moneys will be spread gradually over the rest of this fiscal year and the two following fiscal years, and this should favor the Treasury, as it is the tendency of bonds of all classes to decline to more nearly approach the par value in the open market, as the date of maturity, when holders will receive only par, approaches.

With the probability that the outstanding third Liberties will be reduced to slightly less than $2,000,000,000 by the Spring of 1928, the Treasury Department believes there is no cause for concern.

Several factors contribute to this conviction, among them that the nation is enjoying a high level of prosperity, with revenues far exceeding estimates, and that the other items in the public debt are so arranged as to callable dates and maturities as to be readily handled, at least until several years after the Third Liberties mature. None of the other Liberty bond issues matures until ten years after the thirds, although some are callable before that time, and none of the long-term Treasury refunding bonds is callable until 1944.

Third Liberty Loan—$2,573,563,450; maturity, 1928.

Thus a considerable gap is left between the maturity of the Third Liberties in 1928 and the maturity of any of the other long-term bonds, during which, as of today, the Treasury does not face any heavy burden to be met. This provides the opportunity, if the Treasury sees fit to pursue such a course, to offer bonds in exchange for the Third Liberties, to be so placed that they would mature in the intervals specified.

There has been no definite program adopted as yet because of the many factors involved. The second Liberty bond issue is callable after Nov. 15, 1927, and it is possible that the Treasury might make a more profitable deal for the Government by refunding some of this issue, with the call date or maturity placed between the maturity of the third Liberties and the call date or maturity of the other Liberty bond issues. In such an event the maturity of exchanges offered for the third Liberty bonds might be extended, possibly beyond either the call date or maturity of any of the treasury refunding issues now outstanding.

Whatever course is followed in dealing with these problems, the Treasury does not feel that a maturity of about $2,570,000,000 of bonds on Sept. 15, 1928, presents a very serious problem in view of the proved capacity of the Government to handle large operations without embarrassment, particularly as the total probably would be reduced to less than $2,000,000,000 before the maturity, and money conditions also may make possible refunding issues on a favorable interest basis in the meantime.

The short-term debt of the Government has been carefully arranged as to maturity dates so that the obligations fall due on quarterly tax payment dates, and these can be handled, therefore, without serious trouble in addition to the other operations necessary to refunding or retiring long-term bonds. There fall due in June, 1926, $333,723,000 of Treasury certificates—in September $414,922,300 of notes and in December $452,879,000 of notes.

In 1927 there will be due an issue of $668,200,000 of short-term notes and in December an issue of $355,779,900 of notes, and there are no short-term issues after that date. These probably will be handled chiefly by other short-term borrowings and amounts from current revenues available for that purpose.

WANTS TO BE A COWBOY.

Headed for the wide open spaces, the land of the roving maverick, the hard riders and the straight shooters, Emmett Walch, 15 years old, of Churchill, Conn., got off a railroad train at the 125th Street Station yesterday for a stop-over in New York. Special Officer Dowling thought the lad looked more like a runaway than a prospective vaquero and took him to the East 126th Street Police Station.

Lieutenant Kelly questioned the boy, who said that while things at home were going well, the desire to be a cowboy on the Western plains and ride hard and fight cattle theives had been too great to resist and that after drawing $84 from a savings bank he had started for the land of his heart's desire.

"Why, lad, don't you know there are no more cowboys?" said Lieutenant Kelly, "the men on the ranches in the West are just like the farm hands in Connecticut."

About 600 members of the Friars' Club joined in a testimonial dinner at the clubhouse last night to Arthur (Bugs) Baer, humorist and vaudeville performer. Mayor Walker, a member of the club, was the principal speaker. Others were Walter C. Kelly, George Jessel, Jack Lait, Walter Hoban and William Collier, who acted as master of ceremonies.

Mr. Baer was escorted to the middle of the speakers' table by two uniformed patrolmen. A squirrel was suspended in a cage over his head. It romped about in a lively manner until the speaking started, when it went to sleep.

Mayor Walker thanked Mr. Baer for "ignoring me in my recent campaign."

RAISED DISCOUNTS TO CHECK LOANS

Federal Reserve Reports Show Higher Rate, Due in Part to Speculation.

WARNING FOR FUTURE SEEN

WASHINGTON, April 11.—The part that the Federal Reserve System played in the bull market during the last months of 1925 and early this year on the New York Stock Exchange, preceding the recent collapse in security values, was described in detail in the annual report of the Federal Reserve Board, made public today.

The policy outlined in the report was generally accepted here as a warning to those who engage in major speculative operations that future policies will be so shaped as to discourage, through the control exercised by the Reserve Banks and the Reserve Board over discount rates and credits extended to member banks, any tendency toward operations in the stock market which threaten the orderly development of business.

The bull market was worrying some observers in Government circles in the Autumn of 1925, because of the high point to which many securities had been advanced by speculators, and the report makes it plain that the advance made in the discount rate from 3½ to 4 per cent. by certain of the Reserve banks outside of New York last November and in New York in January were, in part at least, the result of the fact that member banks were in some instances seeking credit at the Reserve banks, which were piling up too rapidly the total of loans on stock market securities.

Reason for Delay in New York.

Decision to increase the rate of the New York Reserve Bank to the 4 per cent. level was, the report says, withheld until Jan. 8 because there had been no speculation in the commodity markets, despite the upward climb in security values, a somewhat unusual occurrence, and it was not desired to make credit more costly to commercial users or attract gold to this country, thus unbalancing the international situation simply because security loans had reached unusual proportions.

The bull market continued during December despite the discount rate increases outside the New York district, with loans on securities continuing in great volume. Early in January, "after the passing of the seasonal credit demands and of the period of the year when gold tends to flow to the United States," the New York Reserve Bank advanced its rediscount rate to 4 per cent., putting it in line with the other Reserve banks.

At about this time the policy of requesting member banks to report the volume of loans they had extended on securities was established. The purpose was to give full publicity to the total of such loans and to aid the Reserve banks in determining the use which member banks made of credits extended to them on collateral which did not reveal that information.

Purpose of Reserve Credit.

The report states that member banks generally recognize that the purpose of borrowing at the reserve bank is to meet temporary and seasonal needs of their customers in excess of the member banks' own resources and that borrowing from the reserve bank to enlarge operations of member banks is not considered proper.

"In general," the report continues, "it is not possible to determine to what use a member bank puts the credit obtained from the reserve bank. Member banks generally borrow to make up deficiencies in their reserve balances incurred as the net result of all their operations, and it is seldom possible to trace the conection between borrowings of a member bank at the reserve bank and the specific transactions that gave rise to the necessity for borrowing.

"In the infrequent instances where there has been evidence that member banks have borrowed at the reserve banks and at the same time have been increasing their loans on securities the officers of the reserve banks have pointed out to them that it was possible for them to adjust their reserve position through changes in their short-time loan accounts rather than by recourse to the reserve banks.

"While the uses to which individual banks put the credit obtained from the reserve banks are almost impossible of determination the Federal Reserve System is in a position to observe changes in the total volume of reserve bank credit and of member bank credit, not only for the country as a whole but in each Federal Reserve district. It can furthermore note the general character of the growth in member bank loans and the elements in the demand for reserve bank credit.

Publication of Volume of Loans.

"Under circumstances such as prevailed in the Autumn of 1925, when the growth in member bank credit was largely in loans on securities, and when the growth in reserve bank credit was larger than the seasonal demand for currency, it was evident that a part of the member banks' borrowings at the reserve banks was for the purpose of building up their reserve balances. These balances did in fact increase considerably in the later months of the year.

"The increase in reserve requirements which occasioned the additional borrowing was in turn due in part to the growth in deposit liabilities arising from the increased volume of security loans. Considerations of this character were among the factors taken into account in November, 1925, when the series of discount rate advances discussed in an earlier paragraph of this report were put into effect.

"In view of the importance and the magnitude of the market for call and time loans on the New York Stock Exchange, and of the position this market occupies in the financial organization of the country, and particularly in the relation between member banks in New York City and their out-of-town correspondents, to the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, the board decided at the end of 1925 to extend its reporting system by undertaking to collect and publish current information on the volume of loans made by the weekly reporting member banks in New York to brokers and dealers in securities. These figures give the amount of loans made to brokers and dealers by the reporting banks on their own account, on account of out-of-town banks and on account of others."

Commercial Borrowers Protected.

"The publication of these figures, which will be given out currently as part of the weekly statement of condition of the reporting member banks will be useful in following movements in the money market and will put the lending banks, the brokers and the investing public in a better position to form a sound judgment of the credit situation. These reports will also furnish to the Reserve system fuller information concerning the relation between changes in loans made by member banks to finance security transactions and the borrowings by these banks at the Federal Reserve banks."

Dealing with the fact that the New York Reserve Bank failed to raise its discount rate to 4 per cent. until Jan. 8, 1926, although the other Reserve banks had gone to that level in November, the board has this to say:

"In the absence of evidence of a speculative attitude among the commercial users of credit, the Reserve system was unwilling, for the purpose of exercising a measure of restraint upon those who were borrowing in order to carry or deal in securities, to raise the discount rate at New York and thus exert its influence in the direction of a further increase in the cost of credit to commerce and industry at the time of the seasonal peak in the volume of commercial borrowing and in the demand for credit to finance the marketing and export of agricultural products.

"The New York money market, furthermore, is the point of contact with foreign central money markets, and changes in money rates in New York tend to influence the international movement of funds and of gold. In the Autumn months, when seasonal trade movements tend to bring about gold imports, there was a net movement of gold to the United States, and, in view of the influence which gold imports have upon the banking situation in this country, the desirability of not adding further to the gold inflow was a factor in the decision not to advance the discount rate at the New York bank in November."

Conservative Attitude of Business.

Stress laid in the report on the fact that, regardless of security speculation, there had been no increase in commodity rates, was accepted here as expressing a view that, because of lessons learned in the past by business men, the time when stock market operations could be taken as accurately forecasting business developments was passing.

"Looking back upon the business developments in 1925," the board stated, "perhaps the most notable fact has been the conservative attitude generally maintained by the business community at a time when the activity of business was large and the volume of trade increasing. Seldom in the history of American business has so large a growth in industrial activity occurred without giving rise to marked speculative tendencies. During the year there was a growth of speculative activity in the security market and in some localities in real estate, but there was no evidence of speculation in the commodity markets.

"A sustained demand for commodities on a scale equal to that of 1925 has tended at other times to result in the development of sellers' markets, a growth of forward orders, a rise of commodity prices and an accumulation of inventories. 1925 earnings of business concerns have, in general, been satisfactory, but profits have usually resulted from a larger volume of business rather than from a wider margin between costs and selling prices.

"Proof of the efficiency of present-day production and transportation and of the character of business sentiment is that in those lines of industry where the growth of activity has been most marked, as in building and in automobiles, prices of materials and of products have either remained constant or declined during the year. A factor of increasing importance in its influence upon the course of business has been the greater efforts of business concerns to adjust their programs of production to the current changes in the demand for their products.

"The broader factual basis furnished by current statistics has made it possible for business men to take into account not merely the conditions in their own particular industries but also the general trend of business.

"This development of business policies on the basis of the broader information now being made available by Governmental and other agencies carries with it a promise of narrowing the fluctuations in business activity. The number of unknown factors continues to be large and the changes from time to time in the mood and temper of the business community are such that industrial activity cannot be expected to pursue an entirely regular course, but to the extent that those engaged in various lines of industry undertake to adjust their own activities more closely to the general course of business the alternating periods of boom and depression will become less pronounced."

Credits Show Business Activity.

The great business and financial activity of 1925 is established by the fact that the Reserve bank credit outstanding increased by about $250,000,000 to the largest total since the close of 1921. This increase in demand, the report states, was due to about $135,000,000 export demand for gold, about $50,000,000 growth in deposits and about $65,000,000 increased demand on the Reserve banks for currency.

The large volume of business and financial activity also was reflected in the growth of member bank credit for loans and investments of member banks at the end of the year amounting to more than $31,000,000,000, a larger total than at any previous time. The increase for the year was about $2,173,000,000, nearly all of which represented loans by member banks on securities. The board emphasized the fact that these operations were carried on without serious credit strain, as a result of the existence of the Reserve system.

The report refers to the extension of a credit of $200,000,000 to the Bank of England to assist Great Britain in returning to the gold standard as an international development of first importance. It also is made known officially for the first time that none of this credit has yet been used by England.

DISSENTS FROM TRADE BODY

Humphrey Says Ostermoor Order Did Not Follow Complaint.

WASHINGTON, April 11 (AP).—An opinion dissenting from an order issued in February by the Federal Trade Commission directing Ostermoor & Co., cotton felt mattress manufacturers, of New York, to "cease and desist" from certain practices, was made public today by Commissioner William E. Humphrey.

The Commissioner declared the order did not follow the complaint, which alleged that the company had deceived the public by pictures showing the construction of their mattresses that misrepresented the resiliency of the completed product.

Mr. Humphrey contended that the pictures were to show that the mattress is "built, not stuffed," and to show the resiliency of the material used in construction and the thickness of the layers so used before completion. He declared the order is an attempt to compel exact truth in advertising.

CONCLUSIVE SUPERIORITY

IT isn't merely because the Chrysler Imperial "80" is new that it takes top position among today's fine cars. It is because of the difference, the sheer superiority, which are so obvious and so conclusive in every department of performance. The best of previous quality and skill never before brought to motoring the Chrysler "80" results, or the Chrysler "80" finesse. Sound all but completely disappears. Sense of propulsion likewise. Speed is a gentle merging of one pace into another—a gliding so smooth and steady that it is almost imperceptible until your eye lights on the speedometer reading. You'd never guess, from the feel of the engine, that 92 horse-power is the development of those mighty cylinders. And underlying and supporting all the rest, is the Chrysler quality which is the very essence of long life.

OBREGON OPPOSES ANY SECOND TERMS

MOVE SAID TO BE FORCED

General Is Reported to Have Learned His Return Would Start Big Revolution.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, April 11.—General Obregon has surprised the politicians again by a statement that he does not wish to be a candidate for the Presidency and by suggesting reforms of Article 83 of the Constitution in the sense that a President never shall be permitted to be re-elected. He suggests that Article 82 state that a candidate must never have occupied the Presidency and that Article 83 be made to read that the President-elect will assume office on December 1 and that when his term has expired never can he return to occupy the same post.

This move is one of the most curious incidents in the political history of Mexico. On his arrival in Mexico City General Obregon asserted that nothing in the Constitution could prevent his being President again; that he would be a soldier whenever he was needed and that the Conservative party was attacking him through paid agents.

These declarations caused the first surprise. His followers immediately started work on a campaign for Obregon to succeed General Calles as President. The Governors of the States of Tabasco and Michoacau immediately announced that they would back him. Members of Congress rushed into print to declare that Obregon was their next candidate. Everything looked lovely for the return of the ex-President, although the followers of President Calles showed anger. These charged that Obregon was not showing courtesy due to the present President when he made declarations which caused agitation in political circles and thus had a bad effect on business.

General Obregon's new attitude strongly suports a rumor that he and the Minister of Industry and Commerce, Luis Morones, have agreed through a signed compact to nominate General Pancho Serrano as candidate, Morones to throw the labor vote to Serrano in exchange for four Cabinet positions, namely the Departments of Industry and Commerce, Foreign Relations, Agriculture and Communications, and Obregon reserving the right to name the Ministers of the Treasury, Interior, Education and War.

The race for the Presidency will be between two members of the Federal army unless a new figure appears. General Arnulfo Gomez, commander of the troops in the State of Vera Cruz, will be the candidate of one part of the army and will count upon the sympathy of Mexicans who are opposed to radicalism. General Serrano will have in addition to the support of a part of the Federal army that of the full power of the Federation of Labor, which, in reality, has been formed for political purposes, the idea being to have a really disciplined political faction composed of workers and not merely a body of unions seeking to better labor conditions.

Obregon's suggestions made in a long article have aroused the anger of some politicians who argue that proposals for amending the Constitution should emanate from members of Congress and not from an outsider such as Obregon, who when he finished his term as President retired from the field.

General Obregon's change from his first position of candidate for another term is said to be due to the discovery that many Mexicans are not willing to have him return and that his attempt to do so would lead to a new revolt of such a character that it might furnish a pretext for intervention by the United States.

BALDWIN TO PUBLISH BOOK.

British Prime Minister Has Revised Non-Political Addresses.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 11.—Great interest attaches to a book by Prime Minister Baldwin which will be published toward the end of the month. It is entitled "On England, and Other Addresses."

The book is mainly non-political in character and entirely free from party propaganda. All the addresses it contains have been delivered during the past two years.

The papers have been slightly revised by the Prime Minister for publication in book form and arranged as a collection of essays under such subjects as "On Literature and the Arts," "On Education," "On Some Great Men" and other subjects.

In literature the Prime Minister discusses "The Classics" and Shakespeare, Byron and W. H. Hudson; while among other papers is one dealing with Anglo-American friendship.

SHOT BY A POLICEMAN.

One of Eight Alleged Gamblers Seized in Raid Wounded.

Joseph Termini, 24 years old, of 139 Miller Avenue, Brooklyn, was held in $5,000 bail yesterday for examination Tuesday on a charge of violating the Sullivan law when he and seven other men were arraigned in the New Jersey Avenue Court, in Brooklyn, following a raid on an alleged gambling game at 555 Liberty Avenue.

Termini was shot and slightly wounded in the left arm by Patrolman Edward Clark when, according to the policeman, he attempted to run away. Termini was attended at the Kings County Hospital and recovered sufficiently to appear in court. The police said that two pistols were found in the hallway of the Liberty Avenue address just after Termini ran out. The other seven prisoners were held in $500 bail each, also for examination Tuesday, on charges of disorderly conduct.

BOY IN ALCOHOLIC STUPOR.

Found on Car Barn Roof—Says Man Gave Drinks to Him.

Stephen Farrell, 10 years old, of 411 West Fifty-fourth Street, was found in an alcoholic stupor on the roof of a trolley car barn at Tenth Avenue and Fifty-fourth Street last night. He was taken to Bellevue Hospital and after being revived there told physicians that a strange man had given him several drinks and that a short time later he lost consciousness.

Several bones in the lad's right foot were fractured. He could not explain his injury nor could he remember how he had reached the roof of the car barn. Passers-by noticed him there and called policemen who mounted ladders and took him down.

LOS ANGELES IN AIR TODAY.

LAKEHURST, N. J., April 11 (AP).—The dirigible Los Angeles will be taken from its hangar to the mooring mast at the Naval Air Station tomorrow afternoon in preparation for a trial flight, Captain George W. Steele announced tonight.

The ship will be left at the mooring mast overnight, and if the test of controls is satisfactory will make a short flight near the station on Tuesday. The fourteen-hour test flight probably will be made on Wednesday.

The Los Angeles has not been out of its hangar since its inland flight of last August, preceding the Shenandoah disaster.

EMIGRES' CONGRESS ENDS IN FAILURE

Russians Who Met in Paris Are Unable to Agree on Anti-Bolshevist Campaign.

MONIED GROUPS SPOIL PLAN

Proposal to Form Directing Body Fails to Win Support of Two-thirds Majority.

PARIS, April 11 (AP).—Bolshevism is secure from the power of the old régime of Russia, the leaders of which assembled in Paris in the most momentous congress of emigrés ever staged. This has ended in failure to agree even on a formula for an offensive against the Reds.

The reluctance of Grand Duke Nicholas Nicholaievitch to attend any of the meetings, internal haggling in the congress itself over the decisions to be reached, and the fact that the monarchists devoted more time to disputing among themselves than in presenting a solid front against a common enemy appear to have spelled the doom of any organized or efficient attempt to overthrow the Russian Soviets from this quarter.

Figuratively the emigrés' congress blew up this afternoon as completely as if the Bolsheviki had thrown a bomb into it. The wreckage of the Right parties' hopes seemed inevitable after the Left sections of the congress, with the aid of the President, Professor Strouve, voted against the formation of a permanent committee to carry on an active struggle to drive the Bolsheviki out of Russia.

Conservative Leaders Chagrined.

The Right leaders, former Premier Trepoff, former Marshal Kroupensky, Count Michael Grabbe, former Headman of the Don Cossacks, and former Deputy Markoff, did not conceal their bitter disappointment over the failure of the congress by a margin of a few votes to ratify their proposal, which Grand Duke Nicholas supported, though insisting that either section of the emigrés has been strengthened by the stand made for speedy action.

Inability to form a committee means that the emigrés still lack a single directing force to coordinate their resources and energies, as well as active leadership necessary to carry out the struggl with the Soviets, despite their success in agreeing upon Nicholas as titular leader and elaborating a manifesto of political beliefs.

It was the Centre and Left groups, comprising the merchants, financiers and industrialists that spoiled the plan to form the committee that was intended to be the crowning achievement of the congress. The industrialists want to go slow; they feel they can afford to wait. The other parties are poor, and are eager to make the attempt in which they have everything to gain and nothing to lose. Out of 457 delegates, 297 voted for the committee, but the opposition mustered 146, and this, with 14 abstentions, prevented the necessary two-thirds majority.

The Radical Party, headed by Professor Miliukoff, former Foreign Minister; the Revolutionary Socialists, under Kerensky and Tchernoff, and the adherents of Grank Duke Cyril were among other emigrés who boycotted the congress from the beginning.

Manifesto to Russian People.

The Right leaders are consoled by the fact that the Congress at least agreed on a definite program, which will be smuggled into Russia in the form of a message to the nation.

The manifesto affirms that "the agents of the Third International, who now sit in the Kremlin, have ruined the Russian State and are exterminating the Russian nation," it adds:

"The enemy is trying to make you fear that abolition of the Communist yoke will bring re-establishment of the régime now ended forever. Do not believe it. We desire what the Russian people desire. We want all grievances and quarrels forgotten. We want every one who works to exist decently, every one to pray as he wants to pray. We want healthy family life. We want land to belong as private property to those cultivating it. We want just laws and impartial judges to guard all citizens in peace.

"When the manacles of tyranny are broken there will be established in the heart of Russia a regenerated Russian State. Communism will die, but Russia is eternal."

The Congress affirmed its romantic devotion to the fallen house of the Romanoffs by telegraphing to the Dowager Empress, Maria Feodorovna, at Copenhagen that the banished Russians, "under the lead of the supreme national chief, Grand Duke Nicholas, wish to manifest to your Majesty our faithful devotion and pray that you deign to accept the homage of our profound and unshakeable veneration. Our filial love for the sacred person of your Majesty will never cease."

A temporary committee will remain in Paris after most of the delegates leave tomorrow in order to wind up the financial affairs of the Congress, as well as to draw up a resolution addressed to the nations of the world. A special resolution unanimously adopted expresses the gratitude of the Congress to the United States Government for its refusal to recognize the Soviet States.

FALLS UNDER TRAIN, LIVES.

Man Only Slightly Hurt After Seven Cars Pass Over Him in Subway.

After a seven-car Seventh Avenue subway train had passed over him, Isadore Lipschitz, 30, of 426 West 145th Street, was picked up from the northbound track in the Fourteenth Street Station shortly before midnight last night, uninjured except for hurts incurred when he fell or jumped to the track before the incoming train. These necessitated his being taken in an ambulance to New York Hospital.

Persons on the platform told the police that Lipschitz, who had been standing alone at the extreme south end of the station, dived before the express. Evidently the motorman failed to see him, for the entire train passed over him and, after stopping a moment to discharge and take on passengers, sped on uptown.

The screaming of women on the platform, who saw Lipschitz lying in the well between the rails, attracted the attention of Patrolman Fallon of the Charles Street station, on post outside the station. He hurried into the subway and with the aid of several men passengers lifted Lipshitz to the platform. There the dazed man gave his name and address. Dr. Daly of New York Hospital found Lipschitz suffering from lacerations of the head. His skull may be fractured also.

PARIS ASKS MOORS TO PEACE PARLEY

French and Spanish Envoys Will Await Riffians at Oudjda Next Friday.

WAR PREPARATIONS GO ON

Foe Is Warned Offensive Will Not Be Delayed—Abd-el-Krim May Be Eliminated.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, April 11.—Official notice was forwarded to the Riffian chieftains today that the French and Spanish Peace Commission will be at Oudjda on April 16 to communicate to them the terms France and Spain are prepared to offer. At the same time the Riffians were warned that the general offensive of the French and Spanish armies, which has been in preparation since the Winter, will be launched at the appointed time if the negotiations fail, and that meanwhile nothing will interfere with the task of putting the final touches to this preparedness.

In order to avoid any possible trickery by the Riffians, the French commander, General Boschut, was today ordered to continue until further notice detail operations connected with the occupation of points from which the offensive will be launched.

Franco-Spanish agreement is practically complete and only a few small points remain to be settled between now and the 16th. Senor Lopez Olivan, one of the Spanish peace delegates, who has been in Paris since yesterday, leaves for Madrid tomorrow with General Simon, chief of the Moroccan Intelligence Service, and M. Ponsot, director of African Affairs at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs. Their work will be completed in Madrid, whence the party will proceed to Morocco. Commandant Duclos, the third French delegate, will leave for Morocco direct. The two remaining Spanish delegates are now at Melilla and will also go direct to Oudjda.

The peace condition reported here appear to be quite as favorable as those offered last July, despite the tremendous expense and heavy toll of life necessitated by Abd-el-Krim's refusal to make terms then. The first condition is recognition of the Sultan, which is the basis of the whole peace plan. It prohibits the Riffians from having special consular and diplomatic agents abroad and necessitates all external matters going through Spanish or French hands, as provided in the international treaties.

In exchange, administrative autonomy within a zone to be determined in course of the negotiations is offered to the Riffians.

Such autonomous area, however, will fall entirely within the Spanish protectorate and it follows that no part of the French zone will be affected by the arrangement. There may be, however, a few slight changes in the frontier line which will not concern the Riffians at all, but are matters for the French and Spanish to settle between themselves.

The administrative autonomy will comprise a certain degree of economic freedom. The French and Spanish will have a share in concessions granted and possibly some degree of control.

Rebels will be amnestied for past activities and all prisoners will be exchanged without conditions.

The Riff territory will be allowed to have a militia which the French and Spanish will control as to numbers and equipment. All war materials will be taken away from the Riffians—a matter which appears to be most difficult to settle.

The French and Spanish will reserve the right of sovereignty in ratifying appointments to office made by the autonomous Riff, but their policy will be not to interfere with native choice.

It appears certain that a sum of money will be offered to Abd-el-Krim to leave the Riff never to return.

SNARL WITH MEXICO CLEARED BY NOTES

within fixed distances of the borders or the seacoast. Many Americans own ranches and mines within the first prohibited area. The bulk of Mexico's great oil fields are in the second prohibited area.

In addition, the Government was to take over ownership of all subsoil properties elsewhere and lease them to operators. The laws provided also that five years after the death of an alien holding Mexican land properties, these properties should be sold to Mexican citizens and the proceeds given to the deceased owner's heirs. In other words, the deceased alien's heirs could not retain the property.

Another provision was that a landholding alien must pledge himself not to appeal to his Government for redress in any matters involving his Mexican holdings.

The United States Government contended that on their face most of these provisions were confiscatory of vested rights of American citizens in Mexican lands. It protested that the pledge demanded would mean dual sovereignty for an American citizen or a surrender of his American sovereignty, and it refused to recognize Mexico's right to enforce any such requirement.

What the United States Contended.

These points were details of the outstanding principle for which the United States contended:

That the objectionable provisions, construed as confiscatory, should not be made retroactive. Put in another way, the United States held that while Mexico was privileged to adopt any constitutional or legal measures it pleased for the administration of its own affairs, the rights acquired by American citizens under Mexican laws must be held inviolate and could not be rescinded.

In accordance with this principle the United States said to Mexico, in effect, apply your Constitution and laws to matters arising after their adoption, but do not make these provisions extend backward to cover the property rights which you yourself have conferred on American citizens.

The Government of President Calles was heartily in sympathy with this anti-foreign movement. It declined at first to concede the contention of the United States that, as a condition precedent of the renewal of diplomatic relations between the two countries, Mexico, in connection with the negotiations in 1923, in which Charles B. Warren and John Barton Payne represented the United States, did not make any formal promise not to apply retroactively the constitutional provisions in which this Government saw danger of confiscation of American properties. At times the correspondence showed evidence of irritation, but while Secretary Kellogg was firm in pressing his contentions, his notes and other documents were couched in language extremely conciliatory.

Assured Against Retroactive Law.

After assurances that the laws will not be applied retroactively, the last Mexican note stated that should any dispute arise "it would be for the courts to decide the point in accordance with the provision of Article 14 of the Constitution."

That article provides that no law shall be given retroactive effect to the prejudice of any person whatever. The Mexican Supreme Court in five decisions has upheld Article 14 by ruling that Article 27 of the Constitution, which the disputed laws make effective, shall not be applied retroactively.

One argument advanced to justify the acceptance of the Mexican assurances as satisfactory is that although that government might in the future contend that titles lapse with the expiration of the confirmatory concessions, this would leave the American owner in the same but in no worse position than he has been in the period between the enactment of the 1917 constitution and the passage of the land and petroleum laws last December.

In the March 27 note Mexico, also in effect, removed a second major American objection to provision of the law requiring alien owners or concessionaires to renounce protection of their own Governments in respect to such specially acquired Mexican rights. Referring to the declarations of the Mexican commissioners who were party to the Payne-Warren agreement of 1923, upon which this Government extended recognition to Mexico, Foreign Minister Saenz said, in the March 27 note:

"I have therefore no objection to acknowledging the declaration of the Mexican commissioners who affirmed in the name of my Government that 'they would recognize the right of the Government of the United States to make any reservation of the rights of its citizens or in their name,' which was made for the event of a resumption of diplomatic relations between the two countries.

Documents Cover a Wide Range.

"As admitted by your Excellency, your note of Jan. 28 referred to that reservation and said that 'during the negotiations of 1923 the American commissioners reserved in behalf of their Government all the rights of its citizens in respect of lands acquired by them in Mexico before May 1, 1917.'"

In another place the Mexican note stated "that even though an individual should renounce applying for the diplomatic protection of his Government (as required by the law) the Government does not forfeit the right to extend it in case of a denial of justice."

The ten documents published, beginning with a "personal appeal" of Secretary Kellogg to Foreign Minister Saens under date of Nov. 17, cover a wide range of argument. The American argument centred around the alleged confiscatory and retroactive features of the laws in violation of international law, the Payne-Warren agreement, Article 14 of the Mexican Constitution and Mexican Supreme Court decisions.

The Mexican replies denied that the laws were retroactive and promised that the executive decrees making them effective would so state.

Secretary Kellogg's communication of Nov. 17, which he termed "aide memoire of personal message," appealed to Mexico to remove "the clouds which I perceive on the horizon of friendship between the two countries" and suggested a new treaty of amity and commerce in line with the Payne-Warren agreement in 1923. He pointed out the "economic aspects and consequences" of the proposed objectionable laws.

The Mexican Government replied, on Nov. 27, that there were no clouds on the horizon, that it was ready to negotiate a new treaty and that the pending alien land law "has respected Americans in their acquired rights."

It denied, however, that the Payne-Warren agreement resulted "in any formal agreement other than of the claims conventions."

On the same day the United States answered, expressing its "genuine apprehension" and repeating that the bill would "operate retroactively" and be "plainly confiscatory" in effect. Objection was also raised "to the provision requiring foreigners to waive their nationality and to agree not to invoke the protection of their respective Governments so far as their property rights are concerned under penalty of forfeiture."

Points to Alien Laws of America.

On Dec. 7 the Mexican Government replied, objecting to representations regarding pending laws still in a formative state, which it claimed could not be fairly judged until put into effect. The note added that similar and more severe laws existed in the United States regulating property acquisition by foreigners and cited Illinois laws as an example. The Arizona law, also cited, provides that only American citizens may acquire property and limits alien holdings in corporations to 30 per cent.

In a memorandum of Dec. 22, 1925, the United States cited decisions of the Illinois courts holding that the Illinois law of 1887 could not be applied retroactively or given confiscatory effect. It then referred to a section of the Arizona law expressly limiting the alien restrictions to "future acquirements."

Following passage of the Mexican laws, the United States, on January 8, reaffirmed its objections made while the laws were under discussion by the Congress.

Mexico on Jan. 20, 1926, insisted that the executive decree to be issued would prove that the laws were non-retroactive. Considerable space was given in defense of so-called "positive acts," by which alien subsoil holders were required to prove that, by drilling or other acts, they had actually acquired old titles.

Referring to the Payne-Warren agreement, Mexico declared that its commissioners and President could not legally limit the constitutional powers of its Congress.

It cited as a similar case the "gentlemen's agreement" between the American and Japanese executives regarding immigration, which the American Congress later modified.

On Jan. 28 the United States acknowledged the Mexican promise that the executive decrees would remove American objections to the laws. This Government added, however, "that the exchange of a present title for a concession having a limited duration does not confirm the title."

Dry Law Cited as Property Confiscation.

On Feb. 12 Mexico used the American prohibition law to prove that this Government itself had destroyed property rights. The Mexican note said in this connection:

"When the prohibition law was enacted in the United States it paralyzed established businesses falling under its provisions (the amendment meant to stop the whole business. Hamilton vs. Kentucky Distilleries, 251 U. S. 146, 151, No. 1), and completely to paralyze a business would seem to be tantamount to destroying lawfully acquired rights therein, but nevertheless the American Government was not deterred by that consideration."

Secretary Kellogg replied on March 1 that "the liquor business in the United States has not been a property right but a licensed occupation which was subject to the fullest extent at all times to the police powers of the States, to license by the United States, to the war powers of the Federal Government and now subject under the Constitutional Amendment to the police powers of the United States."

Final Note Satisfies on Land Law.

The final Mexican note of March 27, after answering in an apparently satisfactory manner Secretary Kellogg's request for assurances that Articles 1, 2 and 3 of the land law will not be applied retroactively, gave the following interpretation of the much disputed Articles 4 and 5:

"It is true that an alien who, prior to the going into effect of the law, represented 50 per cent. or more of the total interest of any kind of association holding rural property for agricultural purposes, may retain the said interest without any need of a permit or without complying with Article 2, and that the right of his heirs to such interest in excess of 49 per cent. is provided for in Article 6.

"As to its effect, however, upon foreign companies holding stock in Mexican companies under the aforesaid conditions, they must dispose of the said corporate interest in excess of 49 per cent. within the term of ten years; which does not mean that the law is given retroactive effect in its application, since it has to do with an act in the future and not with an act in the past; but if any dispute should arise on that point, that is to say, as to whether or not the application of the law under the terms last mentioned is retroactive, it would be for the courts to determine it in accordance with the provision of Article 14 of the Constitution" (which prohibits retroactive application).

THE moment a man begins to swear off time or taxes, he must be careful not to overdo it. That is why so many middle-aged men wear our clothes. They know from experience that we have the knack of giving a man all the youth that his face and figure will stand. We know the difference between what's right and what's ridiculous. We don't try to make forty look like twenty nor fifty look like twenty-five. But we do know how to restore youth to ample and settled figures, because we have made a special study of the subject. Take half an hour off for us and we'll take five years off for you!

FIGHT FOR CONTROL PENNSYLVANIA ISSUE

Republican Leadership Is the Real Question in the Coming State Primary.

MACHINE IS BACKING VARE

Mellon Stands Behind Pepper and Pinchot Counts on Church and Conservative Vote.

BOTH SEEKING DRY SUPPORT

But Prohibition Is Regarded as Secondary to the Choice of a New Republican "Boss."

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., April 11.—Pennsylvania is entering upon what appears to be the hardest and most uncompromising battle in the Republican party in years. The lines have been sharply drawn for the primary on May 18, at which a candidate for United States Senator to succeed Senator Pepper and Governor and State officers are to be nominated.

On the surface the issue in this State is the wet and dry question. The real issue is for control—the selection of a leader to succeed the late Boies Penrose. Representive William S. Vare, leader of the machine hosts in Philadelphia, is a candidate for the Senate on a wet platform. His opponents, Senator Pepper and Governor Pinchot, are dry. This has made prohibition and modification the outstanding popular issue and beclouded the real question of who shall be the actual boss of Republican politics in Pennsylvania.

Secretary of the Treasury Mellon is leading the fight to re-elect Senator Pepper, who is an advocate of prohibition enforcement, and to redeem the State from the Capitol Hill combination and others who have figured in unsavory episodes. The old machine leaders, led by Representative Vare, hope to ride to victory on the modification plea, while the Church vote and the conservatives in politics are expected to take the opposite side, regardless of the other matters at stake.

The wets, well organized, now are apparently strongly in the lead, but their strength is expected to be weakened when the Mellon forces begin their attacks the last of this week.

Republicans Seek a Boss.

Pennsylvania Republicans are in search of a political boss. For four years they have struggled along without one. To the people this has been a novel experience. The party had been accustomed to a political dictator for more than fifty years and the new situation seemed unnatural. The voters were going to the polls and casting their ballots to suit themselves, a system lacking in the direct action considered necessary for the management of public affairs by Pennsylvania Republicans.

In discussing politics, the average citizen of Pennsylvania does not allude to the master political mind as a "boss." He speaks of "the leader of the Republican organization of Pennsylvania." The new leader will be named at the coming primary and the party voters are not approaching the task lightly. A row has started in every county, and indications are that when the State will be in an uproar.

The question the Republican voters must decide is whether they will follow the leadership of Secretary Mellon or Representative Vare.

Although a State ticket will be elected, the battle is over the Senatorship. For this office there are three candidates—Senator Pepper, whose term is expiring; Governor Pinchot and Representative Vare. Mr. Pepper is the Mellon candidate and his defeat will be taken as a repudiation of the Mellon leadership. Secretary Mellon has made a personal appeal to the voters for Pepper's re-election in the name of good government.

Through a generation Boies Penrose named the candidates of the Republican Party in Pennsylvania. He dictated its policies, and he was a Senator for nearly thirty years. His death at midnight, Dec. 31, 1921, brought political chaos to the party in this State. His lieutenants quarreled and demoralization followed.

At the first election the Republican machine was wrecked and Gifford Pinchot, political reformer and friend of Theodore Roosevelt, became Governor. Prominent Republicans in Pennsylvania assert that Pinchot's election was due entirely to the abnormal conditions, and they point out that two years later the Governor was beaten for delegate-at-large to the Cleveland convention by more than 250,000.

To the vacancy in the Senate caused by the death of Mr. Penrose, Governor Sproul appointed George Wharton Pepper of Philadelphia, who never had been a candidate for public office. Mr. Pepper has made no effort to succeed Penrose as party leader.

At the Cleveland convention Secretary Mellon was made Chairman of the Pennsylvania delegation, and in the campaign he was recognized by National Chairman Butler as head of the Republican party in the State. Since then, so far as Washington is concerned, Secretary Mellon has been the Pennsylvania leader, and he passes upon all Federal appointments for the State. President Coolidge has said, however, that the National Administration would take no part in the Pennsylvania fight.

Vare as Wet Champion.

In entering the Senatorial contest Mr. Vare cast a bomb into the camps of Messrs. Pepper and Pinchot. He came out as a champion of modification of the Volstead act to permit the sale of wine and beer.

There is no doubt here that Pennsylvania is wet. The State never has accepted prohibition. In some sections, especially in the mining districts and the large cities, breweries operate and saloons never have been closed. Charged with failure to enforce the law, the responsible officials point to the action of juries, which refuse to convict. For a given period in Philadelphia there were about 7,000 arrests for violation of the dry laws and convictions in fewer than 250 cases.

In the mining counties, thousands of cases have been brought before Grand Juries which have refused to indict, and one Grand Jury, in an address to the Court, declaring that prohibition could not be enforced, demanded that the law be repealed. In Philadelphia General Smedley Butler for two years fought the bootleggers, made little headway, and resigned. Conditions in Pittsburgh are as bad if not worse.

The candidacy of Mr. Vare, therefore, has made the wet and dry issue of great importance. The State never has had a referendum on prohibition and when the issue has been passed upon in local political fights, the wets, as a rule, have won. When Mr. Pinchot ran for Governor four years ago prohibition was kept out of the campaign by both sides.

Senator Pepper is classed as an advocate of law enforcement, but Governor Pinchot makes the direct charge that the Senator "has played with both wets and drys."

Vare Men Count on Division.

The Vare campaign is based on the theory that, because of the division in the ranks of the two opposing candidates, Mr. Vare will win at the primaries. That the fear of this result is in the minds of anti-saloon societies is shown by the caution with which they are proceeding. They are, as a rule, biding their time and awaiting developments before declaring they will support Pepper or Pinchot. Either would be satisfactory to them, but they want to get behind the one the more likely to poll the large vote against Vare.

Unprejudiced observers assert that Mr. Pinchot as Governor has made a record neither very good nor very bad. They say he has devoted most of his time to fighting the liquor interests and denouncing Federal enforcement.

Mr. Vare is a product of machine politics in every sense of the term. He is 59 years old, of medium height, clean shaven and square jawed. He dresses modestly and his appearance is that of an alert business man. He has a reputation of being a "hard boss," but of his personal conduct no criticism is heard here. He has a residence in Philadelphia, a country home and a place in Florida.

Mr. Vare started in life without a dollar, and as a lad sold vegetables on the streets of South Philadelphia. Before he was old enough to vote he was a political worker. He "rang the doorbells," as the saying is in Philadelphia, and took to the polling place indifferent citizens who would vote "right." He had little schooling, but in later years employed a tutor.

With his two brothers, both politicians, Mr. Vare formed a contractors' firm. With their advancement in politics came city contracts for street cleaning, sewage disposal and the like. Their profits from this source are said to have run into millions.

Years ago the Vares turned against Mr. Penrose and the latter retaliated. He beat "Bill" for Mayor of Philadelphia and then described him as "an ashcart statesman." Although defeat embittered Mr. Vare, the verbal thrust penetrated deeper. He has held offices in Philadelphia, has been a member of the Pennsylvania Senate and for fourteen years has represented a Philadelphia district in the House at Washington.

By political reformers Mr. Vare is roundly denounced and considered a type of the old political system. One of these has asserted:

"Making him Senator would make him 'boss' of Pennsylvania. He would be a crude, heavy-handed and arrogant 'boss.' As United States Senator he would be a standing reproach to the State."

Mr. Vare is the unchallenged head of the Philadelphia machine, and is accused by Governor Pinchot of condoning ballot box stuffing. For years it has been the boast of Philadelphia that it has the largest Republican majority of any city in the country. In at least forty of the forty-eight wards the machine operates with the precision of the semaphore. Adherents of "the boss" say his majority in Philadelphia in the primary may reach 125,000. If it does, election statisticians say, his fight will be won.

A few days ago, Hampton Moore, who resigned from Congress to become Mayor of Philadelphia and who opposed the machine, predicted Mr. Vare's nomination. He referred to the strength of the organization and added:

"Sentiment is for Senator Pepper, but sentiment does not vote."

Another factor in the campaign which is expected to count for Mr. Vare suggests a curious phase of Pennsylvania politics. In many rural counties party workers have been compelled to declare for Pepper or Pinchot on account of strong opposition to Vare. Many of these men were lieutenants of Senator Penrose and they are looking forward to a return of boss rule.

Neither Mr. Pepper nor Mr. Pinchot speaks the language of organized politics. Senator Pepper is looked upon by the rural party chiefs as a statesman and Governor Pinchot as a crusader and both denounce machine politics. Vare supporters assert that many of the politicians throughout the State who have declared themselves against him secretly will throw him votes. Besides, most of them are wet.

Vare Ticket Now Leading.

At this writing the wet ticket—Vare for Senator and Beidleman for Governor—appears to be riding on the crest of the wave. The wets have been most active thus far, while the Pepper-Mellon forces have been engaged in stirring up the independents to register next Wednesday, the only day they can qualify for the primary election on May 18.

After the necessary practical work the Mellon forces will become active and will not only undertake detail work, but will direct their attention to the attitude of W. Harry Baker, Republican State Chairman, who has deserted the Mellon faction and gone over to Vare and Beidleman. W. L. Mellon, nephew of Secretary Mellon, is due to confer with the leaders here Tuesday, when plans to conduct an aggressive campaign for Mr. Pepper and overcome the neutrality of Chairman Baker will be formed.

There are four candidates for the Republican nomination for Governor—John S. Fisher, of Indiana, and former State Banking Commissioner; Edward E. Beidleman, of Harrisburg, former Lieutenant Governor; John K. Tener, of Washington County, former Governor, and Thomas W. Phillips of Butler, member of Congress.

The fight for Governor is between Fisher and Beidleman. Mr. Fisher is on the Mellon ticket, and Mr. Beidleman is Mr. Vare's running-mate. Mr. Tener was a professional baseball player years ago. Neither he nor Mr. Phillips is credited with substantial support.

As Pennsylvania has a Republican majority of nearly a million, the Democratic vote usually is of no special importance. It may be different this year because Governor Pinchot, in case Mr. Vare wins the nomination for Senator, may head an independent fusion ticket with himself as the candidate for Senator and a Democrat for Governor. At a political meeting in Philadelphia a few day ago, Governor Pinchot was asked if he would support the Republican ticket to be nominated at the primaries, and he made no reply.

The Democratic candidate for the Senatorial nomination, who will be unopposed in the primary, is William B. Wilson, Secretary of Labor in the Cabinet of Woodrow Wilson.

John Galsworthy, the English novelist and playwright, praised Americans in a speech from WEAF yesterday afternoon as in general the most humane of nations in the treatment of animals, but he deplored the practice, which he said was prevalent in the West, of caging birds and animals for exhibition purposes.

"On the whole," he said, "I should say that America stands first in the treatment of animals. I cannot even make an exception in favor of my own country, though of course I know my own country very well and America perhaps not well enough. Now, this is a fine feather in the American cap, for the treatment of animals is the sure gauge of national character.

"It is easy for a foreigner speaking of the customs of another country to give offense. It is especially easy for Englishmen to give offense to Americans. With extreme diffidence, therefore, I draw attention to the only fly that I personally have seen in the ointment. This is the custom of caging live birds and live animals and keeping them caged or chained up as a show. I am not speaking of zoos. There is much to be said against zoos, but I am speaking of the caging of animals as a private enterprise.

"An American lady told me recently that her tour had been spoiled by the sight of so many wild animals and wild birds kept in captivity. It is queer that it is the interest and curiosity concerning wild animals that leads to this cruelty. Perhaps one shouldn't say cruelty, because cruelty like murder, implies intention, and there is certainly no intention to be cruel in such cases. They are the result of simple thoughtlessness and lack of imagination, but they are none the less torture for the wild bird or wild animal.

"It isn't, I suppose, for an Englishman to appeal to Americans to abate an abuse, especially when there are so many British abuses that require abatement. But, after all, the treatment of animals is a universal question, and I am sure that any animal lover in England would welcome an appeal from American visitors to abate an abuse to animals in England.

"Freedom to wild animals or birds is the breath of life. To deprive them of that freedom is a dreadful thing. It means a slow death for them."

DR. ENELOW PREDICTS UNITY OF RELIGIONS

Rabbi Calls on Christians and Jews to Join to Propagate Doctrine of Fellowship.

IN PRESBYTERIAN PULPIT

Says Religious Discussions Touches Only Externals—Work of Good-Will Union Reviewed.

Speaking from the pulpit of the West End Presbyterian Church, 105th Street and Amsterdam Avenue, the Rev. Dr. H. G. Enelow, rabbi of Temple Emanu-El, last night called upon Jews and Christians to join together "in the religion Jesus taught and tried to spread throughout the world—the religion of fellowship with God and fellowship with man."

"That is the kind of religion we must have," said Dr. Enelow, "if we are to be true disciples of the greatest prophets and masters of the past and true disciples of Jesus. We hear endless discussion about religion, but we keep on discussing not the heart of religion but the externals.

"The externals of religion meant little to Jesus," said Dr. Enelow. "To Him the all in all of religion, the great fundamentals, were the love of God and the love of fellow man. And that is the sort of religion the world needs today, if religion is to make any contribution to human progress and human happiness."

Saying that it would once have been thought "a miracle" for a Jewish rabbi to speak from a Presbyterian pulpit, Dr. Enelow predicted that the name of Jesus would ultimately draw Jews and Christians more closely together.

"For many centuries the name of Jesus has been a wall of separation between us," he said. "But it is wholly illogical, unreasonable and unbelievable that such a condition should exist permanently. We must all recognize sooner or later that Jesus was a Jew—because we cannot possibly read the Gospel stories about Jesus intelligently and understandingly without perceiving that fundamental fact. We cannot help but realize that Jesus came of Jewish ancestry, and that throughout his life he was devoted to his people and to the faith of his people.

"It is most unfortunate that the impression has recently got abroad in this community that the Jews in general have not believed the historical existence of Jesus. You do not find in any records that any movement emanated from the Jewish people which aimed at a denial of the existence of Jesus. The Jew has never been responsible for propagating that idea or for its diffusion. On the contrary, that idea has come almost wholly from writers and scholars with a Christian background.

"It is unthinkable that people who have come to revere the teachings of Jesus, to love His character and to worship Him should not conceive a certain feeling of affection, sympathy and good-will for the people which gave Jesus to the world. No matter how much estrangement and alienation there has been in the past, the time will come when Jesus must be the tie that binds between Jews and Christians."

Last night's service was devoted to the work of America's Good-Will Union, which is striving to promote good-will between Jews and Gentiles. The pastor, the Rev. Dr. A. Erwin Kelgwin, asked his "colleague," Rabbi Edward Lieschan of the Riverside Synagogue, to lead in prayer. The Rev. Edward Lawrence Hunt, director of the Good-Will Union, spoke briefly on the work of the union.

HOPEFUL FOR BELGIAN LOAN

BRUSSELS, April 11.—Finance Minister Janssen, who is now in the Belgian capital conferring with his colleagues in reference to private conversations with Anglo-American financiers in London this week, told newspaper men tonight that although direct negotiations for a loan had not begun, preparatory conversations had been very hopeful and the trend of the discussions encouraging.

"I spoke at length of the necessity of obtaining a long term loan instead of the three-year loan, which caused great deception and a heavy fall of the franc in Belgium," the Minister said. "British financiers said they intended to study with the fullest sympathy a twenty-year loan, with an annual sinking fund arrangement, and I do not doubt its chances of success will be great when negotiations are resumed.

"The financiers have unanimously told me, however, that if a long term loan is to succeed it is necessary for the Belgian Government and Belgian bankers to reach a full understanding, so that our country may give the impression that we are all hitched to the same wagon. This understanding has been reached."

DIES IN DROP OFF PALISADES

John Brenner, 72 years old, was reported missing from his home at 145 Twenty-eighth Street, North Bergen, N. J., yesterday morning by his family. Two hours later his body with virtually every bone broken was found at the foot of the Palisades below Boulevard East at Thirty-third Street, about five blocks from his home. There was nothing to indicate whether he had jumped or fallen. His family said he had been in poor health.

The drop is about 100 feet at this point. The body fell on a pile of jagged rocks.

Climbing the Palisades opposite Dyckman Street yesterday afternoon, Frank Accettulli, 13 years old, of 100 Cumberland Street, Brooklyn, missed his footing and fell fifteen feet to the rocks at the bottom, fracturing his skull. A motorist saw the accident, picked the boy up and brought him to Manhattan. At the Jewish Memorial Hospital it was said last night that his condition was serious.

THEATRE IS DESTROYED IN ASBURY PARK FIRE

ASBURY PARK, N. J., April 12.—The Main Street Theatre, a vaudeville and motion picture theatre, the largest amusement house here, was destroyed by fire shortly before midnight. Early this morning flames were still billowing from the burning building, threatening adjoining business houses and the Lewis Lumber Company's large plant half a block away.

The whole of Asbury Park's fire-fighting force, reinforced by men and apparatus from half a dozen neighboring communities, were concentrating their efforts in preventing the flames from spreading.

The loss in the theatre fire is estimated at $200,000. Traffic on the Jersey Central Railroad and also street car traffic in Main Street, was completely suspended. No loss of life has been reported.

The fire was discovered by a passer-by some time between 11 o'clock last night and midnight. He turned in an alarm and on the arrival of the Fire Chief a request for help was sent to other municipalities. The fire started on the balcony floor and by the time it was discovered and the firemen arrived the flames had gained such headway that it was seen the place was doomed.

No performances or motion pictures are allowed in Asbury Park on Sundays. The last performance was given on Saturday evening when the film "Desert Gold" was shown. After the theatre was locked up for the night no one is known to have been in the place and it is believed that the fire must have been smouldering through Saturday night and Sunday so that when the flames were seen late last night the balcony was well ablaze.

The theatre is owned by Walter Reade, who operates a chain of vaudeville and motion picture theatres in New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Ohio. Directly opposite is the property of the Ocean Grove Camp Meeting Association. The building is a three-story brick structure of modern type.

KING ENDANGERS RUMANIAN CROWN

UNIFYING FORCE IMPAIRED

ABUSES OF ROYAL POWER

The political situation in Rumania arising out of the abdication of Crown Prince Carol is so important to the future stability of Southeastern Europe and has been the subject of so many contradictory reports that THE NEW YORK TIMES recently sent a staff correspondent to Bucharest to study conditions there. The first of a series of articles from this correspondent is printed below. Other articles, continuing his observations, will follow in succeeding issues of THE TIMES.

Special Correspondence of THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BUCHAREST, March 30.—Facile explanations have been given for the abdication of Carol as Corwn Prince of Rumania. To accept them is not to realize the full significance of his abdication. To realize what it means to Rumania is to ask not so much why Carol resigned, but why his resignation was accepted.

That is the all-important question. It has not been answered—it has not been clearly posed. It cannot be answered with certainty even now. To this day it remains an absorbing mystery.

The gravest reasons of State were urged against the acceptance of the Crown Prince's abdication. They were disregarded. There is good reason to believe that the Crown Prince might have been dissuaded. An offer, a guarantee to dissuade him, was made to the King. It was not accepted.

Decisive power was in the hands of the King. He used that power neither as a prudent King nor as a normal father. He used it not only to brush aside every effort to save the situation, but even to expose his country and his dynasty to dangers which, at worst, could have been avoided.

Facts Not Difficult to Prove.

These are the basic facts. They seem incredible. They require elucidation. They are not hard to prove, and in proving them Carol's abdication may be placed in its true perspective, as part of a situation making Rumania one of the worst trouble centres in the Balkans. But, once proved, the solution of the mystery—why the King acted as he did—must be left to the reader's judgment.

Monarchy was established in Rumania and to it were accorded wider powers than usual in modern times in order that a country, overwhelmingly illiterate and with little political experience, might be assured one permanent stabilizing element above immature party politics. Those reasons still obtain today.

The great majority of the population remains illiterate. Rumania has made remarkable progress in the fifty years of her existence as an independent kingdom, but the experience of so short a period cannot be expected to wipe out the evil traditions of centuries of misrule by the Turks and the Fanariot Greeks to whom the Sultans, for a consideration, farmed out the country.

One of the few things upon which all Rumanians and foreign observers agree is that the country is not ripe for republican institutions.

Need to Consolidate Kingdom.

To these original reasons for monarchy, the war has added others of as great, if not greater, weight. The old kingdom has been more than doubled in size and population. The acquisition of these new territories has been recognized under duress, or not even recognizd at all, by the powers formerly controlling them, respectively Hungary and Russia.

The primary problem of Rumania is to consolidate this new kingdom, threatened not only from without but subject from within to powerful disintegrating forces, arising from the different historical development of the Rumanians of the old kingdom and of the new territories. History has repeately shown how strongly the institution of hereditary monarchy can contribute to the unification of a country.

Moreover, the war, by leading to such reforms as the establishment of universal direct suffrage and the division of big estates among the peasants, has introduced forces which are bound inevitably to shift the centre both of political and economic gravity in Rumania.

It is essential that the gears of the country be not stripped in making this shift. Monarchy allows a controlling hand to be exercised by a chauffeur independent of class and party. It is the only stable element in a situation whose very essence is its instability.

Ambiguity as to Royal Powers

Not only these factors, but also the extraordinary powers vested in the monarchy by custom and Constitution in Rumania, make it the key institution of the country. The Constitution itself is extremely ambiguous on the highly important point as to whether all power springs from the King or the people.

In the preamble the King approves of it with such phrases as "I confirm it with my royal and constitutional sanction," and "We approve and sanction what follows," as if it derives of his grace. On the other hand, Article 33 states that all the powers of the State emanate from the nation.

In practice, the Cabinet must have the confidence of the King rather than that of Parliament. No Government in Rumania has ever been overthrown by an adverse vote in Parliament. In 1919 the King overthrew the Cabinet of Alexander Valda-Vaevod despite the parliamentary majority which elections three months previous had given to it. He made General Averescu, who had only a handful of deputies in his party, Premier and dissolved Parliament. General Averescu then held elections and won an overwhelming majority. In 1922 this Parliament was dissolved. The King passed over the two leading minority parties, the Nationalists and the Peasants, and entrusted power to Ioan Bratiano, leader of the Liberal Party, which then had eight deputies. M. Bratiano held elections and won a two-thirds majority in Parliament.

It is safe to say, then, that the decisive vote in a Rumanian election is the one cast by the King in choosing the man who holds the elections.

Monarchy Shaken by King's Act.

Obviously, under such conditions the monarchy is the strength or the weakness of Rumania, depending upon how the King exercises his prerogatives. Obviously, too, this situation makes control of, or at least ascendancy over, this key institution of the monarchy, an essential aim for every party.

On the other hand, the prestige of the monarchy depends upon the King remaining aloof and independent, playing no favorites, identifying the Crown with no party, no class and no section. Its stability, and its value as a permanent stabilizing influence, depends upon the smooth transmission of the Crown from King to adult Crown Prince. Regencies have the most frequently led to internal trouble in all kingdoms.

Not to have an adult Crown Prince is dangerous enough. To have one, and to make no effort to keep him, is worse. But for a King, past 60 and of weak health, who had already been accused of identifying himself with one section, one class and one party, to force, in a way bound to strengthen those charges, the acceptance of his son's abdication and the substitution of a regency for a 4-year-old boy—thus to undermine in an immature and unconsolidated country, threatened both from within and without, at one stroke the two chief pillars of its key institution, the monarchy—that would seem madness indeed. That is precisely what has happened in Rumania.

EDITOR SAYS DEAN CAUSED HIS OUSTING

ACCUSATION IS DENIED

Harry Heller, a senior at City College, who was removed from the editorship of The Campus, an undergraduate newspaper, following the publication of an editorial deriding the Faculty, blamed Frederick B. Robinson, Dean of the School of Business and Civic Administration, yesterday for his dismissal. Dean Robinson denied the charge, and Edward W. Stitt Jr., a lawyer, of 40 West Fortieth Street, President of the Campus Association, a body of graduates which owns the periodical, said the Campus Association dismissed the editor on its own initiative.

Heller was dismissed on March 27, one day after The Campus printed an editorial headed "Oracular Mysticism," in which an unnamed professor was quoted as saying that students should not, as they had requested, be allowed to attend Faculty meetings, because the "Faculty was entitled to privacy at its meetings. Its anouncements should have an oracular mysticism." The editorial added that the Faculty "dreaded" to permit students to attend the meetings for fear of appearing awkward and losing their professional dignity, "a quality," it added, "very useful to an inferior man," and concluded as follows:

"Oracular mysticism, then, is the only guard against appearing ridiculous that some professors possess. It is the only resource of those that cannot explain their conduct in terms of reason."

Heller said he had quoted Lewis Sayre Burchard, a professor of commercial law, who "saw nothing in the editorial that offered grounds for disciplinary action." He also said Dean Robinson had said he would not take action on the editorial, but on the same day, when Heller refused to remain silent about the Faculty denying permission to a member of the Social Problems Club to speak in a class room, Dean Robinson telephoned the Campus Association, complaining that the editor of The Campus was generally "undesirable."

"I never removed Mr. Heller from his position nor asked anybody else to remove him," said Dean Robinson. "Furthermore, the Faculty took no official notice of his insolent and impudent editorial."

Mr. Stitt said the Campus Association removed the editor on its own initiative after Heller had failed to observe an assurance made a week previously that he would be governed by "ordinary rules of decency."

"We lost all confidence in the good judgment of Mr. Heller, which any college editor should have when the breach occurred, a few days after his reassurance," said Mr. Stitt. "The association felt it had made a mistake in electing Mr. Heller in the first place and feared that its responsibility for the publication would be imperiled should Mr. Heller continue to be its editor."

Professor Burchard said he had spoken to a Campus reporter "under an express pledge of confidence," and denied he had said he saw no grounds for disciplinary action against the editor. He also said he considered the editorial "very insolent" and "very unfair to use my statement in the way Mr. Heller did."

ASBURY PARK, N. J., April 11.—Radio programs in the daytime, and motion pictures at night, will entertain passengers on buses of the Philadelphia-Asbury Park Coach Company, it was announced today by Rudolph Reidmann, President of the company. The motion pictures will be thrown on a screen behind the driver's seat. All buses of the line will carry this equipment after June 1, it was said.

TUNNEL BRONX PARKWAY.

$200,000 Project at Mount Vernon Will Divert Traffic From Its Streets.

One of the most important improvements now being carried out along the new Bronx River Parkway is the construction of an underground tunnel beneath Mount Vernon and Yonkers Avenues, at West Mount Vernon, so that parkway traffic will not have to cross those busy thoroughfares.

The construction work, which is being done under the direction of the Westchester County Park Commission, has stopped all traffic over Mount Vernon Avenue from the Harlem Station at West Mount Vernon to Webster Avenue, Yonkers, and all automobiles bound for Yonkers and Mount Vernon have to detour by the way of Railroad Avenue.

The tunnel will cost more than $200,000 and will be wide enough for four cars to pass through it at one time.

NEW JERSEY EXPECTS BANNER FRUIT YEAR

GLASSBORO, N. J., April 11.—Jersey's fruit crops are believed to be safe for this season, so far as late frosts and freezes are concerned. Not for many years have the blossoms been so late in appearing as this Spring.

Plum blossoms, the very first of all of the fruit trees to put on their Spring toggery, are scarcely yet showing color. At the present slow rate of development it will be close on to May before all of the other fruit trees are in full bloom. In some recent seasons peach orchards have been pink with blossoms at this time in April. This year the peaches and cherries will hardly be in bloom before another fortnight.

Fruit growers are sleeping much easier at nights than when late frosts and freezing temperatures a year ago blighted their orchards. Smudge fires were kindled in many orchards last Spring in an effort to save part of the crop.

Large growers of peaches and apples in the lower counties say that the prospects are excellent for bumper crops of these fruits this year. They point out that there is usually lots of fruit after a long, hard Winter, especially when there is lots of snow. The orchard owners also believe that the Winter has been severe enough this year to kill off many of the pests that have proved bothersome in recent years when the Winters have been open. Pruning operations are now in full swing.

MUSSOLINI GREETED WITH ROYAL HONORS

ah, rah, mah," accompanied the rumble of desert drums and the monotonous rhythm of tomtoms. The procession itself depicted all the traditions of desert warfare of today and yesterday, plus tanks, the most modern instruments of death.

There were "Meharisti," camel cavalry, whose mounts swept swiftly by, noses high; Spahi lancers astride Arab chargers, Libyan mountain artillery carrying cannon strapped to saddles, and tall black infantry Ascaris in red fezes and white blouses or robes. A touch of the grotesque was added as troops of black Libyans clattered past astride donkeys. All raised their rifles high in the air and upside down, a desert salute of submission, as they passed Mussolini.

The final phase of the review furnished a dramatic climax. The various native cavalrymen mounted on camels and horses staged a desert charge down the Via Zizia, for the benefit of the Premier, who had taken up his place on a second floor balcony. Lifting their rifles and lances and giving the desert yell, they raced down Tripoli's main street, which had been converted into an impromptu race course.

Meanwhile Arab performers, drawn up in a square in front of the Pre-Oriental music and dancing, recalling the streets of Cairo at American world's fairs.

Mussolini's Words to the Natives.

TRIPOLI, April 11 (AP).—Benito Mussolini, the Italian Premier, landed on the soil of Africa today with a message to the black and brown peoples of the most important colony belonging to the Kingdom of Italy. The message was:

"My voyage must not be interpreted as a mere administrative act, but as it is—an affirmation of the power of the Italian people, a manifestation of the force which originates in Rome and which extends from Rome to a glorious and triumphal littoral.

"Fascist Italian Tripoli! You represent here Italy, which is daily more prosperous and powerful. Rome carries the beacon lamp of strength to the shores of the African sea. No one can stop our inexorable will.

"You understand me more for what I have not said than for what I have said. Only this language is possible in Fascist style."

From the moment Mussolini, dressed in the uniform of an honorary corporal of the Fascist militia, stepped ashore under the eyes of scores of thousands of natives crowding the sea wall until having passed the Italian and native troops in review he delivered Italy's message from the balcony of the Municipal Palace, the ceremony was indicative of Italy's power.

After the crowds of Arabians had been invited to step forward Mussolini spoke, each phrase being translated into Arabic. He said:

"Our great and august sovereign, whom God protects and the people love, has charged me to bring his salute to this land, which is forever Italian. I know you are obedient to the laws, and, being so, you will be protected today, tomorrow, always, by the King's just decrees.

"The King and the Government, of which I have the honor to be the representative, desire that this beloved land, which contains so many vestiges of imperial Rome, shall be rich, prosperous and happy."

URGES THE DEFEAT OF LAUSANNE TREATY

Senator King Tells Bishop Manning in Letter Turks Are Not to Be Trusted.

SAYS ARMENIA IS IGNORED

He Suspects In Movement to Ratify a Scheme to Borrow Money Here.

WASHINGTON, April 11.—Defeat of the Lausanne treaty between Turkey and the United States, now pending before the Senate for ratification, is vigorously urged by Senator William H. King of Utah, in a letter to Bishop William T. Manning of New York, made public tonight by the Senator, who contends America has nothing to gain and much to lose from the treaty.

"I think the treaty we are asked to ratify," said Senator King, "is most ignoble one. I do not forget the bitter criticism of the treaty signed in England made by Lloyd George and Earl Asquith in my presence when I was in London last July."

Senator King declared in his letter that Turkey had violated the separate Lausanne treaty which she made with Great Britain, Italy, France and other powers and instead of according the immunities promised Christians in that treaty was following a course that would compel them to leave Turkey.

"Turkey," he said, "is violating the treaty she made with the other powers who are at her very door. Why should there be an expectation of her observing the terms of a treaty negotiated with the United States—a nation thousands of miles away?

The Senator's Letter.

April 7, 1926.

Bishop William T. Manning, Episcopal Bishop of New York City, N. Y.

My dear Bishop Manning:

I am in receipt of a protest signed by you and 110 Bishops in which are set forth various reasons against the ratification by the Senate of the Lausanne treaty.

I am very glad to receive the protest and to know that you and so many eminent prelates have voiced opposition to a treaty which takes no cognizance of solemn promises made, and is deaf to the cries of a race which has suffered a thousand wrongs.

I was in Turkey last Summer and also traveled through the Near East. I found unanswerable arguments against the treaty, and returned to the United States more determined than ever to do what I could to defeat it. Turkey is still Oriental. Kemal Pasha is making gestures toward the West, but he is still under the influence of the East. He is regarded by millions of Moslems as the leader of a great pan-Islamic movement.

This movement, of course, contemplates the recrudescence of a militant Mohammedanism for the purpose of crushing Christianity in the Near East and in Moslem countries.

There are reasons being urged by a few persons engaged in trade and by a few teachers and missionaries in Constantinople—the former so that it will aid them in their commercial relations with Turkey—for ratification of the treaty. In my opinion this claim is unfounded. I found that the Americans were obtaining more than their share of the limited trade being carried on between Turkey and other nations and their nationals.

Says Teachers Want to Remain.

American business men were having less difficulty in their commercial transactions with the Turks than were the nationals of some countries who were signatories to the European Lausanne treaty. I shall make but little comment as to the attitude of some American teachers whom I encountered in Turkey. Some had been there for many years and felt somewhat out of touch with America and wanted to remain. That is entirely natural.

The Turkish authorities constantly impressed them with the advantage which would result if the pending treaty were ratified, and intimations were not lacking that the new foreign schools might not be permitted to continue unless the treaty were ratified.

In my opinion the schools will either be closed or they will be Turkified. Christianity will not be taught and Turkish teachers will more and more take the place of other teachers. Little by little the schools will be converted into Turkish schools and supported so far as possible by American contributions. In my opinion the Christian nations in the Balkans, particularly Greece and Bulgaria, would be better fields for American schools that is Turkey; and Syria and Palestine offer better opportunities for fine work by Christian schools than Turkey.

The treaty which we are asked to ratify ignores the Armenians entirely. It ratifies the perfidious act of Kemal Pasha is repudiating the treaty of Sevres and in making war upon the Armenian State in conjunction with the Bolsheviki; a State which had been recognized by the United States, as well as by the United States as well as by the

Armenia was a Christian State hundreds of years ago. It was a Christian outpost and maintained itself as a Christian State against Mongolian invasion until after the fall of Constantinople. During the dark and tragic years, when the Armenians were under the cruel rule of the Turks, they did not deny the faith, and though hundreds of thousands of them were ruthlessly murdered the race was not destroyed.

One of the objectives of the World War announced by all of the Allies and by the United States, was a free and independent Armenian State which was to be preserved and protected by the Christian nations until its stability was assured. The Treaty of Sèvres sought to redeem these solemn promises. President Wilson was called upon by the allied nations to delimit the western boundaries of the Armenian State. This he did and his act was approved by Turkey and the allied nations. But at Lausanne, those sitting upon the opposite side of the table from the representatives of Kemal Pasha forgot their promises, the sufferings of the Armenians and their heroic conduct during the World War.

The Turks dictated the Lausanne Treaty, and the Allies, including the United States, signed a humiliating treaty.

The Lausanne Treaty, which was signed by France, Italy and other European nations, affords no protection to the Christian minorities in Turkey. The same is true of the treaty which we are asked to ratify. It is true that most of the Christians have been driven from Turkey or have been killed.

There are in Constantinople approximately 300,000 Christians, principally of Hellenic and of Armenian descent. Under the Lausanne Treaty Turkey and Great Britian, Italy, France and other powers, these Christians in Constantinople were to have all the immunities and rights that Turkish subjects enjoyed. But Turkey has violated this treaty and is pursuing a course which will compel the Christians to abandon that country.

Nor do the Lausanne treaties give any protection to the thousands of Christian women and children scattered through Asia Minor in the homes of Turks.

Turkey is violating the treaty which she made with the other powers who are at her very door. Why should there be an expectation of her observing the terms of a treaty negotiated with the United States—a nation thousands of miles away. A few business men and the Turkish Government are carrying on an extensive propaganda in the United States to secure recognition. Turkey wants to borrow money and she hopes that the ratification of the Lausanne treaty will enable her to negotiate a loan in the United States.

I think the treaty we are asked to ratify a most ignoble one. I do not forget the bitter criticisms of the treaty signed by England, made by Lloyd George and Earl Asquith in my presence when I was in London last July.

I hope the treaty will be defeated. America has nothing to gain from the treaty and, in my opinion, she has much to lose.

With assurances of high regard, I am,

Faithfully yours,
WILLIAM H. KING.

HAITI ELECTS TODAY.

Borno Expected to Be Retained as President.

PORT AU PRINCE, Haiti, April 11 (AP).—The Republic of Haiti, which has been under the wing of the United States since 1915, when American marines took control of the situation after President Sam had been assassinated, will hold its twenty-seventh Presidential election tomorrow. It will be the third election since the American intervention. Local opinion is agreed that President Louis Borno is virtually certain of re-election.

The President will not be elected by popular vote, but by a Council of State, consisting of twenty-one members appointed by the present officer and subject to removal by him. This circumstance has led to many criticisms by opposition parties, who contend it is a method of perpetuating the control of the Executive in office.

In the 108 years previous to American intervention, Haiti had twenty-four Presidents. Seventeen of them were deposed by revolutions, and two were murdered. The other five died in office, one, it is said, by poison, one in an explosion in the national palace, and one on the eve of his overthrow by revolutionists. Only two of the twenty-four were allowed to retire peaceably from office.

The three chief candidates in tomorrow's election are President Borno, Constantin Mayard, who retired as Councilor of State on the election of President Borno in 1922, and Louis Roy, a former Minister of Public Works.

INCREASE ACCIDENT INSURANCE RATES

Underwriters Raise Average Level in Industrial Field 10% for the Country.

NEW YORK SCALE UP 84%

The National Bureau of Casualty and Surety Underwriters announced yesterday an increase in rates, effective today, for manufacturers and contractors' public liability insurance, covering legal liability from accidental personal injuries suffered by members of the public. Manufacturing industries, mining and quarrying operations, contracting and erecting work, operation of railroad and vessels, stevedoring and freight handling, and operating of public utilities are the chief risks involved.

The average level of rates for the country as a whole is increased 10 per cent. That in territory A (Greater New York and Missouri) is increased 84 per cent.; territory B (New York State outside of Greater New York, Arkansas, Florida, Mississippi, Nebraska, Ohio, Oklahoma, and Tennessee) 28 per cent.; territory C (Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Massachusetts, Minnesota, North and South Carolina) 2 per cent., and territory D (the rest of the country) 13 per cent.

"Formerly the rate for each industrial classification was uniform throughout the nation," said a statement by the bureau. "A study of the experience indicates that conditions affecting the occurrence and adjustment of public liability claims for similar classes of risks differ materially from a geographical standpoint. For the first time, therefore, the rates have been made on a territorial basis, thereby bringing about a more equitable distribution of premium charges in different parts of the country.

"This class of business is rated on the basis of a charge for each $100 of payroll. The new rates are based upon expenditure reported by individual classifications for the four latest available policy years. The total country-wide payroll represented by this experience amounts to $8,730,258,837. Of this total payroll, approximately $1,600,000,000 was earned in the City of New York and a total of $2,122,763,076 was earned in the entire State of New York. The experience shows that there has been a very definite upward trend in loss costs during the past six or seven years. There has been a similar tendency for the claim frequency or the number of claims per unit of payroll to increase year by year.

"This tendency for losses and frequency of claims to increase has been noticeable particularly in New York City, where conditions have been considerably worse than in the rest of the country and where the business has been carried on at a loss for many years on the basis of the old rates. The indications are that loss costs have continued to rise since 1922 and will probably show a similar tendency to increase in the future.

"The rate changes are not uniform for all classifications. In many cases the rates for individual classifications have been increased considerably more than the average percentage increase of the territory under consideration; in other cases the increases are less than the average. In many of the manufacturing industries the rates are unchanged, and in some cases the rates for individual classifications have been reduced even in territories where the average shows an increase.

"The minimum premium for a manufacturers' public liability policy is increased from $5 to $10 per annum."

FOKKER NOT TO FLY YET.

Has No Present Plans for Transatlantic Air Trip, Inventor Says.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

AMSTERDAM, April 11.—Questioned today concerning a report that he was building an airplane which he intended to fly to New York, the noted Dutch airman, Fokker, said today that for the present he had no plan to try crossing the Atlantic by airplane since the machine which he had built for that purpose had been sold to the Wilkins polar expedition.

He made this statement during a demonstration at the Amsterdam aerodrome with his new three-engined passenger plane F.V. This new machine has aroused widespread interest and the British government has ordered one like it. It has three 200 H. P. motors which, while flying, are to be used only at two-thirds their capacity.

The plane, it is said, is constructed in such a way that it will never have to make a forced landing. It is also said that the fire danger is practically eliminated since the petrol tanks are placed under the wings.

SUNDAY WORK BARRED.

HANCOCK'S BRIDGE, N. J., April 11.—No Sunday work is to be permitted in the construction of new highways in Salem County, it is under the pretext of "emergency work" by contractors. A novel provision has been made in the first road contract for the current year, which will be in force on the Salem-Hancock's Bridge Road. Work will start soon on the construction of this road. A little more than three miles will be paved at a cost of $94,000.

The contract provides that the work must be completed within a specified number of days, but the freeholders have emphasized that there is to be no Sunday work on the road under any circumstances.

JEWELERS PRAISE M'LAUGHLIN RULE

Head of Retailers Hopes That Commissioner's Term Will Be a Long One.

THEIR COOPERATION ASKED

The accomplishments of the police in detecting criminals in the jewelry industry were lauded in the presence of Commissioner George V. McLaughlin last evening at the first annual dinner of the Brooklyn Retail Jewelers' Association at the Hotel St. George. Mr. McLaughlin responded with a plea that the jewelers aid him as citizens in obtaining legislation that will provide more serious penalties for "fencer" and a larger police force for the city.

So harmonious were the relations of the police under the new regime and the jewelry industry as painted on both sides that, when Emil Kohn, President of the Greater New York and Vicinity Retail Jewelers referred to the possibility of Commissioner McLaughlin's following in the footsteps of Theodore Roosevelt from accomplishment in his present office to the White House, the entire audience rose to its feet, applauding and shouting approval. Mr. McLaughlin smiled broadly at this reference.

"Not many years ago business men could leave merchandise of all kinds, including furs and silks, in bundles in the streets with no fear of their being touched," said Commissioner McLaughlin. "Today men with high-powered automobiles and half a dozen guns on their persons or readily available walk into your stores and take what they want. The office of which I am temporary occupant is supposed to detect these men. But we are handicapped by lack of men, inability to obtain quick trial and by a class of men known as fences who obtain stolen goods a few hours after they are taken and dispose of them in a fashion that makes recovery impossible.

Wants Curb on Fences.

"I want laws that will make a crime the presence of a person in an automobile that holds a gun. Innocent men can easily explain their innocence, so that such legislation is not dangerous. I also want legislation to get the fence and make unnecessary testimony of any one other than an accomplice to convict a criminal.

"Today 99 per cent. of the receivers of stolen goods go scot free because we need other testimony. We can get only the testimony of the thief, and many judges now demand the word of some one else before they will convict the receiver. I want also your support when I go before the Board of Estimate and I want you to do your duty when your turn comes for jury duty because we have not the proper type of man serving on juries in most instances. Make it impossible for mail order houses to supply guns to any one who happens to ask for one, because too many of such guns are used for no good purpose. Those preying on your industry are well organized, and we have only scratched the surface as far as our accomplishments are concerned. You can help me do a better job."

Hopes for Long Term.

Mr. Kohn said he wanted Mr. McLaughlin's tenure to be long enough to allow more of the wonderful esprit de corps that he had given the Police Department to be spread about.

"The respect of police officers for their new chief and the feeling of citizens toward him, in the light of his accomplishments are wonderful," he said. "The cleaning up of the Whittemore gang, for instance, was one of the most brilliant achievements of many years, but Mr. McLaughlin refuses to take any credit. He gives it to Inspector Coughlin and Detectives Cronin, Sullivan, Moran and Daly."

Bartley J. Doyle, President of the Keystone Publishing Company of Philadelphia, was toastmaster, and the other speakers were Samuel J. Feldman, President of the Brooklyn Association; Conrad J. Brotherly of Newark, President of the National Retail Jewelers Association; P. J. Coffey, President of the National Jewelers' Board of Trade, and Phineas Peters, Secretary-Treasurer of the association. The guests included James A. Dunne, Justice of the Supreme Court; George W. Martin, Judge of the County Court; the Rev. Dr. Alexander Lyons, and E. H. Hufnagel, President of the National Retailers' Association.

Italian Officers Rescued From Plane

MALTA, April 11 (AP).—The Italian Under-Secretaries of War and the Air, General Cavalaero and General Bonjani, had a narrow escape from death yesterday, when a seaplane conveying them from Italy to Tripoli fell into the sea. They were picked up unharmed by a passing steamer and brought to Malta; they were transferred to the British warship Queen Elizabeth and later to an Italian warship. A destroyer rescued the crew.

Weeks Improves on Way East.

EAST LAS VEGAS, N. M., April 11 (AP).—John W. Weeks, former Secretary of War, passed through this town tonight on a Santa Fe train eastbound. Members of his party who came out to the platform said that his condition was somewhat improved. He has been suffering from digestive disorders recently, after a general breakdown in health.

STATE TO BUY 17,000 ACRES.

ALBANY, April 11 (AP).—Purchase by the State of 17,000 acres of land in Franklin, Essex, St. Lawrence, Greene and Ulster Counties, which will open to the public valuable hunting, camping and fishing grounds in the Adirondacks and Catskills, has been approved by the Commissioners of the Land Office, the Conservation Commission announced today. The property will be bought for $299,607.

The purchases in the Adirondacks embrace 4,883 acres around Cranberry Lake, St. Lawrence County; 3,300 acres in the vicinity of St. Regis Mountain, near Paul Smiths; 3,640 acres on and near White Face Mountain, not far from Lake Placid, and 2,275 acres on the northern boundary of Essex County, taking in the headwater of Cold River.

The Catskill parcels comprise 2,800 acres at the headwaters of the Esopus and Schoharie creeks and the slopes of Hemlock, Panther and Hunter mountains. The State already owns the summits of these peaks and the additional purchases are designed to give the public free and easy access to their tops.

The Cranberry Lake acquisition will add to the forest preserve approximately 16 miles of shoreline and several islands. It includes 338 cottage lots in Bear Mountain, Brandy Brook, Laurentia and Abbott Land Parks and that part of Cat Mountain which is not now in public domain. Cranberry Lake is one of the best trout fishing waters in the Adirondacks.

The Paul Smiths purchase embraces the summit and north slope of St. Regis Mountain and valuable timber lands.

The Whiteface Mountain transaction will insure the protection of that peak as well as of a part of the Sentinel Range. It will give the State a long frontage on the Ausable River and an opportunity for camp site development at the upper end of the Wilmington Notch. In addition, the trace embraces 2,500 acres of forest land.

Raising Fund for a Children's Camp.

A bridge and mah jong party will be held this afternoon at the Majestic by the Junior Auxiliary of the National Council of Jewish Women. The proceeds will be devoted to a Summer camp for poor children. Miss Florence Hirsh is in charge.

and the screams of terrified sailors pierced the air as they burst forth from various parts of the ship, their clothing in flames. They leaped overboard, thus extinguishing the flames that enwrapped them, later to be dragged from the water by rescuers who had rushed to the scene when the racking roar of the explosion awoke the city.

Added to the noise that engulfed the harbor was the wailing of the siren on the Gulf Company's power house.

Belching flame from every porthole, her steel plates white hot and buckling from the tremendous heat of the fire within, the tanker threatened to spread destruction through other shipping in the harbor and to the great refining plant ashore. Every piece of firefighting apparatus in the city, together with the full crews of the refinery plants, fought the flames and succeeded in confining them to the ship.

In the uncertain dawn the afterpart of the doomed vessel glowed whitely, so terrific was the heat, and every few moments an additional tank would burst with a thunderous roar, the flames shooting skyward and casting a weird light over the harbor over which a pall of thick, black smoke hung heavily.

Chemicals Finally Subdue Flames.

Within a few minutes the night crew from the Gulf Refining Company's plant near the harbor reached the burning vessel. They first brought a chemical engine into play and began pouring several streams of chemicals on the now white-hot sepulchre, the Port Arthur Fire Department followed shortly, but water was only an encouragement for the flames.

For two hours the streams of chemicals fought the hot fluid seething within the crematory. The fire than was brought under control, and first attempts were begun to bring the bodies out. Nothing but ashes clinging to a few bones remained.

The crisp bodies were removed as carefully as possible and carried to a two-story brick building near by, which was converted into a morgue. Only one of the men could be identified even partly, and this was accomplished by a party skilled that.

One man taken from the deck was just able to whisper his name into a doctor's ear. "Julian Edwardson," he said—and then died. He did not give his address.

Only two of the dead have been identified. They were Frank Taylor of Port Arthur and Charles A. Koser, Collingwood, N. J., both of whom died in a hospital.

The injured in the hospital include Timothy Fitzmaurice, Dorchester, Mass.; P. F. Morrill, Portland, Me.; Conrad Jack Stead, Philadelphia; Gunnar Bollvick, New York, and J. G. Schutz, Philadelphia.

Jumped Through Porthole.

Frank Wood, Port Arthur boy and first mate, was on duty pumping oil into the tanker when the first blast came.

"I do not know the cause—it came with such suddenness, and such a deafening roar. I doubt if any one knows the cause now," he said.

Wood stuck to his post until the boat was doomed, then he made a dash for safety. He was painfully burned.

Gunner Bollivar was picked up several yards from the flaming vessel. He was burned about the head and body, but had managed to swim the ship channel.

"The explosion hurled me from my bunk; and I landed on the floor," he said. "It was so sudden that I don't remember how I landed, but I got up and rushed to a porthole and jumped through."

One sailor brought to the hospital had the iron rim of a porthole caught around his body.

Cause Is Undetermined.

Most of the property damage was confined to the tanker. The vessel was pumped half full of water and settled at the stern, but was still floating low. The stern rail was blown completely away by the blast.

G. N. Bliss, Superintendent of Marine Transportation of the refining company, scouted the theory that one of the tanks near the engine room overflowed and was set off by a spark. He said there was no tank near enough to the engine room.

Other theories of the cause, which Mr. Bliss did not accept, were that the cook, who rises at about the hour of the explosion, 3:30 A. M., started his fire and that the ignited the gas, or that a sailor lighted a cigarette.

The Gulf of Venezuela, formerly was the Shipping Board vessel Mildland. About a year ago she was equipped with motors at a cost of about $50,000. The vessel was used to carry gasoline and oil from the negro refining plant here to Atlantic Coast ports, and earlier in the year figured in news dispatches dealing with the rescue of crews from sunken barges. The ship was to have sailed Monday morning.

Captain John F. Charlton, the skipper, is credited here with being the captain of the first merchant marine vessel to sink a German submarine. The submarine was sunk south of Bordeaux, May 30, 1917, by gunfire from the Silver Shell, under the direction of Captain Charlton.

PHILADELPHIA, April 11 (AP).—Virtually all the crew of the oil tanker Gulf of Venezuela, damaged today by an explosion of gasoline at Port Arthur, Texas, was composed of men recruited from this city and Environs, according to R. W. Hamon, marine agent of the Gulf Refining Company, owners of the vessel.

ELDER WHITTEMORE HERE.

Father of Slayer Arrives to See Son's Wife, Who Goes Free Today.

John Reese Whittemore, father of Richard Reese Whittemore, robber and killer, came here from his home in Baltimore yesterday in an effort to see his daughter-in-law, Margaret Whittemore, who is in Jefferson Market Prison charged with complicity in the $170,000 Goudvis diamond robbery at Fifth Avenue and Forty-eighth Street on last Jan. 11.

Lieutenant William Fogarty of the Detective Division at Police Headquarters, whom Whittemore asked for permission to talk to the girl, told him he would have to get the consent of the warden of the prison. At Jefferson Market Prison it was said he had not called there.

Mrs. Whittemore is to be released today as a result of the statement she made on Saturday to Ferdinand Pecora, Chief Assistant District Attorney, giving information against Jacob and Leon Kraemer of her husband's gang.

WORLD COURT ISSUE IN ILLINOIS PRIMARY

Situation for Tuesday's Vote So Mixed Veteran Observers Call It "Strangest Campaign."

CONTEST THOUGHT CLOSE

CHICAGO, April 11 (AP).—Frequent references to the entrance of the United States into the World Court in the contest of candidates for the Republican Senatorial nomination has lent a national tinge to the Illinois primary to be held on Tuesday. Factional squabbles have also aroused feeling in Chicago, and the wet and dry controversy has been considered.

The situation in Cook County, where more than 1,000,000 voters are eligible, is so involved that even veteran political writers refer to it as "Chicago's strangest campaign," and as "to the last minute retaining its grotesqueries and comicalities and its general circus air filled with tightrope walkers and flinflop acrobats."

The primary will afford the first opportunity for a constituency to express its sentiment on a Senator's vote for United States adherence to the World Court, and Mr. Smith has made the most of his chance to demand virtually a referendum on Senator McKinley's ballot in favor of the court.

The contest for the Democratic nomination for Senator has been dominated by the virtually silent campaign of George E. Brennan, for more than two decades a national leader, who finally determined to seek an elective office the better to focus attention on the Volstead act. His opponents, James T. McDermott, former Representative, and James C. Monroe, have not broken the silence.

MEXICAN BISHOP INDICTED.

He Is Charged With Urging Catholics to Resist Laws on Religion.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, April 11.—The Bishop of Huejutla, in the State of Hidalgo, has been indicted by order of the Department of the Interior following charges that the Bishop issued a pastoral letter calling on his people to resist the present laws which affect Catholic religious teachers.

The Bishop will be cited to appear before Attorney General Ortega this week.

KANSAS CITY, April 11 (AP).—A new "ten commandments" for the Church of today in its relations with "youth" was issued here by the Rev. William L. Stidger of the Linwood Methodist Church. The pamphlet, which was distributed at services today, was a plea for tolerance and understanding on the part of the elder generation.

"Thou shalt not charge that youth is more wicked today than in other generations" was the eighth commandment laid down by the pastor. "What other generations called 'spooning' he may call 'necking.' And about the same proportion of this generation indulges in this 'indoor sport' as hath indulged in it in other generations.

"He doeth in the automobile what another generation hath done in the buggy behind a horse; no more and no less," said Dr. Stidger.

The new decalogue was written by the pastor because one of the church members remarked several weeks ago that Dr. Stidger did not seem to think the old decalogue applicable to the young people of today. The member asked him why he didn't write a new one that would apply.

WORCESTER GREETS FRIED.

WORCESTER, Mass., April 11 (AP).—Captain George Fried, commander of the President Roosevelt, who, with his men, rescued the crew of the Antinoe last January after a four-day battle with a storm at sea, greeted his boyhood chums in Worcester today and had the pleasure of shaking hands with Charles F. Stowell, a farmer, for whom he worked when he was a boy.

More than twenty boyhood chums serenaded the Captain and Mrs. Fried at his hotel and recounted the experiences of the days before he left the city to go to sea.

Mr. Stowell was the centre of the group at the hotel gathering and told many stories of the days when Captain Fried distinguished himself by being his most industrious farmhand. Captain Fried displayed the numerous medals and other articles presented to him in recognition of the daring rescue of the Antinoe crew.

Captain Fried and his wife attended a concert of the Lutheran Choral Union tonight, and although he made an effort to keep his identity secret he was recognized and introduced to the audience, which warmly applauded. He spoke briefly and then allowed a collection for the organization to be taken in the gold chest given him by the King of England. He will go to Providence on Tuesday.

PROPOSES FIREARMS LAW.

Safety League Wants National Legislation to Curb Sales.

Prominent bankers and industrial leaders are supporting the work of the American Safety League for national and State legislation to prevent the promiscuous and careless sale of firearms, according to a statement issued yesterday by Bennett E. Siegelstein, who said that he would shortly prepare papers for the incorporation of the league.

The league proposes to support a national law providing that no one may purchase a firearm without first obtaining a license to carry a weapon and forbidding dealers to sell firearms without first obtaining a license.

Also that a person found armed with a pistol be considered guilty of a crime, possession of the weapon being prima facie evidence of intention to commit a crime. No aliens would be allowed to carry arms and permission to citizens to carry arms should be granted only by a justice or chief of police in a town.

BOARD OF ALDERMEN IS SHOT TO DEATH

City in Puebla Objects to the Installation of New Local Administration by State.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, April 11.—Telegrams from the State of Puebla say the removal of the City Government at Oyotempantecatl caused an outbreak of fighting between citizens and representatives of the State Government, which deposed the City Administration.

The citizens protested against naming a new Board of Aldermen. When the Aldermen were taking the oath of office a group known as the Sanchezistas opened fire, killing the entire nine members of the new board.

The fight lasted two hours, many more being killed. The exact number of dead is not yet known, but among them is the leader of the Sanchezistas, Rosendo Medrano.

The messenger, Fidencio Valverde, who brought the news to the City of Puebla, stated that he escaped by a miracle.

JAPAN'S DEAL IS MINIMIZED

By THOMAS F. MILLARD

Special Correspondence of THE NEW YORK TIMES.

SHANGHAI, March 2.—For several good and sufficient reasons the American people, and especially the press in America, ought now and then to notice developments of what variously is termed in China the "American wireless contract," the "radio embroglio," the "wireless wrangle," and by a few other colloquialisms. Behind and beyond the prolonged diplomatic squabbling among important Governments which has marked this case from its inception lie matters of serious—one may say of tremendous—consequence, not only to the particular interests of the United States and of China, but also to mankind.

For although this dispute on the surface is about a construction contract of no great value, what really is involved is control of one of the most important factors in modern civilization.

On the face of the matter the State Department is fighting to sustain the "Open Door" in China, which is part of a cardinal policy of the American Government. But in addition it is trying to prevent any single power, or a combination of Governments having the advantage of previously set positions, from securing a monopoly in this part of the world of the new element which promises to bring all nations and peoples of the earth into instantaneous, constant and inexpensive communication.

It is possible today, scientifically, to transmit this article to THE TIMES by radio at a comparatively low cost, or even for me to sit in a booth in Shanghai and telephone to THE TIMES offices in New York. All that is required to make that transmission feasible is to get up the necessary apparatus. (I do not mean that this new natural element has been brought completely under human comprehension and control, or that its uses and economics are yet satisfactorily adjusted; but what I indicate can be done now.)

But although large constructing and operating concerns are willing to build that apparatus and to operate it, and although some years ago the Chinese Government contracted with an American company to build a number of radio installations in this country, and apparently still desires to go on with the undertaking, the project has been so entangled in a web of diplomatic and other obstruction that it seems to get nowhere.

This case commenced five years ago and the official diplomatic papers concerning it would fill volumes. It is estimated that telegrams about the case have cost over $100,000. To follow all its turns and complexities would baffle the traditional Philadelphia lawyer. One time and another I have myself written enough about the case to make a little book.

In January, 1921, the Peking Government made a contract with an American concern (Federal Telegraph Company of California) for it to build a number of wireless stations in China. That contract (which erroneously was described as a "concession") provided that the American firm would finance the construction by issuing bonds secured by the enterprise, and that the constructors on behalf of the bondholders would operate the plans for the Chinese Government until the bonds were paid or otherwise liquidated. Those provisions were not because the contractors had any purpose to retain control of the plants after they were built, but were because, since it was expected and intended that the bonds would be sold principally to American investors, it was felt that that could not be done unless a competent management was assured. The contract had no monopolistic provisions.

When the existence of that contract became known, which was very soon after it was signed, some foreign Governments at once began diplomatic efforts to have it canceled. Those efforts, the motives which inspired them, and arguments which supported them, provide a concrete example showing that however often some Governments publicly profess adherence to the Hay doctrine of respect for the sovereignty of China and of the commercial open door here, the old policy of special foreign rights and positions still is very active.

Japan Files a Protest.

First, Japan.

In March, 1918, the Chinese Government was induced, under strong diplomatic persuasion of Japan, to make an agreement with a Japanese firm (Mitsui & Co.) for the construction and operation of a wireless plant near Peking. In a letter confirming that contract was a sentence giving the Japanese company a monopoly on wireless communications between China and other parts of the world for thirty years. That agreement was kept secret. It coincided with the period of greatest Japanese pressure and influence at Peking, with the orgy of graft that attended the notorious Nishahara loans.

On learning of the American contract, the Japanese Legation in Peking made a strong protest to the Chinese Government on the ground that the project is an infringement of Japanese rights under the secret agreement of 1918. Both the Chinese and American Governments at once disputed the exclusive and monopolistic character of the Japanese agreement. The Wai Chiao-pu (Chinese Foreign Office) pointed out that the monopolistic provision did not appear in the regular text of the tagreement, but was based on a letter written by a Chinese official apart from the agreement.

Insist Upon the Open Door.

The State Department and the American Legation in Peking (Charles R. Crane was American Minister then) at once saw that a principle of great importance was involved in the case. If any foreign firm or Government, by secret agreement with Chinese officials, obtained perhaps by bribery, or by intimidation, or in any way, thereby could create for themselves monopolistic economic and commercial rights in China, then the open door and all treaties giving most-favored-nation status to foreigners in China went on the scrapheap. If nationals of one nation by that method could monopolize radio installations and communications in China, and between China and all other countries, then nationals of one nation legally could monopolize any other industries and forms of commerce here.

On that point of principle the State Department at once took a position which it holds firmly at the present time. Under dates of June 9, 1921, and July 1, 1921, the Chinese Minister in Washington, Dr. Alfred Sze, and Secretary of State Hughes exchanged notes on the subject, in one of which Mr. Hughes used these words: * * * "confirm this Government in its belief that the adverse claims which have been urged as excluding the Federal Telegraph Company from participating with the Chinese Government in establishing wireless communications are founded upon assertions of monopolistic or preferential rights, in the field of Chinese Governmental enterprise, which cannot be reconciled either with the treaty rights of American citizens in China, or with the principle of the open door."

Britain and Denmark Object.

The Japanese protest was not the only complication. Hardly had it been filed at the Wai Chiao-pu when two other Governments also entered the field and protested that the American contract infringed rights which in former years were granted by the Chinese Government to their nationals. The British and Danish Governments separately (but I believe in private collusion) advanced claims in behalf of British and Danish cable companies to the effect that those concerns had especial and exclusive communication rights with China.

That made the situation at once complicated and interesting. There were three separate foreign concerns each claiming to have what amounts to a monopoly of the same thing, under three distinct agreements. How there can be three legitimate monopolies of one thing is not plain; but the Japanese, British and Danish Legations in Peking seemed to see no discrepancy in their positions, and, indeed, for some time they acted evidently in diplomatic sympathy with each other.

The motives of those moves were obvious. Those three Governments simply combined to prevent an outsider from breaking their hold on communications and their future development. (It appears that the Danish cable company really is British owned.)

In fact, any monopolistic claims of the British and Danish cable companies, based on old agreements made in the early stage of transmarine telegraphs, long ago were vitiated by the march of events.

Russia's advance eastward brought land telegraph lines to cross the frontier of China and hook up with China's internal telegraphs. Also, after Japan got a foothold in Manchuria and annexed Korea, her land telegraph lines entered China. A German cable (now Japanese) broke into the ring from the Caroline Islands after Germany acquired Tsing-tao. And an American company (Commercial Pacific Cable), pushing westward to give the United States direct communication with its Far Eastern frontier and naval station, the Philippines, landed a cable from Guam at Shanghai.

Governments Installed Wireless.

Then came wireless telegraphy.

The French built a radio installation in the French Concession in Shanghai, which now is strong enough to communicate directly with Europe, and which connects with a French plant in Peking. The American Government erected a wireless plant in its legation ground in Peking which can reach the Philippines and Hawaii. The Japanese put a wireless station in their legation in Peking. Not much attention was paid to the Chinese Government in making those provisions, although in each case its nominal assent was obtained, I believe.

The significant point is that any alleged monopolistic rights inhering with those early cable agreements had been washed out for many years by scientific discovery, coupled with a desire of Governments for strategical communications under their control.

It was very interesting, therefore, to observe some important Governments trying, by a process of diplomatic circumlocution, to hold advantages which control of communications with and in China gave them politically and strategically, and commercially; and particularly their efforts to prevent Americans from breaking into that ring. So far the American contract, although now free of diplomatic obstruction in some degree, has been held up. The how and why of that are complicated.

One reason for delay is shifts in the corporate entity of the American contractors. The original company which got the contract has become connected with the Radio Corporation of America. Then since that contract was signed there has been great progress in knowledge of radio and great changes in radio equipment and methods. Those discoveries required changes of the agreement.

The contract has been revised, conditions to satisfy the Chinese Government have been met, everything is prepared to move definitely in construction; yet the final agreement remains always lacking something, perhaps the signature of a Minister, perhaps a trifling change of phraseology. But always something.

Private Negotiations Go On.

Meanwhile other factors have appeared. The marine cable companies, thwarted in their attempt to establish exclusive rights in China, apparently have turned to an effort either to obtain a majority interest in the principal radio companies or to effect some kind of amalgamation and working agreement with them in oversea business. Investigations of the United States Government in the course of its study of world communications and its effort to bring about international agreement for their impartial regulation revealed that some supposedly American cables really are owned abroad.

The Japanese-built wireless station near Peking, which is the nucleus of Japan's diplomatic effort to establish a radio monopoly in China, was completed some years ago. It never has worked properly and now it is practically obsolete. Behind the scenes of diplomatic action efforts are being made to bring the Japanese plant into agreement with the Radio Corporation of America, under a general plan of cooperation in Eastern Asia and the Pacific. This scheme so far has not gone through because, for one reason, the Japanese want to put in their Peking plant at an exorbitant valuation. They seem to want to capitalize in this way their power of diplomatic obstruction.

The first diplomatic position of the American Government—that any monopolistic foreign rights in China contradict the Open Door—seems to be established. Opposition to radio installations here under American management, and with American equipment, no longer really takes that ground. If those foreign concessionaires have not yet done so, the major Foreign Offices have come to realize that no one Government and no single set of nationals, corporate or other, will be allowed hereafter to control international communications, or to establish a foreign monopoly of communications in and with China.

I will not trouble to show the importance of communications in modern civilization, and how rapid and copious interchange of information and ideas among peoples and nations tends to dissipate prejudices and suspicions and to prevent serious misunderstandings. That can be taken as granted.

Fears "High Cost and Meddling."

And nowadays the peoples of different nations and in remote parts of the earth want to know about each other. Science has provided a way to rend the old veils. Only high cost and the meddling of Governments block greater and freer international press and oral radio services.

For a while, a year or two ago, American naval radios in the Pacific were permitted to transmit a limited amount of press telegrams at a charge of about one-seventh the marine cable rate; but the outcry (initiated, of course, by the interested corporations) about Government competition with private enterprise stopped that. And one foresees that, possibly, after this particular diplomatic case passes into oblivion, and up-to-date radio installations in China are operating, we may be faced with a radio-cable combine which will keep press and other transmission rates high.

It is evident that this question ultimately will demand the supervision of Governments, not a supervision actuated as in the past almost wholly by national political and strategical considerations, but, as now with international letter posts, by broad requirements of world policy and peace.

HOLDS MOVIES HYPNOTIZE.

LONDON, April 11 (AP).—Films hypnotize many spectators and consequently British audiences should be provided with more pictures reflecting British sentiments rather than the sentiments of other countries, so Dr. H. P. Newsholme, medical officer of Croyden, said in a recent speech on the effect of moving pictures.

"The darkness, concentrated attention and the stimulation of one sense by a bright light," he said, "tend to produce a hypnotic condition in the audience. Intense films may penetrate to the sub-conscious mind and potently affect the character of the observer.

"The great problem is to find some means of diminishing the intensity of the effect of objectionable films," he said.

Van Buren Portrait Brings $140.

LONDON, April 11 (AP).—A portrait of Martin Van Buren, eighth President of the United States, by C. C. Ingham, realized 28 guineas (about $140) when offered for sale recently at Christies's art rooms. The portrait measures 35 by 28 inches, and the President is depicted in a black coat with a document in his hand.

GUARD FOR NEGRO REMOVED

The police guard at the home of Samuel A. Browne, negro letter carrier, at 67 Fairview Avenue, Castleton Hill, S. I., which has been maintained every night since July 13, was removed last night.

For more than a year Browne's home, the only negro home in the section, was the scene of intermittent night attacks by various persons, who uprooted his shrubs and broke windows. Browne had refused to sell his home to a white person. Last year, after a grand jury action, Musco M. Robertson, a real estate dealer living next door, was indicted with five "John Does" for conspiracy. He is at liberty under $1,000 bail awaiting trial. Browne had filed suit against Robertson and five other neighbors for $100,000 damages.

As soon as Browne learned that a policeman would no longer stand guard he got in touch with Police Headquarters and protested. He said he would appear there this morning to make an effort to have the guard restored. Failing in this effort, he said, he would call upon people of his own race to give him protection.

The reason for the removal of the guard was not learned.

SARATOGA TO CELEBRATE

Centennial of Incorporation Will Be Observed This Week.

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., April 11 (AP).—Flags will fly in Saratoga Springs this week in celebration of the centennial of the incorporation of the community as a village on April 17, 1826. By proclamation of Mayor Knapp and with the cooperation of churches, fraternal societies and civic organizations, the week will be devoted to paying a tribute to the settlers who laid the foundation of this resort.

Musty records, stored in old office safes, disclose, however, that the community existed as a watering place long before it was decided to have a formal government. Like the history of much of northern New York, it dates back to a patent granted by the British King giving large tracts of virgin lands to private ownership. In this case it was Colonel Peter Schuyler who received the "Saraghtoga" patent in 1684. Five years later settlers built a house on Fish Creek, some distance from the present site of Saratoga Springs. But the Indians burned it down, and by other raids discouraged further colonization at that time.

Almost a hundred years later Sir William Johnson heard from his Indians of a famous spring from which the Indians were accustomed to drink to cure their ailments. Carried through the deep woods on a litter he came to the famous High Rock spring, and according to tradition, was cured. The results of his visit spread the fame of the waters.

This week these early days are to be the subject of talks before the civic organizations, the luncheon clubs, and in the churches, culminating in a public meeting and dance in Convention Hall Friday, April 16.

The story of the Battle of Saratoga, a few miles to the westward, will also be told by Saratogans who have been interested in preserving the old battlefield, now a mass of tangled weeds.

ENGLISH CHOIR ON STRIKE.

For the fifth Sunday in succession, says The London Times of Monday, March 29, there was no choir at St. John's Church, Bierley, Bradford. The paper continues:

"The choristers are on strike because the vicar, the Rev. A. F. White, decided that one of their members, who had obtained a divorce against his wife, must, if he re-married, leave the choir. The other members of the choir held that their fellow-member was blameless and demanded his unconditional membership.

"Negotiations having failed to bring about a settlement, the Bishop of Bradford conferred with the vicar, the church wardens, and four representatives of the choir, with the result that the Bishop upheld the vicar's view. In a statement the Bishop said:

"'The vicar takes a point of view which is perfectly legitimate according to the canon law of the Church, and I cannot do otherwise than uphold him. The vicar is prepared to invite the old members of the choir to return, but they must go back on his conditions. I think they are quite good conditions, and I have told the choir representatives so. I think it is a condition which the man himself ought to accept.'"

NEW DANCE GIVEN AT GUTHRIE CHURCH

RECTOR ABSENT IN EUROPE

Officials Deny Program Has Any Relation to That Barred by Bishop.

A demonstration of eurythmy, a so-called "new art of movement" which the ordinary beholder might easily confuse with interpretive dancing, was given in the Episcopal Church of St. Mark's-in-the-Bouwerie, following the brief afternoon religious service yesterday.

For more than an hour seven women, in loose classic gowns, danced under gleaming floodlights before a silent congregation which filled the darkened church. One of the dancers was Avia MacKaye. She gave a eurythmic interpretation of a soliloquy from "Jeanne d'Arc," a play by her father, Percy MacKaye, who read the passage from the rear balcony of the church while his daughter, in a blue gown suggestive of a peasant's costume, went through the dance on the improvised stage in front of the altar rail.

Dr. Guthrie Is Abeent.

Officials of the church said at the close of the eurythmic demonstration that it bore no relation to the eurythmic ritual which was given at the church some time ago and which called forth the sharp disapproval of Bishop William T. Manning. The Rev. Dr. William Norman Guthrie, rector of the church, who was responsible for the presentation of the eurythmic ritual, is now in Europe on leave, and, according to other officials of the church, knew nothing of the dances presented yesterday. It was because of his presentation of the eurythmic ritual that Bishop Manning cut off St. Mark's-in-the-Bouwerie from Episcopal visitation.

Yesterday's program was presented by members of the Goetheanum School of Eurythmy, inaugurated by Rudolph Steiner, at Dornach, Switzerland, and represented in America by Lucy van der Pals Neuscheller. Frau Neuscheller herself led the dancing yesterday.

Tells of New Art.

After a brief religious service, curtains were drawn before the altar, the church was darkened, floodlights on the balcony were directed at the stage, and O. D. Wannamaker, a member of the Anthroposophical Society, which is sponsoring eurythmy in this country, spoke briefly of Rudolph Steiner, originator of the so-called new art form, and of the nature of eurythmy.

The program consisted of nearly a dozen numbers, many of them dramatically affective, interpretative of poetry and music. The first number, presented by Frau Neuscheller and five companions in flowing white gowns, portrayed the spirit of the ancient Greek greeting. Then followed interpretations of poems and music, read or played from the rear balcony.

After a brief intermission, the Cathedral scene from Goethe's "Faust" was presented, with the assistance of the choir. Eurythmy was defined on a leaflet distributed before the service as "a new art movement in which sound is transposed into visible expression by the human body," and as "visible speech, visible song."

ENGLISH IN RUSSIAN CHURCH

Services to Be in Two Languages, Dean Cheelle Announces.

Services in English will supplement the present form of worship in the Russian Orthodox Cathedral of St. Nicholas, 15 East Ninety-seventh Street, according to announcement yesterday by the Rev. A. J. Cheelle, Dean of the cathedral.

The Dean officiated at the services yesterday in the absence of Archbishop John S. Kedrovsky, installed as Metropolitan last week with the aid of a police escort. There was no disorder in or outside the cathedral, as was the case the Sunday before when members of the church disagreed as to who should have charge of its spiritual affairs.

Policemen Harris Blate and Joseph Mansfield were detailed from the East 104th Street Station to prevent any demonstrations. They kept every one moving on the sidewalk and broke up such impromptu meetings as started near the church.

Divorce Missing Husband.

BEACON, N. Y., April 11 (AP).—An "Enoch Arden" divorce has been granted Mrs. Adelaide Lohman, 28, whose husband, Clark Lohman, left their home here seven years ago "to go for a walk," and never returned. Mrs. Lohman told Justice A. H. Seeger of the Supreme Court she believed her husband is dead, as they were on amicable terms when he disappeared.

ASKS FUND FOR LIGHTHOUSE

Association for Blind Makes Appeal for $40,000 for Year's Expenses.

The New York Association for the Blind, which maintains in its "Lighthouse" at 111 East Fifty-ninth Street a school and social centre for 1,500 of New York's blind men and women, is celebrating its twentieth anniversary this month. In a report by Miss Daisy Fiske Rogers, Recording Secretary, the public is asked to contribute $40,000, running expenses for the current year.

"Some take up typewriting, stenography or dictaphone operating," the report says. "Some become skilled basket weavers or rug makers. Their products are sold to the public at the Lighthouse Craft Shop. There is a special floor given over to the music school where the blind receive instructions in violin, piano, organ and voice. The association in many cases loans pianos to the students so that they may practice at home. Last year $113,-390.80 was turned over to the blind largely in payments for work."

STAKE WORLD CAMP FOR GIRL SCOUTS

MEETING OPENS ON MAY 11

Special to The New York Times.

BRIARCLIFF MANOR, N. Y., April 11.—Leaders of the Girl Scout movement began today staking out ground for the World Camp of Girl Scouts and Girl Guides, which opens at Camp Edith Macy, near here, on May 11.

About 450 Scout and Guide leaders from thirty-nine countries will be present at the encampment. Most of them will arrive on the Olympic on May 5, and after a visit to the cities of the Atlantic seaboard will come to Briarcliff for a week of camping in American outdoor style. It will be the second World Conference of Girl Scouts, the first having been held in England in 1924.

Not only will they bring their national customs, but their national cooking recipes as well. Each one of the thirty-nine countries, according to present plans, will have a chance to cook a meal. The American Scout leaders, in turn, will give their guests demonstrations of American camping methods.

From the Great Hall, a central meeting lodge with massive stone walls and a huge fireplace, there is a magnificent view over miles of rolling Westchester hills and ridges. Four separate camp units, each one on a wooded hilltop, will house the foreign visitors when they arrive. Each will have a large wooden fireplace cabin, a kitchen building, a wash-house and a group of new white tents.

Mrs. Jane Deeter Rippin, National Director of the Girl Scouts, who supervised the work today, announced an extensive program of entertainment for the visitors from abroad. Soon after landing, on May 5, they will be received by Mayor Walker at the City Hall. The opening of Camp Edith Macy, on May 11, will be marked by a campfire at night in memory of Mrs. Macy, for whom the camp was named. Standard bearers of each of the thirty-nine nations will carry their national colors to the fireside, adding the visitors on this occasion will be Lady Baden-Powell, International President of the Girl Scouts and Girl Guides, and Mrs. Herbert Hoover, Chairman of the Board of Directors in this country.

A "Highway to the World" will be dedicated on May 12, with the planting of one tree for each nation, bordering a picturesque road which leads to the main automobile highway. On the same afternoon Dr. George E. Vincent, Director of the Rockefeller Foundation, will address the delegates on "International Health." Mrs. John D. Rockefeller Jr. will entertain the Scout leaders at tea at Pocantico Hills on the afternoon of May 14. The conference will then culminate in a rally of 4,000 Girl Scouts of Westchester County, who will gather on the estate of Col. Franklin Q. Brown at Dobbs Ferry. This will give the foreign visitors their first opportunity to see a large group of American Girl Scouts in uniform.

After a visit to Niagara Falls, the delegates will sail for home from Montreal, on May 19.

WAR ON FAKE BARGAINS.

Housewives Joining Fight, Says Fair Trade League Secretary.

The housewife has awakened to a realization of her interest in the suppression of "fake bargain sales," Edmond A. Whittier, Secretary Treasurer of the American Fair Trade League, said yesterday in a bulletin notifying League members that hearings on the Capper-Kelly bill, designed to eliminate such sales, would begin before the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce on April 22.

"The interest of the general public in this bill," said Mr. Whittier, "lies chiefly in the fact that it seeks to protect consumers against deceptive combination selling which, under the guise of offering well known standard merchandise at cut prices, gives the bargain sale operators an opportunity to dispose of unadvertised and unguaranteed goods at an exorbitant profit."

EDISON AIDS GUARDIAN FUND

The American Guardian Association, for the care and relief of abandoned American children in the Philippines, announced yesterday receipt of a contribution of $100 from Thomas A. Edison.

"Mr. Edison is never too busy with his numerous researches and inventions to take a helpful interest in the welfare of his fellows, little or big, wherever located. He is always especially touched by an appeal for the little ones," Newton W. Gilbert, Chairman of the New York City Guardian Association Endowment Campaign, remarked.

It was announced that the association would receive the proceeds from three one-act plays to be presented next Sunday at the Lenox Little Theatre.

MILK FRAUD TO COST LOSS OF LICENSES

NINE EMPLOYES FACE TRIAL

Charges to Be Served on Them Tomorrow—Hylan Is Called in Queens Investigation.

Health Commissioner Louis I. Harris yesterday issued an executive order to the Bureau of Food and Drugs to revoke the license of any seller of milk convicted of adulterating his product.

Officials of the department said that seldom has more drastic action been taken against offenders as that contained in the order to the bureau which has charge of milk inspection. They said that the order was notice to milk dealers that the Health Department would tolerate no return to the conditions that prevailed prior to the recent crusade of the Health Commissioner, who found that 1,300,000 quarts of milk of the 3,000,000 consumed in this city every day were adulterated.

It was pointed out that in some cases milk sellers who have been brought to court have paid their fines gladly, and that from time to time second and third offenders have proved that the fines imposed did not deter them from continuing their old practices. To make sure that the practice will stop Dr. Harris decided to use his powers to the limit, and it was said that the Assistant Corporation Counsel's representatives, who prosecute such cases, will insist on jail sentences for food adulterators instead of fines.

Formal notices of charges against six suspended employes of the Health Department will be served on them tomorrow, and they will be placed on trial in the Health Department Building on Wednesday.

Former Mayor Hylan and David Hirshfield, Commissioner of Accounts in the last Administration, will appear at the office of District Attorney Richard Newcombe in Queens this week and will be asked to tell what they knew of graft in connection with milk adulteration during the last two years.

When Mr. Hylan was Mayor he ordered Mr. Hirshfield to investigate reports of graft in the handling of milk, and the Commissioner said he followed many important leads but failed to obtain the cooperation of Health Commissioner Frank J. Monaghan. Dr. Monaghan said last week that he cooperated to the utmost with Mr. Hirshfield.

SALESMEN HERE BY PLANE.

Come From St. Louis on Tour of Inspection of Clothing Co. Plants.

Carrying six salesmen of the Curlee Clothing Company of St. Louis, a Sikorsky, eastern-passenger airliner, arrived yesterday at the air mail station at Hadley Field, near New Brunswick, N. J., from St. Louis after making stops at four stations en route. The plane, piloted by Reeve Turner, left St. Louis late Friday afternoon and flew to Dayton, Ohio, where one salesman landed. Other stops were made at Bellefonte, Pa., Harrisburg, Pa., and Middletown, Pa.

The flight will be continued to Roosevelt Field, Mineola, where the New York representative of the company will alight, after which M. F. Franklin, sales manager of the company, who is in charge of the tour, will inspect the company's branches in the New England cities as far as Portland, Me.

FORM TO AID AVON THEATRE.

Americans Will Help Rebuild the Shakespeare Memorial.

An American National Committee has been formed to cooperate with the British Committee to aid in rebuilding and endowing the Shakespeare Memorial Theatre at Stratford-on-Avon which was destroyed by fire last March, according to the announcement yesterday of Percy E. Bullen, Secretary of the committee. The total amount sought is $1,250,000, and this sum will be raised by quotas apportioned to the various English-speaking countries.

Otto Kahn has been named Treasurer of the American committee, according to the announcement and other members are Elihu Root, Charles Evans Hughes, John W. Davis, James M. Beck, Robert Underwood Johnson, Thomas W. Lamont, Oscar S. Straus, Melville E. Stone, Frank L. Polk and Walter Hampden.

MISSING GIRL BACK HOME.

Wasn't Lost at All, Says 6-Year-Old, Though She Was Away All Night.

After squads of detectives and patrolmen had searched east side streets, cellars and vacant houses for more than twelve hours for six-year-old Sadie Gitsuk of 37 Jackson Street, Sadie pushed her way through a crowd in front of her home yesterday morning and announced that she had not been lost at all, but had spent the night with an aunt at 5 Rutgers Slip.

Clad in a pink dress Sadie went for a walk about 7 o'clock Saturday night and when she failed to return, her parents asked the aid of the police in finding her. When morning came with still no trace of the girl, crowds of neighbors, fearing that the child had been kidnapped, came to visit the parents.

As Sadie arrived, her five brothers and sisters rushed to meet her headed by Nellie, the family pup.

DEFEND DR. MERRILL ON RELIGIOUS VIEWS

TO FIGHT FUNDAMENTALISTS

Church Organ Says He Denied the Deity of Christ and That His Position "Looks Slippery."

Because The Presbyterian, a weekly published in Philadelphia, declared in an editorial in its issue of March 25 that the Rev. Dr. William P. Merrill, pastor of the Brick Presbyterian Church, Fifth Avenue and Thirty-seventh street, "is not an atheist, but is certainly in a position which looks very slippery," Dr. Merrill will make a protest this morning in the form of a written statement at the annual meeting of the Presbytery of New York in the chapel of the First Presbyterian Church, Fifth Avenue and Eleventh Street. The Presbyterian also declared that Dr. Merrill has denied the deity of Jesus Christ and that "Dr. Merrill does not believe Christ is God."

The editor of The Presbyterian is the Rev. Dr. David S. Kennedy. The publication is knuown as the organ of the extreme orthodox wing of the denomination.

It is understood that Dr. Merrill made a request of the Moderators' Council at its meeting last Monday for a place on the docket of the presbytery today for his statement and that he did this on the ground of "personal privilege" because he had been attacked by a fellow minister.

Dr. Merrill contends that the editorial contains false statements and officers and members of the Brick Church resent the attack made upon their pastor.

Text of the Editorial.

Dr. William Pierson Merrill published in a recent issue of The Christian Work a sermon on "Can I Believe in God?" Credit must be given to Dr. Merrill for his frankness. He declares himself with all boldness. There is no difficulty in understanding what he means. We have followed his course since we were both young men, and it has been marked with an increasing departure from the Scriptural and evangelical faith. He began with a denial of the integrity and reliability of the Scriptures and he keeps that up to his latest publications.

He moved on to the denial of the deity of Christ and the substitutionary character of His atonement, and declares in his article on "The Evolution of the Cross" that the death of Jesus was like the death of any other good man, and hence there is no resurrection from the dead.

There is but one final and last step left for him, and that is atheism or the denial of the existence of God. In his sermon Dr. Merrill is not an atheist, but he certainly is in a position that looks very slippery. We can note but a very few of these slippery places.

He says of the unbelief of this age: "It is characterized by far-going intellectual honesty." He also acknowledges that this unbelief sometimes goes "so far as to become strained and exaggerated."

There could hardly be a fairer description of Dr. Merrill's own utterances as we have read them for some years and as they appear in his recent publications. He quotes the Bible's definition of an atheist. "The fool hath said in his heart, There is no God." He then defines a "fool as one who lives like a fool, the sinner, the immoral man, the loose liver," and he says such "cannot really believe in God."

Says Quotation is Untrue.

This last quotation is not true. Some professed atheists boast of their morality. Some of the wicked men have believed in God and their sense of their accountability to God has given them their greatest agony.

Dr. Merrill's definition of a fool is due to incorrect exegesis. The word for fool in the Hebrew is nabal and it means empty. So the fool is an empty soul, a man with a vacuum his rational being. The idea of God is as essential to the rational mind as is the idea of cause and effect. Neither can be taught. Both are directly recognized by the rational mind. If a man lacks the idea of cause and effect, or of right and wrong, he would be a defective. So whenever a man lacks the idea of God he also is defective, empty of a certain rational power—a nabal—a fool. This is sustained by the general observation of mankind. Under all conditions, among all nations and ages, men in their normal condition believe in the existence of God. They may not know who or what God is. But His existence they a" recognize and the failure to recognize here means a fool, an idiot.

Paul gives very full account of this in his Epistle to the Romans, first chapter. Among other things he says: "That which may be known of God is manifest in them; for God hath showed it unto them. Professing themselves to be wise, they became fools." And even as they did not like to retain God in their knowledge, God gave them over to a reprobate mind.

Here is a picture of atheism and its results that is sufficient to horrify any rational soul. Dr. Merrill in his search as to how to know God rightly resorts to Christ's own statement when He says, "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father."

But Dr. Merrill gives a most erroneous exegesis of that text when he makes it mean "He that hath seen goodness, truth, love, personality, at its highest has seen God." A perfect man would not and dare not say "He that hath seen me has seen God." That would be blasphemy. Because Christ is God, God manifest in the flesh, He said, "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father."

Dr. Merrill does not believe Christ is God and hence he cannot accept His saying as He meant it.

Presbytery Action Uncertain.

What action the Presbytery can take is a matter of discussion, for Dr. Kennedy is not a member of the same body. He is a member of the Presbytery of Philadelphia.

Dr. Merrill did not preach yesterday, his place being taken at both the morning and afternoon services by the Rev. Dr. James M. Farr, the co-pastor. Dr. Merrill, accompanied by Mrs. Merrill, left on Saturday for Lake Placid to rest. Dr. Merrill's health has been impaired for several months.

The fact that the next meeting of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, will be held beginning the third Thursday in May gives added interest to the incident. Dr. Merrill is very popular among all but the small group of Fundamentalists in the Presbytery and the attack on him, it is said, may help elect a solid deputation of sixteen Modernists to the assembly, to be held in Baltimore.

This is not the first time that The Presbyterian has attacked Dr. Merrill. Two years ago at the General Assembly in Grand Rapids he was not re-elected as a member of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions, having lost the votes of the Fundamentalist Commissioners.

250 IN BIBLE PARADE ALONG FIFTH AVENUE

The Young People's Conference Marchers Distribute 7,000 Books to Hotels of City.

Parading up Fifth Avenue from Twenty-ninth to Forty-eighth Street, with 7,000 Bibles under their arms, 250 members of the Young People's Conference of the Greater New York Federation of Churches yesterday afternoon distributed the books to a score of hotels.

The paraders, before beginning their march, attended a service at the Marble Collegiate Church, Fifth Avenue and Twenty-ninth Street. The Rev. Dr. Daniel A. Poling, pastor of the church, delivered a short address. Dr. George William Carter, General Secretary of the New York Bible Society, explained that the 7,000 Bibles to be distributed would bring the total number distributed by his society to hotels up to 77,000.

After the service, men, women and children representing Protestant churches of all denominations formed in front of the Marble Collegiate Church for the parade, which was headed by the Salvation Army Band and two color bearers, with the American flag and the emblem of the New York Bible Society. A police escort of twenty-five officers of Traffic A, headed by Captain William Kelliher, kept the streets clear.

The line of march was north on Fifth Avenue to Forty-eighth Street, thence to the New York Bible Society headquarters, at 5 East Forty-eighth Street, where short services were observed. At the head of the parade marched Dr. Carter and Dr. Poling.

Among the hotels which received Bibles were the McAlpin, Alpine, Senton, Marie Antoinette, Pennsylvania, Flanders, Arlington and Alexandria.

MOTORCYCLIST IS KILLED.

When a front tire on his motorcycle blew out, Meyer Levine, 22 years old, of 60 Pike Street, was fatally injured at 186th Street and the Speedway, yesterday afternoon. He was thrown ten feet over the handlebars and his head struck the curbstone. He died two hours later at the Jewish Memorial Hospital.

Patrolman Thomas Wallace, 29 years old, attached to Motorcycle Squad No. 2, suffered a fractured right foot yesterday when his motorcycle struck the curb and tipped over on top of him as he was starting to pursue a speeding automobile at Franklin and Calyer Streets, in the Greenpoint section of Brooklyn. He was taken to the Greenpoint Hospital. Wallace lives at 1,822 East Thirty-seventh Street, Brooklyn.

LARGE GAIN SHOWN BY CATHOLIC CHURCH

24,352 PRIESTS IN COUNTRY

The Roman Catholic Church in the United States gained 224,694 members during 1925, according to P. J. Kenedy & Sons, 44 Barclay Street, publishers of the Official Catholic Directory, the 1926 edition of which was issued yesterday. This is practically one-third of the total membership gain by Christian churches in 1925, the publishers assert.

The statistics compiled by the company show that there are now 24,352 Roman Catholic priests in this country, 12,592 young men preparing for the priesthood and 2,072,466 pupils in parochial schools.

The announcement says that the gain in church membership "is especially interesting just now in view of the fact that statistics published in the April 3 issue of The Christian Herald show a total gain in membership for all Christian churches of 753,656.

"The largest gain made by any church in the United States, according to The Christian Herald, is that of the fifteen bodies in the Methodist group, a gain of 220,183. The Christian Herald statistics give only 85 per cent. of the Roman Catholic figures, since the compiler, Dr. Carroll, deducts 15 per cent. for children who have not been confirmed and who have not made First Communion.

"The total gain for the Roman Catholic Church is over 4,000 higher than the figures given for the fifteen bodies in the Methodist group, and the total figure shows that practically one-third of the membership gains among the Christian churches in 1925 was made by the Catholic church.

"The gain in church membership, while much larger than reported last year, namely 94,241, is still very far from showing the true gain made in the Catholic Church. Seven dioceses retain year after year the same figures for Catholic population, and twenty-eight dioceses this year repeat the Catholic population of 1925.

"Data regarding the clergy is more accurate than that given for the Catholic population. In the reports received from the various dioceses changes are made in practically every diocese. There are now 452 more secular clergy and 20 more priests of religious orders than there were in 1925. The total number of priests in the United States is 24,352. Last year it was 23,697. The increase, therefore, is even more substantial than it was last year, when the gain was 882. This year it was 655.

"Not so many new churches, however, were established in 1925 as the increase is only thirty-six. While this is not so large as last year, when 138 new churches were established, still it compares favorably with the total gain among the Christian churches of 165 shown in The Christian Herald summary.

"One new seminary was established, and there are now 12,592 seminarians, an increase of 1,220 over last year. Two more colleges for boys have been founded, and twenty-five more academies and colleges for girls have been built. There are 327 more parochial schools, the total number being now 6,815. And there are 2,072,466 pupils attending these schools, an increase of 33,842 over last year."

DOUBTS BEAUTIES ARE DUMB

CHICAGO, April 11 (AP).—The kind of girl described as "beautiful but dumb" never existed, Patty Horn, co-ed preacher, told a radio audience last night from Station KYW.

The 19-year-old Hawkeye lass, Drake University student and occupant of the Christian Church pulpit of Promise City, Iowa, described the ideal girl and urged femininity, true beauty and love of home as three salient characteristics of attractive young womanhood.

No woman can be beautiful but dumb, Miss Horn contended, because if she is dumb she is not truly beautiful. Beauty, she said, is as much a part of mind and soul as of body. The really beautiful girl will reflect her charm in daily Christian living, in unselfishness, in intelligence and individualism, as much as in shapeliness of figure or comeliness of her hair and eyes.

Like Tennyson's heroine, her eyes, Miss Horn said, will be "homes of silent prayer."

"Femininity is an attribute which too many girls seem to be trying to 'live down'. Develop it. Let your voice be like that described by the poet, 'soft and low, an excellent thing in woman'. Don't overdo cosmetics. Don't use too much slang."

Miss Horn made it plain that she is no prude. She grants that "some slang is expressive" and that cosmetics judiciously and sparingly used have a place in the feminine scheme, the batik dress and the chiffon hose which she wore before the microphone, and her bobbed black hair testified to her belief that woman's emancipation from the fashions of two decades ago has not been for the worse.

JAPANESE EVANGELIST DUE.

Lieutenant Commissioner Gunpei Yamamuro, newly appointed head of the Japanese Salvation Army, and the first native officer to hold that place, is arriving in New York today aboard the Cunard liner, Andania, from Hamburg. Recurring from London to Tokio to take charge of all the Salvation Army operations in Japan, Lieutenant Commissioner Yamamuro will attend special meetings here before departing for the Pacific Coast.

He will be present at a meeting to be conducted this evening by Commissioner Thomas Estill in Memorial Hall, Salvation Army Headquarters, 122 West Fourteenth Street. Commissioner Estill was closely associated with Commissioner Yamamuro in Japan many years ago. Commissioner Yamamuro will conduct a meeting in the Scandinavian Hall of the Salvation Army, 520 Fiftieth Street, Brooklyn, on Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock, and will attend a meeting with the Salvation Army forces of Brooklyn on Thursday evening.

An announcement by the Salvation Army of New York says: "Born in the interior of Japan of extremely poor parents, Commissioner Yamamuro nevertheless was blessed with a boundless stock of ambition which his mother fostered at great sacrifice to herself, and thus aided him through the University of Tokio. Raised in the faith of Confucius, Young Yamamuro was an ardent disciple and it was not until his university days that he heard Christianity preached. Eventually he became a member of the Salvation Army and has had a brilliant career in that organization since he became an officer in 1895."

HOTEL AT LIBERTY BURNS

Liberty House Loss is $100,000, but the Forty Guests Escape.

LIBERTY, N. Y., April 11.—The Liberty House, on Main Street, the largest hotel here, having 85 rooms, was destroyed by fire that threatened for a time to spread through the downtown district. The damage was estimated at $100,000.

The fire started on the roof of the three-story wooden structure just before 6 o'clock, and, fanned by a high wind, the flames spread rapidly. About 40 guests escaped with their possessions before the fire gained headway.

Sparks were blown in all directions and the roofs of near-by buildings were ignited. To prevent the flames from spreading, fire apparatus was summoned from seven neighboring communities, and prevented damage to structures around it.

The hotel was erected about 25 years ago.

Commissioner Hull Says Laws Should Be Altered for Humane Interpretation.

PANKEN ASKS LIBERALISM

Says Inflow of Adult Workers Has Made America and Decries Export of Capital.

Amendment of the immigration laws to permit of a more humane elasticity was urged yesterday afternoon by Harry E. Hull, Commissioner General of Immigration, who addressed the seventeenth annual meeting of the Hebrew Sheltering and Immigrant Aid Society at Public School 62, Hester and Essex Streets.

"Our present immigration laws," said Mr. Hull, "are a medley of afterthoughts, for since the Chinese Exclusion act of 1882, many have been passed and not one has been repealed." Mr. Hull called the laws a conflicting mass, and a trouble to courts that were forced to interpret their exact and collective meaning.

Advocating the admittance of fathers and mothers of American citizens without regard to quotas, Mr. Hull said it would be an act of mercy to permit entry of such parents "before they are dead."

"Artists and skilled artisans that could be of use to American industry should be brought in outside the quota," Mr. Hull continued. "Ten to twenty thousand of such people a year would benefit the United States. We could assimilate them with ease and with no danger to our civilization."

While making his suggestions, Mr. Hull repeated two or three times that he favored the present immigration laws "in the main," but could not see the advantageous difference between 164,000 immigrants a year and 175,000. The figure, he said, should be elastic to care for the special cases that literally cried for recognition.

John L. Bernstein, President of the Aid Society, which is known here more briefly as HIAS, delivered the annual message. He asked for the passage of bills introduced into Congress by Senator James W. Wadsworth and Representative Nathan D. Perlman that provided for the granting of non-quota visas to close relatives of citizens and declarants.

President Bernstein spoke of the "gratifying" condition of Jewish immigrants in Cuba and South America and described the help extended by HIAS to the jewry of Europe.

While Mr. Hull was making his plea for a humanitarian lightening of the immigration laws, Judge Jacob Panken, speaking at the Naturalization Aid League just across Chatham Square at 175 East Broadway, was expressing similar opinions. Judge Panken called for "a more liberal immigration policy."

"Immigrants are mostly adults," said Judge Panken, "and America is what she is because of the 31,000,000 adults who have entered this country fully equipped to make use of their strength in the development of our economic power. The nations of the world have contributed to the wealth of America."

Restriction of immigration, in the opinion of Judge Panken, meant a deplorable outflow of American capital to foreign lands. "In twelve years," he said, "American capital invested in other countries has increased sixfold. The emigration of capital presages permanent unemployment," he concluded.

WOMAN CAPTURES INTRUDER

Captured by a determined young woman, who clung to him in spite of blows, Joseph Cohen, 32 years old, of 147 Essex Street, Manhattan, was held in $25,000 bail by Magistrate Short in Bridge Plaza Court, Brooklyn, yesterday on charges of assault and robbery. He will be further examined in court April 12.

The complainant was Miss Augusta Mieters, 23 years old, who told the police that she answered the doorbell at her home at 376 Keap Street, Brooklyn, Saturday night to find four men who said they represented the Furriers' Union and wanted to consult her father, Jacob Mieters. But upon being admitted, she said, the men began to ransack the house, taking $50 in cash and two diamond rings valued at $500 each. The young woman said they knocked the instrument from her hands when she tried to telephone to a police station.

When they started out of the house, however, she grabbed one of them and held on to him desperately, in spite of the fact that he punched her in the face, she said. Her screams brought Patrolman Louis Merkle of the Clymer Street Station, and the man was arrested.

RAIN HALTS CADET PARADE.

WEST POINT, April 11.—Soggy earth on the parade grounds of the Military Academy, due to the recent rains, prevented the first annual parade of cadets today, which had been arranged by order of Brig. Gen. Merch B. Stewart and the gala event went over for one week.

There are now 1,011 cadets on the rolls.

Hundreds of automobile tourists from New York City and elsewhere are planning to motor to West Point for the parade over the new scenic highway along the east side of the Hudson above Peekskill and across the new Peekskill-Bear Mountain bridge.

Major C. B. Hodges, new cadet commandant, who will succeed General Stewart in that detail, is due here on Thursday. Major W. H. Dodds of the Academy is acting cadet commandant.

The cadet enrolment is 150 short of the full complement allowed by Congress, but it will be raised to the maximum within three months.

CITY BREVITIES.

Major Gen. John F. O'Ryan of the Transit Commission will be the principal speaker at the Community Parade, arranged for the Memorial Day celebration at Mount Kisco.

Lawson Purdy, General Director of the Charity Organization Society, which is endeavoring to raise $150,000 for its work on behalf of 2,502 indigent families, announced yesterday that $118,000 had been obtained. The remainder was urgently needed, he said.

Forty members of the Torrey Botanical Club inspected the William Boyce Thompson Institute of Plant Research at Yonkers, yesterday, led by Dr. William Crocker, director of the institute. A demonstration of "ultra-photography" was given by Dr. William J. Youden.

The League for Political Education announced yesterday that Mayor Walker would address its annual luncheon meeting Friday, April 23, at the Astor. Others scheduled to speak include William Lyons Phelps, Channing Pollock, Fannie Hurst, Mrs. John T. Pratt and the Rev. Ralph W. Sockman.

The Ladies of Charity of St. John the Evangelist Roman Catholic Church and the St. Vincent de Paul Society of the same church will hold their joint entertainment and reception tonight at Terrace Garden in East Fifty-eighth Street.

Another Death Probable From Long Island Wreck—Two Held on Homicide Charges.

At Baur's home last night his two youngest children, Florence, 10 years old, and Nicholas, 3, were wondering when their father would come with the piece of cake he had promised them when he left for his work Saturday morning. They did not know he was dead. The widow, and the oldest daughter, Florence, 12 years old, knew.

Mrs. Baul said she and her husband had experienced a great deal of misfortune lately. Only recently he had been forced to allow a $1,000 life insurance policy to lapse because of lack of funds. Baul will be buried on Wednesday. Funeral services will be held at St. Rita's Roman Catholic Church, Atlantic Avenue and Essex Street. Interment will be in St. John's Cemetery.

In St. Mary's Hospital Edward Novak, 22 years old, of 2,823 114th Street, Richmond Hill, is in a critical condition with a fractured spine. It was feared last night that he, too, would die.

Walter Thompson, conductor of the work train, and Bernard Krause, foreman of a gang of laborers employed on it, who were arrested a few hours after the crash on the order of District Attorney Dodd, were arraigned before Magistrate Howard Dale in the Gates Avenue Court and held in $2,500 bail each on technical charges of homicide.

More than fifty persons were injured in the crash, but all except Baul and Novak were able to leave for their homes after receiving treatment from ambulance doctors. Baul was pinned in the wreckage when the first and second cars of the passenger train were telescoped and it took firemen and policemen working with acetylene torches, hooks and axes almost two hours to extricate him. He received the last rites of the Roman Catholic Church from Father William McLaughlin of St. Gregory's Church while the rescuers worked.

Society Has Aided 750,000 Children.

The Brooklyn Children's Aid Society has helped nearly 750,000 children in the three score years of its existence, Arthur E. Wakeman, Director of the society, says in the sixtieth annual report, made public yesterday. The society was originally founded to take care of Civil War veterans. During the past year it aided 9,919 persons, chiefly children.

Woodstown (N. J.) Citizens Tire of "Mr. Bell's Original Invention."

Special to The New York Times.

WOODSTOWN, N. J., April 11.—Telephone users here have adopted a novel method to call attention to their need for improved service. Repeated suggestions that more modern telephones be installed have fallen upon deaf ears of officials, citizens declare.

Now stickers are being pasted upon the boxes of the old-fashioned phones. They read: "This is the original telephone equipment invented by Dr. Bell."

The stickers were suggested by John H. Watson, a member of the Woodstown Chamber of Commerce. Every one who cranks a phone to call the operator can read the stickers.

SHOT IN OLD QUARREL.

Two Men Meet Again Two Years After Dispute—One Goes to Hospital.

Two years ago Frank Sullivan of 337 Hancock Street, Long Island City, and a man whose identity the police will not reveal, quarreled. They did not meet again until Saturday night, when both were at a dance in a hall on Prospect Street, Long Island City. The quarrel was renewed and Sullivan suggested they adjourn to the street to conclude it.

Sullivan and several friends went into the street and within a few minutes a shot was heard and Sullivan was wounded in the right breast. He was removed to St. John's Hospital. He will recover. He at first refused to tell the police the name of the man who shot him. Finally he gave in and the police are now searching for the man.

NORWAY IS THRILLED BY NORGE'S SUCCESS

Accomplishments of the Airship Are Hailed There as a National Triumph.

ALL PREPARATIONS READY

Elaborate Program Is Carried Out Over Six Months to Assure Victory for Amundsen.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

OSLO, Norway, April 11.—All Norway is thrilled tonight over the news that the dirigible Norge has arrived safely in Pulham, England, on her long journey to the Arctic. This is the first dirigible Norway has ever owned, which adds to the pride all naturally have in the coming achievement.

Crowds at Oslo were standing before the newspaper bulletins waiting for the latest word, for after the midday message nothing was heard for seven hours and some anxiety was felt.

Preparations are being made to welcome her royally when she arrives in Oslo, with thirty airplanes and fast boats.

The last work has been done to the mooring mast, and the Aero Club has borrowed a company of the King's Guard to help moor and protect the ship.

All the arrangements have been so perfectly timed, after six months' effort, that everything is in readiness at Oslo and all along the route to Spitzbergen, despite the tremendous difficulties to be overcome. This preparation was one of the most arduous tasks ever accomplished in connection with a polar expedition. At King's Bay the largest wooden hangar in the world, 350 feet long and 100 feet high and the same in width, has been built during the long Arctic nights with the aid of batteries of huge electric lights. Thirty men and provisions for six months were sent there late last November, and after laboring through the long darkness and the Arctic storms the last of the construction has just been finished and the shed is now being covered with canvas. All this was done by Norwegians.

Mooring Mast Being Erected.

The mooring mast, made in Italy, and 110 feet high, has just arrived at Spitzbergen and is now being erected for use if the wind prevents housing the dirigible when it first arrives. A similar mast has been erected at Vadsoe on the northern coast for use should storms make the crossing of the sea impracticable when the coast is reached from Leningrad. These masts are made to withstand the heaviest pull exerted on the dirigible and are set in three forty-ton blocks of concrete.

All this work was done under the direction of Alf Bryn, a member of the Aero Club and an engineer.

While this was going on communication was made with forty radio stations in the United States and Alaska. Most of this was done through the Norwegian legations. Lieutenant Riiser-Larsen and Colonel Nobile, the Norge's pilots, made a trip to Russia to obtain the cooperation of the chief of the Aeronautical Bureau, and a hangar was offered to them at Gatchina, near Leningrad. Bryn also went to France and England to obtain permission to land, and the use of a hangar at Seddin, Germany, was obtained if the ship were forced by the wind off her course between England and Oslo. Permission to fly over Germany, Holland, Belgium, Russia, Italy, France, England, Finland, Canada and the United States also had to be obtained.

The shipping of supplies alone was a huge and responsible task, for there could be no chance of overlooking something which might delay the expedition. Hydrogen, gasoline, oil and spare parts were sent to Russia and Vadsoe and spare parts were sent to other possible stopping places en route.

New Device to Be Used.

At Oslo an ingenious device, never before tried, will be used to keep the ship at the desired height when moored. A tank of methylated spirits and water at the foot of the mast is put under pressure of carbon dioxide. From the tank a hose runs to the top of the mast, with two lines to the water ballast tanks. A man stands at a valve on top of the mast and at a signal from the dirigible lets in water to compensate for the expansion of the gas under the sun's rays.

This system was devised by Bryn and may be sent to Vadsoe when the ship leaves here.

More supplies for Spitzbergen will leave in a few days, the most important of which will be 5,000 bottles of hydrogen, enough to fill the bag twice over, or more than 800 tons of hydrogen bottles. Twenty tons of gasoline of two kinds will also be sent. Experiments on the voyage north will determine which will be used. This material will accompany Captain Amundsen and Lincoln Ellsworth with the Norwegian mechanics, who leave Tuesday to ship aboard the Knut Skaalluren at Trondhjem for Spitzbergen.

Only now is it possible to reach there, as the first ship, the Hobby, was stuck in the ice for several days. These two ships are supplemented by the small gunboats Michael, Hans and Heimdal, carrying crews to help land the ship and some Italian mechanics.

This makes a small fleet and army, which with the others accompanying the expedition, including photographers and newspaper men, suggests the lieveliest Summer Spitzbergen ever knew.

Mr. Ellsworth today expressed gratification that President Coolidge had ordered an American flag presented to him to drop at the North Pole with the Norwegian and Italian flags, and said it indicated the cooperation between the three nationalities making the flight, as well as recognizing the fact that the expedition was partly American conceived and largely financed by America.

FRENCH SEE NORGE IN FLIGHT.

Air Posts Kept Ready to Give Any Assistance Needed.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, April 11.—The passage of the Norge over France was without incident. Leaving Marseilles in its wake shortly after 7 o'clock yesterday evening, it steered toward Rochefort to be able to come down should weather conditions make it necessary, but, learning at 11 o'clock that local conditions at Rochefort were not good, it wirelessed it would continue on to England, stopping at Cherbourg if need be.

At fifteen minutes after midnight it passed to the east of Rochefort. At 5 o'clock it was sighted over Laval going in good form. Two hours later it was above Caen, which received a message saying all was well on board and that the dirigible would go on to Pulham, where it should arrive in the middle of the afternoon.

At 9 o'clock the Norge hove in sight of Cherbourg, where the naval air station had been in readiness all night to lend any needed assistance. At 9:30, flying east of the city, the big balloon passed Cape Hogue and despite a strong northwest wind stuck its nose seaward for the south English coast.

In an interview today Dr. Jean Charcot, the French explorer, wishes Captain Amundsen the best of luck in his effort to reach the North Pole by dirigible.

"I have great admiration for Captain Amundsen," he said. "The Norwegian explorer is one of the best equipped men to try to repeat the exploit of Admiral Peary, who was first to get to the North Pole. He has often proved his physical and moral qualifications for such an effort.

"The dirigible should greatly conserve the strength of the explorers and I am sure that Captain Amundsen will make good use of this factor. However, credit should be given to Captain Amundsen and his associates for their nerve. Any grave accident, which obviously could not be repaired on the spot, would wreck the expedition. He has other chances against him. There is the cold and then there is the fog. The hardest luck of all would be to make a successful flight over the Pole and find the surface covered with mists which would prevent observations."

Dr. Charcot said it would be a pleasant surprise if the expedition added anything to human knowledge.

"Peary discovered the Pole, but did not teach us much," he added. "However, Amundsen has my best wishes."

NORGE IS BERTHED SAFELY AT PULHAM

favorable wind her speed began to fall. It was not until 11:20 o'clock that she signaled she was crossing the English coast near Brighton, which meant she had about another 120 miles to cover.

At first there was the suggestion to take the airship over London, where thousands of people were on the lookout for her, but a straight course was taken and the Norge crossed the Thames near Medway and went due northward.

Such was the interest taken in her journey in Pulham and the neighborhood that by motor, horse, bicycle and afoot the whole immediate countryside seemed to be at the aerodrome.

"I like the ship very much," Major Scott said on his arrival. "Her performance is extraordinarily good for her size and I consider she is well suited for this particular expedition."

Has Flown More Than Hop to Pole.

The Norge has already flown more than the distance required for her to fly over the North Pole from Spitzbergen and there seems every likelihood that she will reach the Pole, unless she strikes bad weather in the Arctic. She will probably be in communication with land throughout the trip to the Pole, for she has a specially constructed wireless outfit, with a radius of 1,000 miles. She also has a radio direction finder which will enable here to find direction, even at the Pole itself, where all directions by the compass are due south.

Professor Filippo Eredia, the meteorological export of the Italian Government, who was on board, told THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent that he had been able to keep constantly in touch with the Italian Air Ministry and with those of France and Britain during the entire flight.

Also on board was a representative of a newspaper who carried the only books on board. They were Jack London's "Daughter of the Snows" and Kipling's "From Sea to Sea." There was no phonograph on board.

There were only four seats, all used by the pilots and navigators, and the rest had the rather tedious journey standing up or sitting on the floor. As three of the Italians are of portly build they found this method of traveling trying.

No member of the crew stood the long journey from Rome to Pulham-ward better than Lily, Colonel Nobile's white and brown fox terrier.

The crew found the change in the weather from their own lotus land to England's chill and mist trying.

Major Scott Praises the Norge.

On board the Norge in an advisory capacity was Major George H. Scott, chief of the British air pilots. He declared the Norge was extraordinarily good for her size. She had clear flying from Rome over the Mediterranean and Southern France.

Colonel Nobile had intended to pause at Rochefort, France, where he encountered a stiff easterly wind, but when he got there decided to keep on up the coast of France. Last night at 11 o'clock he wirelessed that he would halt there at midnight if a storm threatened, but changed his mind.

During the first half of the trip, according to Major Scott, the Norge went as fast as seventy miles an hour when going before the wind.

They struck the English coast at Brighton at about 11 o'clock this morning. In the trip over land to Pulham the Norge did not go over London but passed near Chatham. Major Scott said that the Norge was in communication with the British Air Ministry from the time they were north of the Pyrenees. He said the airship traveled at an average height of 1,000 feet. Those on board had practically no sleep and little food.

Lieutenant Riiser-Larsen said that the Norge would now go to Oslo, where she would tie to the mooring mast and then proceed to Leningrad, before proceeding to Spitzbergen.

On the landing field to meet the Norge heroes of the mist and wind were Crown Prince Olaf of Norway, the Norwegian Ambassador to Great Britain; Sir Samuel Hoare, Secretary of State for the Air, and Commander K. Prestrud, the Norwegian Naval Attache at London.

Shortly before the Norge reached Pulham, her commander and crew received a wireless message of congratulation from King George V, which they answered with a message expressing their gratitude.

LONDON NEWSPAPERS LAUD DARING VENTURE

They Lament That Britain Has No Part in the Coming Polar Expedition.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 12.—The greatest interest in the Amundsen-Ellsworth venture was taken by the London nnewspapers, all of which have special correspondents at Pulham and publish this morning accounts of the Norges' long trip across Europe and her arrival in England. The best wishes are expressed for the final sucsess of the enterprise and if he achieves his object there will be congratulations without stint.

At the same time regret is expressed that the enterprise, which is likely to have valuable results, should not have been undertaken by Great Britain. It is pointed out that the British airship R-33, which has a greater range than the Norge, has not been used since 1923, and, owing to the abandonment of the proposed voyage to Egypt, will probably never again take the air. A polar expedition by the R-33 was suggested to the Government long ago, but nothing was done.

The successful flight of the Norge from Rome to Pulham is regarded as a creditable performance and a good augury for the more perilous journey to come.

"It is a gallant enterprise, the issue whereof will be watched with sympathetic interest by the whole civilized world," says The Morning Post.

"This year three arctic air expeditions are to set out—the Amundsen, Wilkins and Byrd expeditions—and it is odds that one of them will be successful. But the conditions are so difficult and incalculable that attempt by airplane must be particularly precarious.

"For such an enterprise the airship which Amundsen has now adopted seems more feasible. The whole world will wish Amundsen success. Whether he achieves it or not he has deserved it. His name is already secure of remembrance."

Dwelling on the dangers which confront Captain Amundsen, The Westminster Gazette says:

"It is impossible to consider the expedition he is undertaking without grave anxiety. His chances of success have increased enormously since the idea of drifting across the Pole in a balloon was first conceived, but even with the best of modern airships, disaster has been frequent.

"Where they have failed, the lighter semi-rigid Norge might find it difficult to live and she is going into Arctic gales stronger, probably, than they have had to face.

"The bold explorers will carry with them every possible good wish for success, but there will be world-wide feeling of relief when their voyage is at an end."

The fact that it took two and one-half hours to land the Norge at Pulham was commented upon, among others, by Major C. C. Turner, aeronautical expert of The Daily Telegraph, who writes:

"The airship, having at last got into position to land and had two guy ropes hauled by actually seized by four or five men, a quantity of water ballast was discharged. Evidently the allowance was excessive, for the ship immediately soared up, the ground men fortunately letting go in time to avoid being carried away.

"Three more times the airship essayed a landing, but to the onlookers it appeared as if she lacked complete maneuvring power in a vertical direction. It was not until two more failures occurred that she was finally secured.

"When one remembered the numerous occasions that one has been a much bigger as well as many smaller airships performed the operation in a few minutes, this afternoon's performance was the more disappointing."

WILKINS AIRPLANE RETURNS TO FAIRBANKS

FAIRBANKS, Alaska, April 11 (AP).—The Alaskan airplane of the Arctic air expedition of Captain George H. Wilkins returned here at 7 P. M. today after making her second flight to Point Barrow, base of the undertaking, with supplies.

Will you allow great retailers to show you the way to marketing success in Boston?

How they have analyzed the market – how they concentrate their advertising upon a 12-mile area

TRULY Boston seems to be a fruitful field for national advertising.

And it is. The existence in Boston of some of the greatest retail stores in the United States proves this. Their business volume, their lists of charge accounts, are additional proof.

Because so many national campaigns felt disappointment with results in Boston, whereas Boston retailers experienced no such difficulty, the Globe decided to investigate the Boston market.

A seeming 30-mile trading radius —really 12-miles

And the Globe found that the chief difference in principle between most national campaigns coming into Boston, and Boston retail advertising—lay in the conception of the Boston market.

The secret lies in separating the real Boston buying population from the population that merely lives near Boston.

The Globe first investigated parcel deliveries of great Boston stores. And contrary to what was expected it learned that 74% of these parcels go to homes within 12 miles.

The Globe obtained from a leading department store an analysis of the locations of its charge accounts. It learned that 64% of these, too, are within 12 miles.

Then the Globe analyzed retail outlets in all leading fields. Numerically these outlets show a majority within the 12-mile area. In actual business volume this strength is greater than it seems because these stores within the 12-mile area are the bell-wether stores — biggest in volume — real leaders.

How the Globe parallels this new trading area

Within this newly-defined trading area the Sunday Globe offers the largest circulation in Boston, and the sale of the daily Globe exceeds that of the Sunday.

That is why the department stores place their chief reliance in the Globe. They use as much space in the Sunday Globe as in all the other three Boston Sunday newspapers combined. In 1925 they placed the daily Globe first on their lists.

The Globe sells Boston. Not just Boston city but the market represented by Boston city plus the population within the key trading area of 12 miles—1,700,000 people, the richest homes in Boston. Their per capita wealth is nearly $2000.

The Globe commands the liking of this population solely because of editorial and news merit. It offers no premiums—makes no inducements for circulation except the fundamentally right inducement of publishing a newspaper people want to read.

It interests men through its sport pages which deal with local events almost as fully as with national and international sports.

It commands the respect of all creeds, political beliefs, races, because it is strictly non-partisan. Every side of every question of public interest is faithfully dealt with in an unbiased spirit.

The Globe covers the 12-mile trading area of Boston more intensely than any other Boston newspaper. That 12-mile trading area is Boston's key market. Retail sales prove it; location of distribution outlets prove it; density of population and per capita buying power prove it.

Then buy the Globe first in Boston.

64% of department store charge accounts	60% of all hardware stores
74% of all department store package deliveries	57% of all dry goods stores
61% of all grocery stores	55% of all furniture stores
57% of all drug stores	46% of all automobile dealers and garages

The Boston Globe

The Globe sells Boston

279,461 Daily 326,532 Sunday

It is pretty generally true in all cities with large suburban population that, in the metropolitan area, when the Sunday circulation is practically the same or greater than the daily circulation, there is proof of a real seven-day reader interest with a minimum of casual readers of the commuting type.

PEALS OF LAUGHTER GREET WILL ROGERS

Carnegie Hall Audience Roars When Comedian Pokes Fun at Flappers.

HAS FLING AT COOLIDGE

The sedate auditorium of Carnegie Hall rang with unaccustomed peals of laughter and echoed to rounds of applause as hearty as ever greeted a symphony concert there when Will Rogers made his only New York appearance of the season before a large audience last night.

It was a Rogers house, and roared uproariously at his every sally and discussion of current events, and at his good humored poking of fun at every one from President Coolidge to present day flappers.

He talked about Florida real estate, evolution, the Ku Klux Klan, prohibition, of course, New York traffic conditions, Congress, and the younger generation to the accompaniment, in the latter part, of rope tricks that won as much applause as his remarks.

"The liberal interpretation they place on certain amendments is what makes Florida," he said concerning the real estate boom there, after having described the all-day sucker as the emblem of that State.

The rule by which New York traffic is being governed, he claimed, is "When you see an opening, duck for it." To the modern flapper he gave a bit of advice, based, he stated, on his experiences in the "Ziegfeld Follies." It was "Don't follow fashion any further than you're physically able." When he had finished his last monologue he admitted that he was almost as good as Elsie Janis's imitation of him.

At the conclusion of his performance he introduced some of the notables in his audience, including Theodore and Kermit Roosevelt, Fannie Hurst, Mrs. Fiske, Madge Kennedy, Brandon Tynan and A. L. Erlanger, who responded with a short talk from his box in which he told something of Rogers's earlier days.

Interspersed through his program were the De Reszke Singers—three of them at least, for the fourth is ill and was unable to sing. Their selections were enthusiastically received, and it is greatly to their credit to say that they shared honors with the main attraction of the evening.

VERDI'S REQUIEM GIVEN FOR PHYSICIANS' HOME

Verdi's "Requiem" was presented at the Metropolitan Opera House last night for the benefit of the Physicians' Home Endowment Fund, adding about $18,000 to the fund, which is to be used for the purchase of Downsbury Manor at Ridgefield, Conn., as a home for incapacitated physicians, surgeons and their dependents. The fund committee is headed by George Gordon Battle.

The Requiem, rarely absent from a Metropolitan season, was performed last evening for the second time in the present Winter, its former hearing on Jan. 24 taking place within the week which marked the twenty-fifth anniversary of the composer's death.

Florence Easton was unable to appear and Nanette Guilford in her stead was entrusted with the leading soprano part, earlier sung by Rosa Ponselle. Karin Branzell succeeded Miss Alcock as the contralto. Messrs. Gigli and Mardones, with Conductor Serafin and the opera chorus and orchestra, again contributed to the performance.

Downsbury Manor, forty-eight miles from New York, is the estate of the late Colonel Edward M. Knox, which is said to have cost him $1,000,000 and which contains a house of fifty rooms and fourteen other buildings, and includes 350 acres of desirable high land. The project has been endorsed by Governor Smith, Governor Pinchot of Pennsylvania and others.

YOURY BILSTIN HEARD AGAIN

Youry Bilstin, Russian 'cellist, gave his second and last recital at Aeolian Hall yesterday afternoon, presenting, by request, his own "Variations Diaboliques" on a sixteenth century theme. He played in addition a program principally taken from the elder composers, Vivaldi, Handel, Couperin, Haydn and Beethoven.

The artist played with entire devotion and an obvious absorption in his subject. There were times when a real touch of diabolism would have been appropriate. Mr. Bilstin remained within the fold of orthodoxy, except in his own variations and in Scriabine's "Prelude."

S. Kliachko collaborated with Mr. Bilstin in a sonata for two 'cellos by Defesch. Carroll Hollister, pianist, accompanied the remainder of the program.

RUTH DRAPER AMUSES.

Audience at Opening of Her Spring Season Is Enthusiastic.

Ruth Draper, entertainer, opened her Spring season last night at the Sam H. Harris Theatre before a comfortably filled house. The program numbers were all familiar, but that fact did not prevent enthusiasm for them and frequent demands for more.

Miss Draper was particularly amusing as a New York factory girl, as a busy society woman trying to squeeze an Italian lesson into an overcrowded day and as a debutante in a conservatory with a young man. Into her interpretations of a Dalmatian peasant woman she put a fine sense of tragedy and futility. "At the Court of Philip IV of Spain" was an attractive costume number. Miss Draper also did "An English House Party" and "On a Porch in a Maine Coast Town."

She will appear again next Sunday evening and on Tuesday afternoon, April 20, with varied programs.

Albert Lewis Buys "The Spider."

Albert Lewis has purchased for production a play written by Fulton Oursler and Lowell Brentano, of the firm of Brentano's, book publishers. "The Spider" is the name of the play; it is said to be a mystery comedy, and Lowell Sherman is mentioned for the leading rôle. After the production of "The Spider" it will probably be made into a novel.

MUSIC

By OLIN DOWNES.

The Friends of Music.

There was an eloquent performance of "Mozart's Requiem" by the Friends of Music, dedicated to the memory of Franz Kneisel, yesterday afternoon in Town Hall. The work was given under conditions conducive to its full effect. An edifice devoted to worship would doubtless have been more appropriate to the occasion than Town Hall, but this place is small enough and the atmosphere is sufficiently intimate for a true rapport to be established between the musicians and the audience. This is especially desirable with interpretations of Mozart, since his thought is often so much greater than his apparatus of performance that ears accustomed to modern stress and modern tonal intensities may fail to adjust themselves to the modest scale of sonorities and the emotional implications of his simple harmonic scheme.

It is a pity that this is the case, but it is true. Modern sensibility to musical tone is undoubtedly blunted in comparison with what it was in cultured circles of the eighteenth century, and music, as Romain Rolland remarked, is the art which consumes itself quickest by its own heat. Nearness to the sound tends to make the listener more conscious of its meanings and responsive to them. When the "Mozart Requiem" is sung in a relatively small place and before an audience of the intelligent character of the one assembled yesterday, it can have a fuller significance than when given with numerous forces in some immense auditorium.

The singular story of the inception of the Requiem is well known—how an unknown stranger commissioned Mozart to write a requiem, which he agreed to compose in exchange for a stated honorarium and which, in composing, he came to believe would be his own. And so it proved to be. The composer, haunted by his strange visitation, died with three numbers of the mass unfinished. His visitor was later revealed to be the steward of the Count von Walsegg, who had anonymously ordered the mass in memory of his wife. Sussmayer, Mozart's pupil, completing the three last numbers, claimed their authorship. Authorities have differed as to whether Mozart had actually any share in their composition. He probably had not. The first performance of the Requiem credited Walsegg as its composer.

It is more than enough that the body of the mass is indisputably Mozart and that he wrote with inspiration and profound feeling. The Italian influence, strong in all of his music, is present not only in the beautiful curve of the melodic lines, the transparency and symmetry of the writing, but in the highly emotional and even dramatic style of some passages, such as the "Dies Irae"—admirably delivered by the chorus—the "Rex Tremendae," the wonderful passages of supplication in the Confutatis—"Ora Supplex"—and the "Lacrymosa," which the composer, in a voice that broke, sang a few hours before he died. There are few places where Mozart is only beautiful, and many in which he touches heights and depths that only a spirit so pure could attain.

The performance had a high technical standard, and its mood was lofty. The chorus, upon whom the great burden of the composition falls, was excellent in its rhythms, attacks and nuances. Mr. Bodanzky's crisp beat gave force and fire to the passages of the more dramatic character, and he was conscious and expressive of Mozart's melodic line, and subtle in his shadings, when these effects were required. Of the soloists, Mr. Bohnen delivered his lines with fine sonority and clearness of enunciation. Miss Rethberg was less significant in the latter respect, although the quality of the tone spoke for itself. Mr. Bloch was inclined to the sentimental. Miss Alcock interpreted modestly and with musicianly understanding. In the concerted numbers there was usually good balance and euphony. The performance, in a word, was self-effacing and convincing in its exposition of the composer's purposes.

An audience that filled the hall listened, as requested, without applause. This was a worthy conclusion of the thirteenth season of the Society of the Friends of Music, and in this connection it is appropriate to quote the following from a note in the program, which treats of the conditions which are now known to confront this society, with its record of zealous and honorable service to the musical art:

"With this concert the society completes the thirteenth year of its history.

"In every way the season has been an advance upon past years—in the quality of its performances and in the numbers attending. At several concerts people have been turned away.

"These concerts can never pay. The annual deficit of over $40,000, hitherto defrayed by one individual, must be met by new guarantors and subscribers. The society has issued appeals for financial support to meet the deficit this year, but the response, so far, has been inadequate.

"It is clear that if the society is to continue its work next season the outstanding deficit must be paid first. It will be nothing short of a calamity to the interests of good music and civic enterprise if there are not sufficient practical friends of music to sustain our needs. There is still time to save our fine record from ceasing, but that time is very short.

The dramatization of "Joan of Arc" has been made by Donal Haines, and Miss Clemens will be assisted in the production by members of Walter Hampden's company. It is said that after this first presentation of "Joan of Arc" another theatre may be secured for the attraction at regular performances.

METROPOLITAN OPERA HONORS T. J. BULL

Otto H. Kahn was spokesman last evening for the hundred guests at a dinner in honor of Thomas J. Bull, known to all Metropolitan operagoers since the "roaring 90s" and valued as aid to changing opera managements and to more than one generation of New York society. The affair was at the Casa Lopez in West Fifty-fourth Street, near Broadway. Mr. Kahn made the principal speech in a program shortened by the necessity of many present to return to their posts at the Metropolitan for the evening's concert.

Greeting Mr. Bull as "one of the necessities of the Metropolitan Opera Company," Chairman Kahn presented to him a platinum watch on behalf of his associates. There were other gifts, including earmuffs and a pair of rubbers, suggesting escape from too eager questioners at the opera house door.

Short speeches were made also by Edward Ziegler, Earl Lewis, William J. Guard and Al Irwin of the opera staff, and by Berthold Neuer, William Thorner and Leonard Liebling for musicians in general. S. Jay Kaufman, who organized the dinner, was toastmaster.

Mr. Bull's reply to Chairman Kahn's rallying was in a like humorous vein as he told some of the difficulties in meeting all comers in the nightly rush at the world's greatest lyric theatre. He said his speeches usually were confined to "yes" and "no," telling the time a performance would end and informing lost or strayed patrons that "The family circle entrance is around to the right, madame."

RECITAL BY ALBA NARDONE.

Violinist and Lina Palmieri, Soprano, Win Unstinted Applause.

Alba Nardone, violinist, gave a recital at Aeolian Hall last evening, assisted by Lina Palmieri, soprano. These young musicians won unstinted applause.

Miss Nardone began with the Max Bruch Concerto in D minor, displaying a beautiful, even tone, flexibility in the rapid passages, careful preparation and an enviable assurance. She immediately became a favorite and was recalled twice. Her second group, which included d'Ambrosio's melodious "Strimpellata" and Hubay's "Scene de la Csarda," led to several recalls and encores. Her contribution to the success of the evening concluded with a Vieuxtemps "Ballade and Polonaise."

The other artist, Lina Palmieri, made a brilliant beginning with Rossini's "Una Voce poco fa." A natural coloratura soprano, with its runs, staccati and ornamentation, proved highly attractive. The singer subsequently was heard in variations by Proch and a tarantelle by Ottone Pesce, and warmly received in all. Ottone Pesce played all the accompaniments.

TWO ORCHESTRAS HEARD.

Concerts by Sunday Symphonic and American Orchestral.

Two orchestras gave concerts yesterday, the Sunday Symphonic Society playing to a large audience at the ninth and last but one of its free noon performances in the Hampden Theatre. Josiah Zuro conducted Bach's air on the G-string and Beethoven's third "Leonore" overture. Bernard Ocko and Lajos Shuk assisted in the double concerto for violin and 'cello by Brahms. The series will end on April 25 with Beethoven's Fifth Symphony.

The American Orchestral Society, under Chalmers Clifton, gave its third concert in Cooper Union last evening, under the auspices of the People's Institute. Gerald Warburg was the soloist in the A-Minor 'cello concerto of Saint-Saëns, midway in a program comprising Berlioz's "Roman Carnival" overture and the First Symphony of Brahms.

WHITEMAN WINS LONDON.

Albert Hall Packed and 2,000 Are Turned Away From "Jazz" Concert.

Paul Whitman's musicians appeared in London yesterday, after considerable controversy over the so-called "invasion" of American music in England. A cable dispatch last evening by William Morris Jr. to the local offices of William Morris told of a right royal reception by the British public to the band.

Two thousand persons were turned away from their Sunday afternoon concert in the Albert Hall, which was packed from pit to dome with a capacity audience of 10,000.

George Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue," familiar on this side of the Atlantic as an artistic evocation of American "jazz," made what the dispatch describes as a "tremendous" impression abroad.

SCANDINAVIAN CONCERT.

Singers Give a Benefit for Swedish Lutheran Church.

Julia Claussen, Lauritz Melchoir and William Gustafson of the growing Scandinavian contingent in New York's opera gave a joint program in Carnegie Hall yesterday afternoon with Mrs. Charles Cahier, formerly also of the Metropolitan, and Florence Stern, the violinist.

The singers were heard in songs of Northern European composers and others ranging from Bach's "Strike, Long Wished-for Hour" to excerpts from "Marriage of Figaro," "Trovatore" and "Parsifal." The concert was arranged as a benefit for the building fund of the Swedish Lutheran Church, at 166th Street and Grand Concourse, the Bronx.

WERBA HAS MUSICAL PLAY.

Will Produce "Well, Well, Well," by Glass and Goodman, Next Season.

Louis F. Werba will produce early next season "Well, Well, Well," a musical comedy by Montague Glass and Jules Eckert Goodman, in which Joseph Smith and Charles Dale of the vaudeville entertainers known as the Avon Comedy Four will be featured. Fred E. Ahlert and Muriel Pollock have written the music, and the lyrics are by Nathaniel and Max Lief. "Well, Well, Well" will probably open for a try-out late in September and come to New York in October.

The piece, it is understood, is a musical version of "Why Worry," which Mr. Glass and Mr. Goodman wrote for Fannie Brice. It is announced as their first musical show. Mr. Werba was last represented on Broadway by "Adrienne" at the George M. Cohan Theatre several Summers ago.

THE SCREEN

By MORDAUNT HALL.

The Holy Terror.

THAT'S MY BABY, with Douglas MacLean, Margaret Morris, Claude Gillingwater, Eugenie Forde, Wade Boteler, Richard Tucker, Fred Kelsey, Harry Earles, William Orlamonde and others, written by C. J. Crone and Wade Boteler, directed by William Beaudine; overture, "Caucasian Suite;" "The Four Seasons;" "The Knon Boys," dancers; Harold Ramsay, organist; John Murray Anderson's "Melodies Eternal." At the Rivoli.

So tame is the first half of Douglas MacLean's new farce, "That's My Baby," that one is impelled to think that those concerned in the making of this picture had not kept their fun powder dry. But when the Baby is introduced into the story, the comedy blazes forth, and yesterday afternoon the audience in the Rivoli, after a period of comparative quiet, was suddenly stirred to frequent explosions of laughter.

The Baby who changed the complexion of this vehicle is impersonated by Harry Earles, the midget who gave a memorable performance in Tod Browning's film, "The Unholy Three." In this current effort the Baby might be described as a holy terror, for, after being passed from one man to another in a society bazaar, he follows Alan Boyd (Douglas MacLean) and eventually is discovered sitting on the edge of an airplane wing, clinging to a stay and giggling as he points to the buildings far below. Horrified, Alan musters up courage and climbs along the wing to rescue the Baby, who at first is not particularly keen about leaving his observation post. It looks like a ticklish job for Alan, but the hero, who had fallen in love with a pretty girl on the same day he was jilted by another fair young creature, eventually creeps back to the fuselage with his unimaginative but constantly mischievous burden.

Satan finds further mischief for the Baby's idle hands. Alan happens to have a parachute attached to his back. The Baby plays with the releasing rope, and soon the parachute breaks open and Alan and the Baby are torn clear out of the body of the machine, the pilot of which continues merrily on through the air, shouting back of him, without knowing that he has lost his passengers, who are gradually descending to earth.

In the initial chapters Alan appears as an impulsive young man who believes that a girl's character can be told by her ankles. He also thinks that he can recognize any pair of ankles he has seen before. In the society bazaar he proves his knowledge of high insteps is by no means perfect, and consequently he finds himself in much hot water.

The story of this giddy film is credited to C. J. Crone and Wade Boteler. They, and perhaps others, made a big mistake when they did not include the Baby in the early part of the picture, for neither the captions nor Mr. MacLean's zealous efforts provoked much mirth until Harry Earles appeared on the scene. Margaret Morris is vivacious and attractive as the girl in the case.

The Publix Theatres management does not pretend that their stage offerings shall serve as a prologue to the feature film, which fact was illustrated when they put on John Murray Anderson's glorification of jazz, "The Melting Pot," prior to the screening of "A Kiss for Cinderella." At present Mr. Anderson has a decidedly clever production based on the compositions of George Frederick Handel. It is called "Melodies Eternal," and the settings are stained glass windows with living figures, which is, to say the least, a decided contrast to the title of the chief screen attraction, "That's My Baby."

Cecil B. De Mille's new production, "The Volga Boatman," will be presented tomorrow evening at the Times Square Theatre.

Felian Garzia, Pianist, Plays.

Felian Garzia, a pianist of light, facile touch and Parisian training, gave a recital in Steinway Hall yesterday afternoon before a cordial assembly in that intimate auditorium. A tasteful program opened with the classic Bach's F-sharp fugue and Beethoven's sonata of "Absence and Return." It was in his Chopin and later romantic pieces that Mr. Garzia gave an impression of vital and emotional readings, including four from Debussy, and a final virtuoso group from Rubinstein, Liszt and Saint-Saëns.

MARION TALLEY SINGS TO 4,000 AT CONCERT

Special to The New York Times.

HARTFORD, Conn., April 11.—Marion Talley made her concert debut here this afternoon and 4,000 people who heard her warmly approved the action of Mayor N. C. Stevens yesterday in presenting the charming young visitor with a key to the city of Hartford.

While the thousands of more fortunate admirers were inside the Capitol Theatre, where Miss Talley sang her program with many encores, other thousands stood outside the main entrance of the theatre and at the stage entrance. With a double line of automobiles on each side of the broad street in front of the theatre the police had their hands full and Miss Talley had to make a scramble through men and women who rushed her at the stage entrance. The same engaging personality and pleasant smile that captured her audience, aided her against the swarming well-wishers who enveloped her car, and after a slight delay, she was driven away with her mother and her manager.

The theatre was oversubscribed within a week after the local manager, Robert Kellogg, announced that Miss Talley would come to Hartford, but before the date of her appearance had been definitely settled. To accommodate partially the overflow, this afternoon, 500 seats were placed on the deep stage and Miss Talley turned and faced the stage group during one of her encores.

Dressed in a dainty pink gown in keeping with her entirely girlish and ingenuous character, Miss Talley made a deep impression on her audience and women especially were perceptibly moved during some of her numbers. She was assisted by Alberto Salvi at the harp and Emil Polak at the piano.

TRAVEL 10,000 MILES TO JOIN THE CIRCUS

Traveling approximately 10,000 miles to join Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey circus, nine members of the Royal Siamese troupe of tak-rah players arrived in New York yesterday afternoon. The troupe left Bangkok, Siam, more than six weeks ago. Their route took them to Hongkong, then across the Pacific to San Francisco, then by rail to Chicago and New York. Ringling officials said they believed this to be a record trip to fill a contract. In the past many performers and acts have been brought from distant points in Europe to join the big circus, but never before has it required six weeks of constant traveling to reach Madison Square Garden. The tak-rah players will join the circus as a special feature. Their act is a novel game of ball in which the feet and body come into play.

After the record-breaking week, the New Garden presented a quiet atmosphere all day yesterday. Even the hundreds of animals in the menagerie seemed to enjoy a well-earned rest. Old John, dean of the elephant herd, and little Marcella, the champion peanut eater of the pachyderms, wouldn't touch a peanut on Sunday. Both of them had had their fill during the week of school vacation.

The director in this country is Donald Stephens, with offices at 156 Fifth Avenue. Among the guests at Miss Kremer's concert was Marguerite Cobbey, a young soprano discovered by Chaliapin in California and engaged by the Russian basso for his next American tour in "The Barber of Seville" this coming Fall.

TESTS PROMISE END OF FLYING FIELD FOG

Navy Experts Are Confident That Electrified Air Curtains Will Precipitate It.

PROJECTED UP FROM EARTH

Other Experiments Afoot in Which Planes Drop Charged Sand to Disperse Mist.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 11.—One of the greatest menaces to safe aerial navigation—fog, the bane of every airman—may be greatly lessened with the successful completion of experiments being conducted by the Naval Bureau of Aeronautics in the precipitation of fog over airplane landing fields.

Although the experiments, which have been in progress for several years, have not been completed, they have reached the point, according to official announcement tonight, where confidence is expressed that fog-precipitation apparatus can be used in disposing of fog-banks over landing fields, thereby clearing paths in which planes may land in safety.

By means of a specially mounted airplane propeller, electrically charged air has been projected in such fashion as to constitute an electrically charged curtain of air which precipitates the fog and thus opens a clear path for landings.

The experts concerned with the experiments estimate that 277,000,000 cubic feet a minute of fog drifts at the rate of two miles an hour over a landing field through a vertical curtain of charged air having a radius of 1,000 feet with the centre on the ground.

Would Clear 2,000-Foot Path.

One type of apparatus with which the navy is experimenting is capable of passing through it 700,000 cubic feet of air a minute, which it charges electrically and throws into charged curtains.

It is estimated that these curtains can cause the precipitation of about 95 per cent. of the fog moving over the landing field, thus making a clear part 1,000 feet high and 2,000 feet wide over the full length of the field.

This apparatus consists of a simple type of corona charging screen, a transformer with rectifying apparatus and an airplane propeller and motor, all mounted on a truck.

It has been determined that an airplane propeller driven by a 400-horsepower engine mounted on a swivel has sufficient power to project electrically charged air over a vertical plane having a radius of 1,000 feet, thus forming an electrically charged curtain through which all fog coming over the landing field must pass.

Important principles in fog precipitation have been determined by the navy's tests on this subject, it is declared. It has been found that fog must be electrically charged and that a projected electrostatic field, to drive the fog particles together, is essential for electrical precipitation over an open field.

Other Tests Being Conducted.

Further experiments will be carried on to determine such points as the distance to which the electrostatic field can be projected, whether the charging corona should be set up by direct or alternating current and the proper voltage to use.

"The experiments have reached a stage where precipitation by this method appears practical and feasible," the Navy Department declared tonight.

"Other fog precipitation experiments," the department said, "are being carried on jointly by the Navy Bureau of Aeronautics and the Air Service on the principle of electrically charging dust or sand particles which are released into the fog from airplanes, thus causing condensation and ultimate dispersal of the fog.

"The successful completion of these important experiments will remove one of the greatest menaces to safe aerial navigation. The field for the use of fog precipitation apparatus is wide and no doubt ultimately will be used in great cities to lessen traffic congestion and dangers on foggy days, and also in harbors and channels where shipping becomes congested and delayed by reason of fog."

CHALLENGESFIDDLEWINNER.

Maine Contestant Wants Another Match With Boston Player.

LEWISTON, Me., April 11 (AP).—Uncle John McKenny, 80-year-old fiddler of Farmington, tonight challenged the fiddling world in general and James F. Claffey, of Boston, in particular. As third-place winner in the world-wide fiddling contest, which closed here last night, Uncle John announced he was not satisfied with the decision which gave Claffey first prize of $1,000 and a silver cup.

Uncle John charged that the winner lived at the home of the accompanist during the week of the contest and gained an unfair advantage. The judges termed Uncle John's attitude as "unfortunate."

Claffey, 67-year-old member of the Boston Musicians' Union, is a violinist as well as fiddler. It was his reels and jigs that made his victory in this contest, but he has played the violin with the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

John Wiseman, the aged player who journeyed from Bantry Bay, Ireland, to scrape his bow against Scots, French, Canadians and Yankees, sent his congratulations from his hospital room, "glad that an Irishman won, even though he lived in Boston."

You Must Come Over!

Dear Harold Lloyd:—

Old top, I'll certainly take my hat off to you. I haven't laughed so much in all my life as I did when seeing you in "For Heaven's Sake." You're a riot! But Harold, honest, you haven't a monopoly on the laughs of New York and if you'll honor me with your presence at the RIVOLI this week you'll not only find the audience in gales of merriment, but I guarantee to give you laugh for laugh. Pardon me for insisting it's the best I've ever done! Like yours, it's a Paramount and the title is on everybody's lips, for yes, sir, THAT'S MY BABY!

Fraternally yours,

CANADA AND PROHIBITION.

Highly interesting and pertinent testimony was given to the Senate committee on Saturday by two Canadians. Intelligently and without apparent bias, they recounted Canada's experience with prohibition. At one time the Dominion was almost entirely dry. Today, with the exception of Ontario, it is wet, but only in the sense that liquor can be bought through Government agencies, the saloons remaining abolished and the traffic being kept under severe regulation. Whether this is an ideal system or not, it is an undeniable improvement on an ostensible prohibition not enforced and demoralizing and corrupting. Probably not even the most enthusiastic Canadians would assert that they have solved the whole liquor problem, or brought in the millennium. But apparently the great majority of their fellow-citizens believe that the Dominion is moving in the right direction.

One great advantage which Canada has over us in all this business is that she did not embody prohibition in the fundamental law of the land. With her it was a matter of legislation by the different Provinces. Canadian prohibition was statutory, not constitutional. The result has been, as we see, that the way was open for an actual testing out of the various plans. If the people found that, in the temporary rush of sentiment in favor of prohibition, a mistake had been made, they were free to retrace their steps. Each Canadian Province was like a laboratory in which the experiment could be tried.

Canada, in short, was in the position which the United States was supposed to hold, where local government could deal in varying ways with public questions. But the adoption of the Eighteenth Amendment wiped out for us that method of proceeding by trial and error. We chained ourselves up, so that we were deprived of the freedom to inquire, to observe, to change the law when a change was obviously desirable, which the Canadians enjoyed. All the liberty of this sort that remains to us now under the Eighteenth Amendment is to alter the definition of intoxicating liquor laid down by the Volstead act. There is doubtless a margin for activity there, in accordance with the decision of the Supreme Court that Congress has a certain amount of discretion in the affair, but that seems a very narrow privilege compared with the broad one which the Canadians have had. They wisely left themselves free to walk in the path of expediency. Americans improvidently put fetters on their legs.

CONGRESSIONAL APPORTIONMENT.

The debate and vote in the House last week on the subject of reapportioning Representatives were highly technical. They did not go into the merits of the case. It was all a question of constitutional privilege as against the rules of the House. A motion had been made to discharge the Committee on the Census from consideration of a bill to apportion Representatives in Congress in accordance with the last census. The contention was that this was a matter of high constitutional privilege. But a point of order was made, which finally Speaker LONGWORTH submitted to the House itself to decide, and by a vote of 265 to 87 it was held that the motion objected to was not of the "highest constitutional privilege." The importance of this lies in the fact that it upsets a precedent established by a long line of decisions by Speakers of the House during the past forty years.

Everything turned on the question whether the Constitution made an apportionment after each census mandatory. It was admitted that an enumeration of the inhabitants of the several States every ten years was made mandatory by the Constitution. But it has been held, and with this opinion the House of Representatives agrees, that when the Constitution declares that "Representatives shall be apportioned among the several States according to their respective numbers," it is merely "directory." Ways and means and time are left to the discretion of Congress.

This may be sound constitutional law, but it admittedly goes against an invariable custom followed by Congress for 130 years. That is to say, after each census, Congress has made a new apportionment of Representatives in accordance therewith. But since the census of 1920 this has not been done. The result is to leave at present gross inequalities of representation. Through changes of population in the State of Michigan, for example, some districts have more voters than there are men, women and children in others. There can be no doubt that if an apportionment were to be made on the basis of the population figures of 1920, some States would lose Representatives while others would gain them.

There is where the trouble comes in. If the membership of the House were to be kept as at present, reapportionment would mean that some Representatives would lose their seats; while the States that would gain members might affect, in a party sense, the number of votes in the Electoral College, and so possibly determine the choice of a President. It is much to be feared that these personal and partisan interests, and not constitutional scruples, are keeping the House from doing what it ought to do in correcting the existing inequities of representation. Some of these are growing more flagrant every year. Let the decision on the constitutional question be what it may; the fact remains that, as was affirmed by Representative COOPER of Wisconsin, "each member on this floor ought, under a just law, to represent as nearly as possible the same number of people." That notoriously is not now done. Congress ought to see to it that it is.

RESERVE BANKS AND SPECULATION.

Interest in the annual report of the Federal Reserve Board will direct itself mainly to the discussion of last year's developments in the field of credit. That the expansion in loans of the private banks on Stock Exchange collateral had been wholly out of proportion to that in their commercial loans was long ago indicated in the weekly reports of member banks to the Reserve Board, showing increase during 1925 of $1,092,000,000 in "loans on stocks and bonds" against increase of less than $100,000,000 in "other loans and discounts." It was never doubted that the disproportionately great expansion in advances on stocks and bonds had close relation to the abnormally violent Wall Street speculation.

The Reserve Board's report discusses both that one-sided expansion of credit in 1925 and the measures taken by the Reserve banks in the Autumn to control it. Their rediscounts increased $435,000,000 during the year, in spite of the fact that use of credit for commercial purposes was but moderate. From this the board frankly draws the inference that the enlarged rediscounts reflected "increase in the demand for loans on securities." It did not reflect the rediscounting of those loans; the Reserve banks do not lend on paper thus secured. But it is always feasible for a member bank to borrow at its Reserve bank through pledge of eligible commercial paper, and to apply the proceeds to new loans of its own on Stock Exchange collateral. The report states that it is seldom possible to determine exactly what use member banks make of credit thus obtained; but it declares positively that rediscounting "for the purpose of enlarging their own operations is not considered a proper use of Reserve bank credit" and cites instances in which, having evidence of relending of such funds on Stock Exchange collateral, officers of the Reserve banks have objected to it. Nevertheless, the report admits that last Autumn the growth of member bank rediscounts was for the purpose of building up their own reserves, made necessary by deposit liabilities created by increasing loans of private banks on stocks and bonds.

The Reserve Board points out that the New York member banks did not pursue that policy; their loans on Stock Exchange collateral were no larger in December than in midsummer. But banks outside of New York City resorted to it very freely; the stock market's bid resulted in "a large flow of out-of-town funds to the New York market to be employed in making loans on securities." Recourse by these lending institutions to their own Reserve banks had, in fact, been plainly reflected in the weekly statements of the latter, several of which reported in November a ratio of reserve to liability ranging from 45 to 63 per cent., as against 70 to 80 per cent. a few months before.

It was then that the rediscount rate was advanced by all the Reserve banks except New York, with immediate effect on the Wall Street stock speculation. That the New York rediscount rate was not moved up until January is now explained by the Reserve Board, partly by the absence at New York of rediscounts made to facilitate loans on stocks and bonds, but chiefly by the fact that an Autumn advance in the New York rate was certain to influence the commercial paper market and the foreign exchanges—neither of which results was desired.

Taken as a whole, the episode makes it plain that Reserve bank policies cannot be wholly dissociated from large movements on the speculative markets. That principle has always been recognized by the European central banks, but it was angrily denounced in our markets of 1919, and there survives to the present day a belief, even among some economic writers, that the advance of the Reserve bank rates was largely responsible for the violence of "deflation." But this overlooks entirely the fact that, whatever opinion the Reserve Board might have had regarding the speculation of 1919, it had to recognize that the recourse of member banks to the Federal Reserve, in order to equip them for financing the huge speculation of the day, had brought the reserve ratio even at the New York bank down to the legal minimum. The board's report shows that protection of its own position, through a higher charge for rediscounting, was an equally necessary motive in the money market of 1925.

CARAWAY SEEDS.

Senator CARAWAY of Arkansas chose the Jefferson Day dinner in this city as a fit occasion to make a bitter and contemptuous attack upon President COOLIDGE. Now, THOMAS JEFFERSON had his political enemies and cherished political animosities, but he never made the mistake of undervaluing his opponents. For years he was at sword's point with ALEXANDER HAMILTON, but he was continually warning his followers not to hold cheap that piercing intellect and genius for public life. If what Senator CARAWAY says about Mr. COOLIDGE is true, the President ought by this time to be not only intensely unpopular but thoroughly discredited. Yet everybody with his eyes open knows that he is not. His manners and methods may not be sufficiently demonstrative or explosive to suit the exuberant Senator from Arkansas, but they have suited the needs of the day and the present taste of the American people extraordinarily well.

It is easy enough to understand why some people do not like President COOLIDGE personally, but to rail at him as a public man and as a successful administrator after the fashion of Senator CARAWAY is to write one's self down a very poor politician, to say the least. This seems to have been the opinion of the Senator's audience on Saturday evening, since the reporters noted only "mild applause" for his harsh words about the President. Calling for Democratic leadership, Senator CARAWAY said that it should be "composite," representing all sections and all elements. But we think that there will be general agreement among his party photographers that he himself had now better be left out of the picture.

COOPERATION FOR SOCIAL RELIEF.

In New York City there are 1,500 social welfare agencies, municipal and private, with an annual disbursement in the neighborhood of $80,000,000. Of this amount somewhat less than 40 per cent. is contributed by the City Government, 25 per cent. is derived from private gifts and endowments, and the remainder from earnings. The usual presumption of the superior efficiency of private over governmental enterprise would have to be modified, in the present instance, by the fact that the municipal welfare system has two prima-facie advantages. Its resources are derived from a unitary source—taxation—and its expenditures are presumably allocated in accordance with a unitary policy. Without its being taken for granted that the city's dollar is spent as effectively as the dollar of the private agencies, the latter have long recognized the need of coordination on both sides of the ledger. The stimulation of private generosity on the one hand, the elimination of possible overlapping and waste on the other hand, are ideas behind the steady movement toward cooperation in social welfare.

The two objectives obviously go hand in hand. In New York the most notable example is that of the Federation for the Support of Jewish Charities, which conducts an annual campaign for funds and makes the subsequent allocation. The federation's budget for 1926 is close to $4,500,000, representing 52 per cent. of the total expenditure of the separate agencies, numbering about a hundred and divided into eleven main groups. More than twenty agencies deal with medical and medical-social relief, sixteen deal with child care, twenty with community centre activities. In all efforts toward coordination in this field the argument from higher efficiency has to face a natural apprehension of the results of excessive centralization. There has been nothing in the history of the Jewish Federation to suggest that such doubts have been justified. The power of the central purse has been limited in the first place by the fact that only a fraction over 50 per cent. of the total funds comes from the federation. Tactful management of a problem complex in its administrative and human aspects has left no doubt that the advantages of coordination greatly outweigh the theoretical losses.

Difference of opinion exists concerning the limits to which federation in social welfare can be carried. The community chest idea has its advocates and its opponents. A majority of the members of the Coordination Committee, which launched in April, 1925, the Welfare Council of New York City, is inclined to believe that "a city-wide chest would be premature at the present time." Among other reasons is the exceptional complexity of local conditions. There can be little doubt, however, as to the value of the program which the Welfare Council has set itself in the matter of establishing a factual basis of social conditions through research, better team-work between public and private agencies, and education of the public toward a better understanding of social work with a view to enlisting its heartier support. It is still true that charity in New York is "the responsibility of the few" instead of "the opportunity of the many."

A WIZARD OF PLANT LIFE.

It would doubtless not be correct to speak of LUTHER BURBANK, who died yesterday, as a great scientist. Yet within his chosen limits he was a great genius. His successful experimentation with plants and vegetables and fruits for many years was not marked, perhaps, by the qualities of a mind devoted to pure science. He was not deeply interested in the genetic relations of growing things, or the problems of descent with variation in the strictly biological or evolutionary sense. He did not watch his flowers with the reflective and broad-ranging spirit of DARWIN or MENDEL, DE VRIES or BATESON. For him it was enough to carry on plant experiments on a gigantic scale, under the most favoring conditions, and to bring forth one triumph after another of applied science.

Whatever may have been thought of Mr. BURBANK by trained scientists, there is no doubt that he captured the imagination of the common people. They considered him almost a creator of new species; though what he actually did was to study minute variations, and by continued selection and reproduction in millions of cases, finally to work out and fix a new form of fruit or vegetable. Some of his achievements in this order seem really astounding and contributed greatly to the food supply and the palatal enjoyment of people all over the world. His failures, which were, in the nature of the case, many, were not counted against him. Indeed, he himself cheerfully put them aside as not really entering into the record of his life work. That, by itself, was so bold and original, so many-sided and rich, as long to assure him fame.

HENRY MILLER.

As an actor HENRY MILLER first achieved popularity as a leading member of the Empire Theatre company during the eighteen-nineties, in its series of plays mainly derived from the "New School" of English comedy—PINERO, JONES, WILDE and the rest. But he was a product of the then vanishing Shakespearean tradition, having appeared in support of ADELAIDE NEILSON, MODJESKA and others, and himself played leading parts on the road, notably Hamlet, though with success which he confessed to have been indifferent. To the last he retained the sound method of that tradition, together with a deliberation and an emphasis not always in keeping with the more realistic modern acting. He retained also its idealism, his productions being uniformly true to the elder good taste. The theatre which bears his name is notable for elegance and decorative beauty and pays tribute to the popular tradition of the older drama in having a gallery, elsewhere discarded since the rise of moving pictures.

It was as a producer that he achieved his highest, though less recognized, claim to distinction. Except for his discernment of high quality, it is more than likely that two of the most admirable dramas of his time would never have seen the footlights—"The Great Divide," by WILLIAM VAUGHN MOODY, and "The Servant in the House," by CHARLES RANN KENNEDY—or that, having been produced, they would have failed for lack of proper casting and stage management. As the Christ-like "servant," Manson, WALTER HAMPDEN first revealed the personality and the artistic distinction that have raised him to the forefront of Shakespearean actors. To "The Great Divide" Mr. MILLER contributed both as dramaturge and as actor. As originally written, the play ended tragically. Having won his bride at cards in a drunken frontier scene and forced her into marriage, Stephen Ghent ultimately paid "the wages of sin," though in the course of the action he had risen to a sincere and regenerating love for her. To MARGARET ANGLIN, who, as the wife, was required to shoot Ghent, the deed seemed unnecessarily shocking to the audience without being inevitable artistically. As revised during the "tryout" performances, the play ended in her recognition of Ghent's humble and manly devotion. The result was a drama as deeply true and inspiring as the theme was novel to the stage.

Mr. MILLER'S performance touched the summit of his achievement as an actor. Admirably faithful to the intense quietude of Mr. MOODY'S scenes as to their vivid and often brutal realism, it yet attained in high measure the nobility and even the beauty of the older school.

NEW LIGHT ON BENEDICT ARNOLD.

Judgments of public men are sometimes strangely altered and even reversed by the revealing light of time. Popular heroes are later seen to be lucky drifters, while some who long passed for villains find rehabilitation. In one case, however, the public opinion of a man in his own lifetime has been not only confirmed but deepened. BENEDICT ARNOLD, by the latest disclosures about him, appears a blacker character than ever before.

A rich store of new details concerning the entire American Revolution will be taken from the voluminous records of Sir HENRY CLINTON, Commander-in-Chief of the British forces. In the few weeks since his private military papers have been in the possession of the University of Michigan, sufficient examination of them has been made to give a hint of the wealth of history buried in them. Already one story has been dug out, as told in yesterday's Magazine Section of THE TIMES. The British side of the story of ARNOLD'S treason is contained in hundreds of letters written by the traitor himself, his wife, Major ANDRE and CLINTON. In face of ARNOLD'S fifteen months' negotiation for the betrayal of the American cause and his mercenary demands on the British commander, it will be difficult for the most tender-hearted romantics to palliate his treachery. His letters were as full of figures as an adding machine, and when Sir HENRY tried to economize by making a lower offer, he stuck to the original sum and pointed out means of reducing other expenses. He could be bought; so presumably could every one else. Why not buy 3,000 American soldiers and substitute them for the more expensive Hessians? All told, ARNOLD emerges from these new documents without a particle of whitewash.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

To Consider Jurors' Convenience.

Justice JACOB MARKS of the Sixth District Municipal Court has called the attention of THE TIMES to a bill now before the Legislature which would remedy one of the many faults in our jury system. As at present conducted, there is a widespread disinclination on the part of the very men who would make the best jurors to avoid that duty. When they do not come in one of the too numerous classes that are exempt by law from service as jurors, practically no consideration of their convenience and interest is shown in the calls upon their time.

To remedy this condition, the bill mentioned provides that questionnaires be sent out by Commissioners of Jurors in the city's five counties, asking every man on the list to state the time or times during the period for which the jury panel of which he is a member has been drawn when it will be most convenient for him to serve. The replies are to be indexed and talesmen summoned for appearance as nearly as may be at the time or times specified in them.

That seems sensible enough, but it is so out of harmony with the common indifference shown in court for the convenience of jurors and witnesses that hope for its acceptance cannot be very strong. When lawyers ask for adjournment after adjournment they get them, and the waste of time for mere laymen does not count for much in any effectual quarter. Legislatures, too, are little eager to help in the doing of anything that inconveniences lawyers or threatens to decrease their incomes.

Exemptions Need Revision.

In a recent public address Justice MARKS went all over the jury system as it is and expressed the opinion that in most respects this venerable institution was antiquated, inefficient and ill calculated to result in just decisions. The number of exemptions, he said first, was far too great. He saw no reason why election officers, of whom there are about 3,900 in the city, should be left off. The like privilege of members of the Sheriff's juries, whose chief and almost only task is that of eating an annual dinner, should be withdrawn, the Justice declared, and he could not see any sense in exempting anybody except doctors, druggists, teachers, engineers and trainmen, and men connected with the fire and police departments.

As administered, the jury system results in the selection of jurors often of low intelligence, incapable of understanding either the evidence or the Judge's charge. To illustrate the latter point Justice MARKS told of a case involving the guilt or innocence of a man accused of stealing a watch. The evidence was conflicting, and as the jurors filed out one of them lingered. The Judge asked him if there was anything he wanted to know in addition to the charge he had just heard. The juror's face brightened. "Yes, your Honor," he said. "I'd like to know whether the prisoner stole the watch." The men who beg off from doing jury duty expect to get the help of courts in settling their own controversies, but they escape, if they can, the trouble and tedium for themselves that service as jurors would bring. Yet when they do have a case of their own in court they are the first to complain of the quality of juries and their incompetence to understand the evidence presented before them.

Invention New and Old Style.

Addressing the delegates to the Pan-American Congress last week Secretary HOOVER commented on what he said was the fact that of the great discoveries and inventions following each other in such quick succession nowadays, the benefits were not confined to the country in which they were made, but were shared by all the world.

That is true, of course, but he might have added that the sharing equally is at a price often large, paid to the exploiters of the discoveries and inventions.

Another point made by the Secretary was that "scientific discoveries are no longer the product of the genius in the garret" and that "invention is not possible for men inadequately trained or without means."

He was referring, of course, to the staffs of research workers maintained by some industrial companies and by certain public or private institutions devoted to that purpose. It is true that such men, having at command practically limitless resources and with no anxiety as to the immediate production of results, are more fortunate than "the genius in the garret." Endowed investigators do have many and great achievements to their credit, but large things have been done, and not so long ago either, by men who had to struggle with poverty.

There are such inventors still, and one of them, now eminent and successful, recently warned his kind to keep away from the big companies if they wanted to have their discoveries developed and to enjoy the financial proceeds of them.

An Alabama Mission.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In the mountains of Alabama a lonely female missionary is working with heart and soul and head and hands. Last year another woman joined her for a few months, sacrificing for the time being the life and duties that claimed her. The conditions prevailing among the "mountain whites" of our country have been described by better pens. And yet they beggar description. This is not to ask, it is only to give an opportunity to bestow voluntarily, in sending checks, however small, to Margaret Lee Allison, Minter, Ala.

A. B. M. AND M. L. A.

Two women toiling on a mountainside
For sake of those, for whom the Saviour died;
Two women sacrificing comfort, ease,
Served humbly those to whom life offered less
In lieu of plenteous draughts, Starvation, cold,
Crime, illness, sin and misery untold.
In every form, those noble women saw;
And straightway went as at behest of law
To minister in Jesus' holy name.
If they could give, can we not do the same?
Two women toiling on a mountainside
In lowly hut the weather's tax defied;
In open shed they cooked and served the food,
They bathed and dressed, they taught their little brood.
From out a life of shame they saved the young;
They found deserted babes who feebly clung
In utter helplessness though ignorant
Of mother love until those women went
To succor and to serve in Jesus' name.
If they could give, can we not do the same?

Legislation for Mine Safety.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your editorial of April 8 on "Rock-Dusting to Save Miners" is an admirably effective contribution to the movement for industrial safety. It is of potent aid in creating an informed public opinion upon which depends the enactment of legislation in all bituminous States to do away with needless mine disasters due to coal-dust explosions and their wholesale killing of miners.

In pointing out that the cost of safeguarding the mine with rock dust is slight—"less than 1 per cent. of the value of the coal produced"—you are well within the facts. It can be stated even more strongly: Experience in American mines has proved that the cost of rock-dusting is actually less than 1 cent per ton of coal mined. In view of the demonstrated effectiveness of rock-dusting in preventing coal-dust explosions, it will indeed be "a reproach to American civilization" if twenty-one State Legislatures delay longer in requiring the universal adoption of this important safety measure.

"I SAW THREE TEMPLES."

The three ruined temples at Paestum, in lower Italy, are all that remains of the Greek city of Poseidonia, which flourished there in the sixth century B. C.

I saw three temples, dead and desolate,
Between the purple mountains and the sea.
About them lay a level, lonely plain
Where bloomed the flower of death, the asphodel,
Above an ancient city buried there.

Upon the plain a placid peasant drove
Across the sunken city's walls and towers,
Upturning carelessly the fallow dust
That time had made of Posidonia . . .

I watched the plowman bend to toss aside
Some fragment that had struck against the blade.
Was it the shattered image of a god—
One of the long-forgotten gods whose shrines
Stood vast and vacant there before my eyes,
In beauty terrible?

Beholding them,
I heard the thunder of the centuries;
I glimpsed again the splendid, ancient days,
When, by the grace of great Poseidon,
This buried city's ships defied the waves;
When far-off harbors knew her daring sails;
When there was noise and commerce in her streets.

I heard the singing in the temples there,
The chanting priests, the lowing bullocks wreathed
For sacrifice, the shouting worshipers
Who flung their supplications and their prayers
Up to the gods—the gods so quiet, now,
Beneath the furrows of the peasant's plow,
So silent there below the asphodel.

Only the bare, brown columns, standing stark
Against the unremembering sky, remain
Between the purple mountains and the sea—
Three lonely temples on a level plain . . .
And all about them blooms the flower of death!

NEW ENGLAND TOLERANCE.

Irvin Cobb's Complaints Directed to Other Sections of the Country.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

If the Mayflower had made a round trip with her human cargo to the New World, rampageously wished by Irvin S. Cobb as reported in THE NEW YORK TIMES of March 23, it is probable that the manufacturing growth of the United States would have been retarded many years. We might even now, without the early and full development of Yankee inventions, be importing every year from England and other foreign lands hundreds of millions of dollars of necessities and luxuries which we make in such quantities as to supply not only ourselves but the peoples of the world to the extent of several billion dollars a year.

Mr. Cobb, bon vivant, deplores the "ravages of good-fellowship," which by inference he charges to prohibition. He will doubtless recall that Young's Hotel in Boston provided, not long ago, four bars and four dining rooms—a service to good-fellowship not excelled in pre-Volstead times by any hostelry of even his hospitable Kentucky. He charges New England with inspiring the intolerance which has brought him distress. But the author of the prohibition law hails from the Northwest and is not of New England ancestry. The general counsel of and foremost fighter for the Anti-Saloon League is from Ohio, in which Cincinnati was ever so famous for its malt, spirituous and vinous liquors. And, finally, it was Mr. Cobb's own Southland that, for local and political reasons, forced adoption of the obnoxious drink law.

As a fellow Kentuckian I have appreciated keenly the delightful indolences of the true-to-life characters Mr. Cobb has portrayed, but I must remind him there is no indolence in New England. The Yank is not lazy, as his more than seven billion dollars of manufactures a year testifies. Somebody has to invent and work; even if the rest of us want personal liberty unrestrained and without Puritanical taint.

Burning of witches was replaced by the burning of coal in New England manufacturing long before the good-fellowship of the duel was abolished in Kentucky.

The tolerance of Mr. Upshaw of Georgia, Mr. Blanton of Texas and other Southern political leaders does not take the shine off the New England brand. Like the trade-marks of its manufactured goods, the mark of Yankee tolerance pays and commands respect.

The late Senator from Massachusetts, W. Murray Crane—a typical New Englander—is described by his biographer, Griffin, as a member of the New England ancestral manufacturing aristocracy. That is what the Puritans have become. Indeed, New England's ancestral manufacturing aristocracy is the full bloom of the immigrant Mayflowers. Mr. Cobb would have had turned back from America's shores.

CLINICS FOR CRIME.

Work Already Begun in Prisons and at Napanoch Institution.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your editorial of March 28 you commend the proposed psychiatric clinic at Sing Sing, appropriation for the organization of which has been made by the current session of the Legislature. This, indeed, marks a forward stride in the operation of our prisons.

One might infer from the article, however, that no psychiatric work had been attempted in our State correctional institutions hitherto and that the proposed clinic would initiate the psychiatric study of the adult criminal in New York State.

This inference would be erroneous. The proposed clinic was probably inspired by the psychiatric survey of a group of criminals at Sing Sing by Dr. Bernard Glueck. Aside from this, the inmates of the State Reformatory at Elmira have been the subject of psychiatric study for a number of years. At Auburn State Prison the physician, Dr. Frank L. Heacox, has devoted a large portion of his efforts over a considerable period of time to this work, and at the institution for defective delinquents at Napanoch each inmate is carefully studied by the psychiatrist and the psychologist, and the data derived from these studies are utilized, not only in making their assignments within the institution and in the course of training prescribed, but in the preparation and selection of individuals for release on parole.

The organization of the Napanoch Institution might be said to be the beginning of the psychiatric classification of the criminal in the State, as its inmates, when committed directly by the Court or when transferred to it from other institutions, are so committed or transferred only after a psychiatric examination and the completion of a certificate of mental defect by qualified medical examiners.

The Institution for Defective Delinquents, organized in 1921, has a population of 600 inmates, although its cell capacity is but 496. The balance of the population is distributed in dormitory housing. Under present conditions of housing its utmost capacity has been reached, and from this time it will be unable to receive inmates by transfer unless funds for additional housing are forthcoming.

Not Kilrain's Championship Belt.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

On April 2 THE TIMES printed a Washington dispatch concerning the melting down of the John L. Sullivan belt, in the course of which the belt was referred to as the trophy presented by the late Richard K. Fox. This is an error, as readers of The Police Gazette well know. The belt in question was paid for by popular subscription by the citizens of Boston, who were admirers of the bruiser. The Police Gazette belt was given to Jake Kilrain and so far as is known is intact. CHARLES MARTIN.

PROHIBITION REMEDIES.

State Sale of Liquor Advocated Instead of Beer and Wine Law.

It seems the irony of fate that the inherently obscure subject of intoxicating liquors should become and remain the most disturbing subject in our administration of Government and social life; and the present agitation in Congress has only a remote bearing on a solution of the difficulties. The effort to amend the Volstead law so as to permit the manufacture, sale and use of what are termed light wines and beer would, if successful, amount to mockery instead of a remedy for the evil situation. It would bring back the vicious combinations between the breweries and the saloons, and all of the powers of Government supervision would not suffice to restrict the dealers in one large city of the country to the designated percentage of alcohol in the volume of products which they would handle. Our courts would be overwhelmed by a new mass of liquor cases, involving the question of whether liquor contained 2.75 per cent. or 2.85 per cent. of alcohol.

But the gravest of all the imperfections of the light wine and beer remedy is that it would have little or no tendency to diminish the smuggling of whisky, the broadcast illicit distilling and the aggrandizement of the bootlegging fraternity throughout the country. Neither would it materially mitigate the appalling violation of the prohibition law by the large element which will continue to regard it as an invasion of their reserved individual rights, beyond the scope of the law-making power.

As has been frequently pointed out, the only cure for the existing curse is an amendment of the Eighteenth Amendment so as to continue to prohibit all business in intoxicating liquors but permit the Federal Government or the States to furnish liquors to individuals at prices which will destroy the profits of the bootleggers and illicit distillers, and under regulations holding the individuals to accountability for good conduct. Only in this way can the efficiency of Government be restored and society cleansed of its unwholesome practices in connection with the prohibitory system. Only in this way can Government and people be relieved of the perpetual expense of a horde of demoralized and demoralizing Federal agencies operating on land and sea.

It is urged by those advocating an amendment of the Volstead act so as to provide for light wines and beer that the country needs immediate relief, and that a repeal or an amendment of the Eighteenth Amendment will require time. Quite true! But would not the wine and beer experiment be so inefficient as a remedy that it would still further complicate the situation and still further postpone all real relief by providing the advocates of the prohibitory system with the argument that the partial abandonment of prohibition was productive of no benefits; that the perjurer, the bootlegger, the law violator and evader were still in evidence, augmented by the brewery-saloon combination of evils? Mr. Weinberger on Mussolini.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Regarding the Gilbert Frankau meeting at the Civic Club, as reported in THE TIMES of April 8, it is stated that I "approved of the conduct of the British woman who fired at the Italian Dictator yesterday."

In the discussion of Captain Frankau's lecture, I stated that I was opposed to socialism and in favor of individualism that makes for progress in the world, and while opposed to the form of possible dictatorship under socialism or communism, I was as much opposed to the Mussolini dictatorship that Frankau approved. That if the British woman who shot Mussolini had been successful, and we had been invited to his funeral, we would have been like Mark Twain. When invited to the funeral of a man he did not like he wired, "Cannot attend, but approve of the proceedings."

In reference to Mrs. Story's statement and my reply as reported: in her discussion she assumed that all the members of the Civic Club were immigrants, and asked the oratorical question: "Did you not choose this country?" I replied, "No, I was born here, there was no choice" (as a witty reply).

I do not criticize the reporter who tried to get the high spots of the meeting and had to condense, but as printed it gives a wrong impression. HARRY WEINBERGER.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Danger lurks in the general statement, even in the columns of THE NEW YORK TIMES! A collection of 1,500 cook books was recently offered for sale en bloc by a Western collector and was reported as having been bought by a New York City dealer. A modest collection of about 200 titles is found in the Vassar College Library. The collection, assembled by Mrs. Elizabeth Robins Pennell and described by her in her sumptuously printed volume, "My Cookery Books," published in 1903, is probably the most important as yet brought together, comprising, as it does, the rarities of the sixteenth, seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. If these collections are not offered on the auction block, they have, at least presumably, been in part secured through that means.

If the cook-book is no longer demanded by the young bride and by the zealous housewife and is becoming an object of desire for collectors, to find later a permanent home in public and university libraries, does it not thereby "suffer a sea change into something rich and strange?" The student of history finds nowhere a more infallible record of changes in thought and in social conditions than is found in the humble family cook-book. L. M. S.

Anti-Turkish Protests.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In an editorial of April 3, you state that over one hundred Episcopal Bishops protested against the Senate ratifying the treaty of Lausanne because of alleged atrocities on the part of Turkey.

Why did not these Bishops protest when France committed her recent massacre in Damascus, and when Spain committed atrocities in Morocco? Did they protest when England committed the Amritsar murders and her more recent carnage in China? Did they protest to the United States Government and ask it to recall those misguided American aviators who aided the French in bombing innocent women and children in the defenseless villages of the Riff, claiming they were doing it "to maintain Christian supremacy throughout the world"?

No wonder these Oriental countries are "anti-Christian"! They certainly have suffered enough from Christian nations to make them so. Why protest so loudly against Turkey because she has been able to beat the Christian nations at their own game?

SANTA ROSA MOURNS PASSING OF BURBANK

Will Hold Memorial Service and Close Schools in Honor of Genius in Floriculture.

BURIAL IN GARDEN LIKELY

Wizard of Plant Breeding Passed Away, Still Skeptical as to a Hereafter.

SANTA ROSA, Cal., April 11 (AP).—Luther Burbank, who died here early today (as told in a late edition of yesterday's TIMES), passed on to the great adventure of a hereafter in which he had no faith. Only a few weeks before the end the great plant wizard had declared that he could not believe in a life after death. As life ebbed away and he stood at the brink he did not falter in his convictions.

The controversy started by his pronouncements on religion contributed to his last illness. The stress he was subjected to in defending and explaining his beliefs brought on a nervous condition that his 77 years could not survive.

"Oh, doctor, I am very sick," were his last words.

They were uttered to his physician, Dr. Joseph H. Shaw.

Edgar A. Waite of The San Francisco Bulletin revealed today that he had obtained an interview with Mr. Burbank, to be used only after his death, in which the scientist said that the real reason for his success as a plant culturist was a disappointment in love many years ago.

This, he told Mr. Waite, turned his energies and his genius into what became his life's work and made him famous.

Lindsey May Give Eulogy.

The city that claimed Mr. Burbank as its foremost citizen perhaps felt the blow of death the most, although persons all over the world had followed his illness and hoped for his recovery. The schools will be closed tomorrow. Mr. Burbank often had the children at his home to show them around his gardens.

Public memorial services will be held on Wednesday afternoon at Doyle Park, among the flowers and trees where Mr. Burbank had spent so many pleasant hours with friends.

Judge Ben B. Lindsey of the Denver Juvenile Court, a close friend, will deliver the eulogy. This is in keeping with a promise made by the Judge. The Rev. Earl S. Dutton, pastor of the First Unitarian Church of San Francisco, who officiated at the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Burbank, ten years ago, also will speak. The schools will be closed for the day, and 3,000 school children will sing his favorite songs.

It is tentatively agreed that the final resting place of the plant scientist will be in his garden, among the flowers to which he has given so many of the years of his life.

Among the mourners are Mr. Burbank's little dog Bonita. A few days ago the dog wandered into the sick room to be fondled for the last time. Today it sat on the porch forlorn.

WANTS RESCUE CREDIT TO GO TO FISHERMEN

POINT PLEASANT, N. J., April 11.—Axel B. Carlsen, President of the American-Scandinavian Society of this place, announced today that the society was gathering evidence to refute the claim of Coast Guardsmen of the Barnegat City Station that they rescued three seamen from the wreck of the barge Metropolitan, off Barnegat Feb. 5. The rescue was made by four fishermen in a skiff, he said, Coast Guardsmen taking only a minor part.

The evidence will be given to State Senator Thomas A. Mathis of Toms River, Carlsen continued, with a request that Mathis's recommendation to the Legislature that medals be awarded the Coast Guard crew be withdrawn.

Superintendent M. W. Rasmussen of Asbury Park, in command of the Fifth Coast Guard District, who described the rescue as "one of the most glittering in Coast Guard annals," admitted today that a fishing skiff had stood by during the rescue and that one of the rescued seaman had been transferred from the lifeboat to the skiff. The actual rescue work, however, he said, was done by the Coast Guards.

"A small skiff manned by John Jergensen and three others put out to the wreckage and succeeded in getting one man, who was lashed to a plank, aboard, after the Coast Guards had made futile efforts to do so," Carlsen said. "The crew of the skiff then took a man named Carter from the top of the pilot house and later battered down a door to rescue a third, who was lashed to the wheel within the house.

"The fishermen aren't looking for medals or any other honors, but if credit is given it should go where it belongs."

"There has been no attempt unjustly to give the Coast Guards credit for the rescue," Superintendent Rasmussen said. "It appears that the first man rescued was transferred from the lifeboat to the fishing skiff, the second man was taken aboard the skiff by Coast Guardsmen and the third, within the pilot house, was taken out by a member of the Coast Guard crew."

A resolution, introduced by Senator Mathis, commending the Coast Guards, was passed by the Senate recently.

PLANS LENINGRAD AUCTION.

Soviet Will Sell "Superfluous Treasures" of the Hermitage.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

RIGA, April 11.—The Soviet authorities have arranged an auction of the superfluous treasures of the Hermitage at Leningrad, consisting chiefly of bronzes, china, pictures and crystal, according to Leningrad newspapers.

It is also intended to sell the contents of the "historical rooms of Alexander II, Alexander III and Nicholas II, at the Winter Palace." The rooms already have been closed as "having to do with scientific interest."

700 CHINESE ARRESTED IN NEWARK ROUND-UP

Seven hundred Chinese, all residents of Newark's Chinese quarter, were arrested last night by forty Federal agents and thirty Newark policemen. The round-up was ordered by immigration authorities to learn whether there lived in the city Chinese who had been smuggled into the country.

Sixty of the Chinese were held for further examination today after they were unable to produce immigration certificates or passports showing their admission into the country was legal. Six others were held, charged with violation of the State and national prohibition law in possessing a twenty-five-gallon still, and two others were held, charged with violation of the Harrison anti-narcotic law in possessing $1,000 of opium.

The raid was made in four blocks of ramshackle tenements, where only Chinese lived above laundries, restaurants and vegetable shops. The thirty policemen under Deputy Chief James McGrell surrounded the neighborhood while the Federal agents, who came from New York, Philadelphia, Boston and Providence, searched the buildings under the direction of Michael F. Brophy of the Law Division at Ellis Island and O. A. H. De Lagardie, Chief of the Narcotic Division of New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

The Chinese offered no resistance, and were led from garrets and cellars to the street and turned over to the policemen, while the Federal agents returned to bring others. They were all marched to City Hall, which is near by, and placed in the district court room and the Council Chamber for questioning. Most of those who were held claimed they lost their immigration certificates in the San Francisco earthquake and fire. If they are unable to produce proof they are in the country legally, it was said, they will be deported.

Those who were held were locked up in the Essex County Jail.

PLAYS PAGANINI VIOLIN.

GENOA, April 11 (AP).—The famous Paganini violin, which for years has been kept in a glass case, was removed from that receptable by special permission of the authorities and used today at a concert by Bronislaw Gilpel.

When Paganini died his favorite instrument was carefully laid away. That was in 1840. Since then several noted violinists, including Kubelik and Hubermann, have played upon it.

Of late it has been realized that it will have to be used more frequently if it is to withstand the ravages of a type of moth which threatens to destroy it.

MEDICAL BILL OPPOSED.

A. L. Becker Says Unqualified Practitioners Could Get Licenses.

Belief that unqualified persons might find it comparatively easy to procure licenses to practice medicine under the terms of the Webb-Loomis bill if it should be passed by the Legislature was expressed yesterday by Alfred L. Becker, former Deputy Attorney General. Mr. Becker said that a recent amendment to the bill would admit practitioners of physiotherapy and psychotherapy, and that different kinds of healers might be classified through these channels.

Mr. Becker also criticized the provision of the bill creating a board on grievances, and said this might set up a "medical autocracy" and result in medical heresy trials.

FLIGHT SPANS WEST COAST.

Hop From San Diego to Seattle Is Made in 11 Hours 25 Minutes.

A flight from the Mexican border at San Diego to the Canadian border at Seattle and return has just been accomplished by a Ryan monoplane, equipped with a Wright 200-horsepower motor, it was announced yesterday by the Wright Aeronautical Corporation in Paterson, N. J. The flight north was made in 11 hours and 23 minutes. The return trip occupied ten minutes longer.

The plane was piloted by T. C. Ryan, President of the Ryan Aircraft Corporation, and was made in the interests of the Pacific Air Transport, Inc., which will operate the air mail over this course.

PRINCETON BOYS IN RAID NET

Officials of the University on Hand to Furnish Bail for Them.

TRENTON, N. J. April 12 (AP).—In a raid on Robin Hood Inn, a short distance from Pennington, thirty persons, seven of whom are said to be Princeton students were arrested by county authorities last night.

The raid followed efforts of Dean Gauss of Princeton to close up roadhouses and stores which students are said to frequent and where they are said to have obtained liquor.

At an early hour this morning the prisoners were being questioned by county officers. A Princeton official was on hand to furnish bail for the students.

PRINCE TO RACE JUMPERS.

Like King Edward, Will Enter Horses in Steeplechase Events.

LONDON, April 11.—The Prince of Wales, according to a report, is to follow his grandfather's example and own steeplechasers which he will enter for the chief "over the sticks" events on the English turf.

The Prince, it is stated, will not ride horses himself in races but may mount them in some of their schooling gallops.

Crushed to Death by Elevator.

Lloyd Gordon, a negro, 31 years old, of 2,553 Eighth Avenue, was crushed to death last night when he was dragged between the elevator cage and the elevator shaft from the second to the sixth floor of the apartmer house at 518 West 111th Street, in which he was employed. He had stopped the elevator at the second floor to do an errand. Returning, he apparently reached inside the cage and pulled the controller handle intending to jump in. The elevator, however, shot up swiftly before he had an opportunity to jump back.

BAGDAD'S PERIL GROWING.

BAGDAD, Iraq, April 11 (AP).—The menace of the flood tonight is greater than ever. The break in the bank of the Tigris River is now 200 yards wide and water is pouring through in enormous volume. The flooded area of desert around the city is rapidly extending. The water level is fifteen feet higher than many parts of Bagdad, which are being protected by earth embankments.

Thousands of men are engaged in strengthening these embankments against the waters, which so far have done at least $5,000,000 damage. If the water penetrates the city the damage will be enormous, doubtless with many casualties. The people are in a state of anxious tension and all classes have been ordered to aid in putting up the barriers. Many wealthy men are doing hard labor for the first time in their lives. King Feisal is actively cooperating in the work.

Bagdad is faced with a malarial Summer because of the floods, as the surrounding desert will not dry until Autumn, and will thus provide breeding grounds for mosquitos. Crops in many areas will be ruined.

It is reported that the river is rising at Mohul, 250 miles to the north.

CALLS SLUMS A DISGRACE.

Dr. Eddy Says Houses Here Are Built Without Intelligence.

"New York is a city of criminally disgraceful slums," declared Dr. Sherwood Eddy of the National Council of the Young Men's Christian Association, at services celebrating the tercentenary of New York City in St. Paul's Chapel, Columbia University, yesterday afternoon.

Dr. Eddy, who spoke on the development of the city, said that many thousands live here in houses built "without conscience and without intelligence."

"Although many persons believe that the congestion will be relieved by the new apartments that are being constructed," Dr. Eddy continued, "less than 3 per cent. of these buildings are within reach of 70 per cent. of the people."

Dr. Eddy contrasted conditions here with those in Vienna, which, he said, although it is one of the poorest cities in the world, is building 30,000 new homes for the poor and offers apartments for $2 a month which would cost $200 in New York.

3,000,000 BEES COMING.

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, April 11 (AP).—More than 3,000,000 bees, said to be the largest long-distance bee migration on record, will tomorrow complete the first leg of their journey to new fields of endeavor in the Middle West when they reach New York. They are from the mountain apiaries of a local bee breeder and fancier.

Carefully housed in modified hives, each of the 290 colonies carries a queen, an escort of workers and food for more than a week's journey.

The Porto Rico Department of Agriculture describes the migration as important, in that the island, so far as is known, is the only place in the bee world free from "foul brood," a bacterial disease which kills young bees in the cell.

From New York the colonies will go their separate ways to beekeepers in many States who want to strengthen their apiaries in time for the bees to gather this Summer's honey crop.

WARNS AGAINST GERMANY.

Poincare Tells French They Must Protect Themselves.

BAR-LE-DUC, France, April 11 (AP).—Raymond Poincare, the War President of France and former Premier, speaking at his home town today, warned the nation against granting Germany full and complete confidence.

"France has been obliged to defend the main clauses of the Versailles Treaty against the permanent ill-will of our former enemies and the constant indifference of former friends, themselves entrusted with the control and fulfillment of the undertakings assumed by Germany," said M. Poincare. "We must first look to ourselves for protection. We must rely upon our patriotism and moral and physical vigor. In order to be good citizens of the world we must first be good Frenchmen."

PRAISES SYNAGOGUE WORK.

Isaac Siegel Speaks at Institutional Anniversary Dinner.

Ex-Congressman Isaac Siegel, who addressed the ninth anniversary dinner of the Institutional Synagogue last night at the Hotel Astor, predicted the day when a referendum on incipient war would be no more unusual than contemporary referenda on prohibition. He praised the work of the synagogue, situated at 37-43 West 116th Street, saying that it helped in quelling youthful crime in Harlem.

"Institutions of its kind," he continued, "are the best possible insurance against law-breaking in general. After school hours, 900 children make use of our gymnasium and swimming classes. We are trying to do our full duty toward the youngsters, which is more than all the parents in New York can say.

"From three to five thousand people pass the doors of the Institutional Synagogue every day," Mr. Siegel added.

The proceeds of the dinner netted $14,000, which sum will go toward maintaining the synagogue building.

Harry Fischel praised Rabbi Herbert S. Goldstein. He said the Institutional Synagogue was the first to mix Americanism with Judaism with any success.

Those at the speaker's table were Elias A. Cohen, Benjamin Winters, Lester Udell, Mr. Fischell, Mr. Siegel, Sol Stroock, Rabbi Goldstein and Morris Jablow.

Old Paulsboro Boys' Reunion.

WENONAH, N. J., April 11—The Auld Lang Syne Club, a unique organization started several years ago by men who were born at Paulsboro, will hold its annual reunion next Sunday here at the estate of Belford F. Royal. Mr. Royal, who is President of the Board of Directors of the Victor Talking Machine Company, is President of the association. Harry Fish of Woodbury, is the Vice President. There are now twenty-two surviving members out of an original twenty-seven. All of them are 50 years old or more, and were boys together at Paulsboro.

ROBERT S. SLOAN DIES OF PNEUMONIA

Returned to Service in the Spanish-American War—Father of Major Thomas D. Sloan.

Robert Sage Sloan, retired naval officer, died suddenly Saturday night at his residence, Chilton Gables, Woodmere, Long Island, after an illness of only two days of pneumonia. He is survived by his wife, who was Miss Ethel Donaldson at the time of their marriage in Baltimore in 1893; a son, Major Thomas D. Sloan of the United States Army, and a daughter, Mrs. John S. Liddell of London.

Funeral services will be held at 6:45 this afternoon in Trinity Church, Hazlett, Long Island. Burial will take place at Oswego, N. Y.

Mr. Sloan was born at Oswego, N. Y., October 23, 1859, a son of the late Senator George Beals and Alvira C. Sloan, and a descendant of Richard Warren, who came to America on the Mayflower. He was graduated from the Naval Academy at Annapolis in 1879.

For the first two years of his services he was on the Alert and the Richmond on the Asiatic station. Then followed a cruise in a sailing ship, the Jamestown, which doubled Cape Horn in a voyage from San Francisco to Newport. After two years in the United States Coast Survey service, largely spent on board the survey steamer Gedney, Lieutenant Sloan resigned from the navy and engaged in business in Oswego.

With the outbreak of the war with Spain he offered his services to his country and after a brief period as chief of staff of the commanding officer of the New York Naval Militia, with the rank of Lieutenant Commander, he was commissioned a lieutenant in the United States Navy and sent to the West Indies as executive officer of the Stranger, of the blockading squadron off Havana. He received his honorable discharge from the navy in October, 1898.

For some years Mr. Sloan had been a resident of Woodmere. He was a trustee of the American Surety Company, among his clubs were the University, Down Town, Rockaway Hunt, and the Army and Navy of Washington. He was a member of the Mayflower Descendants and The Pilgrims.

VIEW HENRY MILLER'S BODY.

Several hundred persons, most of them members of the theatrical profession, visited the Church of the Transfiguration in East Twenty-ninth Street last night to view the body of Henry Miller, actor, manager and producer. It will continue to lie in state there until the funeral services tomorrow morning.

Among those who came to "The Little Church Around the Corner" last night were Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hornblow Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Richman, Elmer Brown, stage manager of the Henry Miller Theatre; Si Goodfriend, advance man for Mr. Miller, and William R. Sheehan.

STARS AID EX-SERVICE MEN.

A dinner to raise funds for the benefit of ex-service men in the hospitals was held by the Stage Women's War Relief in the Century Theatre roof garden last night. It was followed by dancing and numbers by professional men and women of the stage. The dinner began at 11 P. M., for which more than 400 tickets were sold at $10 each. The proceeds are to be used in providing entertainment for the sick and disabled ex-soldiers.

FRED STONE on McCALL STREET

The "Reminiscences" of Fred Stone are now running in McCall's Magazine. And because he has known merit, McCall Street will read with absorbing interest this fascinating narrative of hard-won success.

You can stop the traffic on McCall Street if you flash "known merit" on the semaphore. That is why the fiction in McCall's, the fashions in McCall's, and the special articles in McCall's are written by men and women of known merit. At the right is a partial list of writers of special articles for McCall's for 1926. Note their names. The label of known merit stands out on each.

McCall Street is quick to recognize things of merit and help them to become better known. The people on McCall Street know what's what—in food, books, theatres, fashions, music, automobiles or the dozen and one things which form a part of their lives.

McCall Street is sophisticated. "Show me!" they say on McCall Street. And "show them" you must. McCall Street has neither the time nor the inclination for things that are not worth while.

Glance over the advertising pages of McCall's. A roster of the goods advertised in McCall's is a catalog of goods of known merit. These goods would not be advertised in McCall's if McCall's were not their kind of market. If you make an article of known merit, or an article of merit that deserves to be known, you can count on McCall Street to accept and endorse it quickly.

Chicago, San Francisco, Boston, Atlanta, Toronto.

TO have merit and not be known may mean something in the future, but it means nothing at present. To be known but to be without merit is to be sliding from the present into the past.

But known merit is a thing of the immediate present. McCall's is a magazine of the immediate present. Its contributors are writers of known merit. Its advertisers offer goods of known merit, and its readers buy and consume known merit.

THE hundreds of thousands of Americans who have been thrilled and delighted by Fred Stone's inimitable antics in "The Wizard of Oz," "The Red Mill," "Chin Chin," "Tip Top," "Stepping Stones," have probably wagered that he is a wonderful person to know. He is. No actor today is more beloved by theatre folk and friends in private life. His road from traveling circus to stardom has been a hard one. But it has left no trace of bitterness or scepticism in this sympathetic, devout man. His recent public declaration of religious principles has made Fred Stone, the man, admired by thousands who have known him only as Fred Stone, the actor. He has just completed twenty years under the continuous management of Charles Dillingham, and will appear next season with his wife, Allene Crater, and his daughter, Dorothy, in Mr. Dillingham's new production, "Criss Cross."

Known Merit

Why McCall Street demands it

WHO are the people who live on McCall Street?

They are people on the sunny side of life, mostly married. People with children—with all the needs that families have. Yet people who own motor cars and belong to clubs. They own their own homes or plan to own homes soon.

They entertain frequently—at bridge, at dinner, at tea. They dance. They go out. In their homes and in their dress they reflect a spirit of up-to-dateness. They have money in the bank.

Youth . . . Enterprise . . . Ambition . . . Growing incomes . . . ! Good taste!

These are the outstanding characteristics of the people who live on McCall Street—only through known merit can you interest such a market as this.

MAYOR WINS PRAISE OF CITIZENS UNION

His Administration Has Begun Well, Says an Article in Its Organ, The Searchlight.

REGRETS HIS FRAIL HEALTH

Commends McLaughlin, Saying Police Morale Has Gained by Dropping Enright's Fads.

GOOD WORDS FOR OTHERS

Improvement in All Departments Noted Where Hylan Men Have Been Superseded.

Under the heading, "A New Régime at City Hall," the Citizens Union commends Mayor James J. Walker and expresses general approval of the way in which he has started his Administration in an article in the current issue of The Searchlight, its official publication. The article also notes improvement in some of the city departments, and specifically commends Police Commissioner George V. McLaughlin, Commissioner of Accounts Joseph A. Warren and Dr. Louis I. Harris, Health Commissioner.

"No new Mayor ever faced his responsibilities with a clearer mandate or a more hopeful and confident volume of public sentiment behind him than did James J. Walker," the Searchlight says. "He had been emphatically commissioned to lift forthwith the humiliating smoke-screen of bluff, bluster and hollow sham behind which his predecessor had been playing at discharging his public duties.

Calls Hylanism Dead.

"There is every evidence today that Hylanism is dead. The Mayor is having his troubles with the Borough Presidents, who naturally want to obtain all they can for their boroughs, but, in the main, they are giving him their loyal support in carrying out his policy of a readjustment of the city's resources to the city's needs.

"The Citizens Union believes that the new Administration has by many of its acts won the confidence of the community in an exceptional degree. The union and other groups interested in civic improvement have not found it at all difficult to cooperate with the Walker Administration. Their constructive criticism has been received, not in a hostile spirit, but as evidence of a desire to help. The union has every expectation that this situation will continue. • • •

"It is to be regretted that the new Administration has been seriously hampered by the Mayor's apparent frail health. He appears to have been very willing and, in fact, anxious to gratify the wishes of his numerous friends to exhibit him at all sorts of evening social gatherings. These festivities have been frequently prolonged far into the night and repeated night after night. A temporary halt was called when the Mayor was evidently facing a serious physical breakdown, but to all appearances the lesson has not as yet been learned.

City Meetings Dignified

"The meetings so far of the Board of Estimate and Sinking Fund Commission have been marked by a return to the decorum and orderly procedure appropriate in such a body. The Mayor has presided with dignity. The calendar has been taken up and business transacted with dispatch and in a parliamentary manner. The disgraceful wrangling, verbal browbeating and contention of the old order have ceased. It has become an agreeable instead of a painful experience to attend the sessions. • • •

"Mayor Walker has effected a complete reversal of the Hylan policy with respect to dealing with the transit situation. Instead of rebuffing and scorning all advances on the part of State officials and representatives of the transit operating companies, the new Mayor immediately invited representatives of all interests, public and private, into conference with him and his Cabinet. For the first time in many years these matters have been discussed frankly 'across the table' in City Hall by those most immediately interested, with a view to getting at the facts as a basis for practical negotiation. These discussions have been extended to include the pending bus franchises.

Praises Mayor's Helpers.

"Aside from this hopeful approach to the solution of the city's transit problem, there have been evidences in many city departments of a new spirit. This has been due in part to the character of the men appointed to direct the work of the departments. The Mayor has had the advantage of the valuable experience of Charles F. Kerrigan, former Deputy Controller, whom he appointed to the position of Assistant to the Mayor. Especially in the departments of Police, Health and Accounts has an improvement been noticeable. In fact, in almost all the departments, where the Mayor felt that he could displace Hylan's appointee and put a man of his own choice in office, improvements have been noted.

"The new Police Commissioner, George V. McLaughlin, former State Superintendent of Banking, entered upon his duties with energy and sincerity. The results so far have been gratifying. A new spirit of honest effort among the rank and file of the force has been developed. Many of the silly frills and follies of the Enright régime have been discarded, [illegible] have been abolished and the [illegible] have been given to understand that they are expected to do real police work so long as they remain on the force. The Commissioner has stated positively that the widespread ticket-selling activities of the force, which the union persistently combated during Enright's administration, will be discontinued.

Snow Graft Revealed.

"The new Commissioner of Accounts, Joseph A. Warren, has brought about a refreshing transformation in the administration of his important office, which was so long degraded by Hirshfield. Commissioner Warren has done commendable work in pursuing and bringing to account the perpetrators of the snow removal fraud.

"Dr. Louis I. Harris, the new Commissioner of Health, is another Walker appointee who promises better things in his department. He has indicated his intention of terminating the 'fake epidemic emergency inspector' evil, which the union disclosed during the incumbency of his predecessor. He is also taking practical steps toward mitigating the intolerable rush-hour congestion in the subways."

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, April 11.—Out of every 100 francs the French taxpayer pays, 58.50 francs goes to administration of the internal debt, 24.30 to the civil service and 17.20 to military and naval costs.

One item included this year in the budget is 1,604,000,000 for military and naval pensions and for soldiers and sailors wounded in the great war.

Senator Chéron believes that if confidence is maintained and the national defense bonds are renewed throughout the year there will be no more need for inflation.

CITY'S CHARITY BILL $200,000,000 A YEAR

Twice That of Any City, Says Director of Welfare Council at Opening of New Centre.

1,500 WELFARE AGENCIES

These Alone Are Estimated to Cost New York $80,000,000—Chicago's Social Service Costs $35,000,000.

New York City, with contributions estimated at $200,000,000 annually, gives more than twice as much as any other city in the world to charity, it was said yesterday by William Hodson, Director of the Welfare Council at the opening of the new centre at 151 Fifth Avenue for six social service societies.

"Nobody has accurately computed the total of New York's humanitarian gifts," said Mr. Hodson, "but a figure of more than $200,000,000 a year is a conservative estimate of the city's aggregate expenditures, public and private, on religious, educational and social service work. In the latter category alone New York spent last year, through its 1,500 welfare agencies, nearly $80,000,000.

"The need for coordination and cooperation among these 1,500 social service agencies was the reason for the formation a year ago of the Welfare Council, which has taken the lead in the present joint housing plan under a single roof as the nucleus of a centre dedicated to coordination and cooperation.

"One may well stand amazed, not only at the number of the city's welfare societies, but also at the variety of service performed. Under the general classification of family welfare there are 342 agencies and institutions grouped under ten subdivisions, ranging from family service societies to homes for the aged and loan associations. In the field of child welfare there are 247 agencies. Some 234 health agencies include every phase of preventive and educational work, treatment in hospitals and clinics and mental hygiene. There are 262 societies doing educational, recreational and neighborhood work.

"Out of the total of 1,500 agencies, some are maintained by the State or municipality; many more are privately organized and financed. Some minister to the needs of particular racial and religious groups, others serve any who apply within the zone of their operations. There are very large organizations with extensive budgets and permanent endowments, down to the small ones with a single worker or occasional volunteer. A considerable number of societies are nearly as old as the city itself.

"The total expenditure of the 1,500 agencies, private and municipal, is estimated at slightly less than $80,000,000. Of this, the City Government contributes $31,000,000, while the remainder is made up, according to a recent compilation, of $20,000,000 from private gifts and endowments and $29,000,000 from earnings. Chicago's welfare agencies spend $35,000,000 a year; Detroit, $14,000,000; Cleveland, $13,000,000; Buffalo, $8,000,000; Milwaukee and Minneapolis, $6,000,000 each; Rochester and Kansas City, $5,000,000 each."

The social agencies in the Welfare Council Building are the Welfare Council, the United Hospital Fund, the City Recreation Committee, the Association of Volunteers for Service, the Federation of Agencies Caring for Protestants, and Better Times, the welfare magazine. The officers of the Welfare Council are Robert W. De Forest, President; Dwight W. Morrow, James H. Post, Felix M. Warburg and Nicholas F. Brady, Vice Presidents, and Homer Folks, Chairman of the Executive Committee.

WAR ON ILLEGAL REALTORS.

Edgemere Police Order "Outside" Operators to Leave Town.

The police of Edgemere were appealed to yesterday by real estate operators to prevent "outside" and unlicensed real estate operators from doing business in that section. The local men urged Captain Myers to have uniformed men available yesterday, when it was expected large numbers of prospective bungalow purchasers would arrive.

The unlicensed brokers, who had gone to Edgemere when the "boom" started two weeks ago, were singled out when they attempted to do business and ordered to leave town. Some women, who had hopes of making big money selling real estate there, were inclined to resent the police interference, and it was only after they had been threatened with arrest that they accepted the invitation of the police and left town.

The police said about 50,000 pleasure seekers visited the Rockaways yesterday. In anticipation of a large crowd many concessionaires were doing business.

COMMENDS WALKER SURVEY

W. H. Allen Suggests Subway Inspection as Well as Hospital.

Commending Mayor Walker's recent inspection of Bellevue Hospital, William H. Allen, Director of the Institute for Public Service, suggested yesterday that it ask Mayor Walker to make a personal inspection of subways. Mr. Allen added that the association might use this suggestion at the meeting of representatives of the city's business organizations, which it has called for tomorrow, to consider the transit situation generally and the association's protest against the construction of the proposed Fifty-third Street subway, if it is merely to serve as a link in an independent, municipally operated subway system.

Mr. Allen also suggested that Mayor Walker should have the transit survey he said was needed before going any further with subway plans proposed by his predecessor, Mayor Hylan.

PLANNED TO HOLD UP SCHOOL GIRL PROM

ADMIT OTHER ROBBERIES

One Had Attended Night Classes at Columbia—Police Call Them Product of Poolrooms.

Four young men, one a former student in night classes at Columbia University, were arrested early yesterday in the Bronx, charged with grand larceny. They confessed, according to the police, to several hold-ups, the planning of several others and the failure of one which they said would have been the "greatest coup of all."

This, it was said, was to have been the hold-up of several hundred guests at the Senior Prom of Barnard School for Girls at the Women's University Club on April 8, but it "fell through," the police said, because the quartet couldn't get tickets of admission and the non-college men felt a delicacy about "crashing the gate."

The four young men said they were John A. McLean, 20 years old, of 2,115 Hughes Avenue, a former student in a Columbia textile course; Theodore Walkley, 29, of 2,211 Belmont Avenue; James J. Barrett, 20, of 1,015 East 179th Street, and Fred Mathes, 17, of 2,116 Arthur Avenue, all of the Bronx.

They were arrested after McLean had complained to the police that Walkley had stolen a saxophone and clarinet from him. Detectives Dermody, Harris and Lenihan of the Tremont Avenue Station, who questioned Walkley, said he became incensed at McLean for "squealing" against him and gave them information which led to the arrest of all as robbers.

The alleged confession of the four men was reported by the police to District Attorney John E. McGeehan and Police Commissioner George V. McLaughlin, who came to the Tremont Station early in the morning to question the young men personally.

Product of Pool Rooms.

The police said the quartet were products of Bronx pool rooms, where they loafed all day and planned hold-ups to get money to take out girls at night. McLean and Walkley, it was said, appeared to be the leaders, each furnishing suggestions or "tip-offs" on places to rob. McLean, it was said, suggested the hold-up of the dance of the Barnard school seniors, because there would be more than a hundred young women there wearing jewelry.

The police said they confessed to the hold-up and robbery on April 3 of Isaac Harkavy, a druggist, at Bryant Avenue and 179th Street, and to the hold-up and robbery on April 5 of Solomon Gard, a druggist, of 2,121 Belmont Avenue, who was severely beaten with a billiard ball enclosed in a sock. Walkley, it was also said, confessed he had snatched a purse containing $14 from the hand of Mrs. Ben Bernie, wife of the orchestra leader, in Van Cortlandt Park a few days later.

They gave much thought, according to the confession related by the police, to the hold-up of the guests at the senior prom of Barnard School, which was held at 106 East Fifty-second Street, a few doors east of Park Avenue. The plan, it was said, was for all to go to the dance in evening clothes, ostensibly guests, but carrying pistols, and at an opportune time to "cover the crowd" and rob it.

It was felt that this would be comparatively easy because the section is a quiet one, with few policemen, while there would be few persons in the building available to give an alarm. McLean, it was said, got one ticket for the dance, but was unable to get more, and his companions refused to go through with the hold-up, saying that "crashing the gate" might make them conspicuous, causing them, even if they got in, to be watched and spoiling their plans.

Some of the other robberies which the police say they planned were to blow the safe of the Elsmore Theatre, at Elsmere Place and Southern Boulevard in the Bronx, to hold up the Pathé exchange in West Forty-fifth Street, where Walkley was once employed, and the robbery of the post-office at Wappinger Falls, once the home of McLean.

The four men will be arraigned today in the West Farms Court.

Holds Two in $50,000 Bail Each.

Two men who were charged with robbing John Giordano of 599 Bushwick Avenue, Saturday night, of clothing and jewelry valued at $380 were held yesterday by Magistrate Howard Dale in the Gates Avenue Court in $50,000 bail each for examination on April 15.

The men said they were Carlo Devono, 30 years old, of 77 Taaffe Place, and Rocco Matteo, 22, of 836 Kent Avenue, both of Brooklyn, who were arrested by Patrolman Conway of the Wilson Avenue Station on suspicion as they hailed a taxicab, in which Conway said he found some clothing and jewelry. Shortly after this Giordano reported his home had been robbed and identified the property as his.

Magistrate Dale commended Patrolman Conway for his alertness and said he would communicate an "official commendation" to Police Commissioner McLaughlin.

Magistrate Abram Rosenbluth held two men without bail yesterday in the Essex Market Court for examination tomorrow on the charge of assaulting and attempting to rob Louis Pallov, 28 years old, of 917 Forty-fourth Street, Brooklyn, driver of a bread wagon for the Pechter Bread Company of 423 Cherry Street, who was set upon by six men early yesterday in Grand Street. One of the driver's assailants fired a pistol and the sound brought Patrolman Ferdinand Echer, who arrested two men, who said they were Matthew Cantwell, 23, of 87 Steel Street, Staten Island (no town given), and Michael Kanes, 19, of 458 West Seventeenth Street. Pellov was taken to Gouverneur Hospital for treatment for two slight knife wounds.

Veto of Harriman Plan Deplored in Berlin; Germans Hope Banks Will Back Russian Trade

By LINCOLN EYRE.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, April 11.—The State Department's veto on W. A. Harriman's project for financing German exports to Russia has caused profound disappointment in official quarters here. For obvious diplomatic reasons, however, the German Foreign Office declines to comment on Washington's decision.

What arrangements now can be made for realizing the Russo-German trade program, which is still a basic section of Chancellor Luther's economic program, is the subject of considerable embarrassment to the German Government. Wilhelmstrasse voices confidence, however, that a satisfactory solution will be found by the German banks without the help of foreign capital.

"To those unfamiliar with the finesse of American talent for differentiation this becomes remarkable when one remembers that this same American Government permitted Harriman to acquire a big manganese concession in the Caucasus, although this is also indirect financing of the Soviets, which draw large sums therefrom. Incidentally, be it noted, this deal brusquely sidetracked German interests.

"Would America forbid Ford to supply Russia with automobiles and tractors on the basis of his famous credit system? The whole business seems to be a political Cathcart case. Unfortunately, however, it is of a less ludicrous character. For evidently Washington's intervention means heavy damage to Germany's exportation payments.

"If the American Government seriously considers this development it will soon be obliged to record the practical failure of the Dawes plan, which is already theoretically admitted. Or are the efforts to drive Germany away from Russia, now so openly revealed, to be carried to the point where trade between the two countries is absolutely barred?"

$11,820 DISAPPEARS FROM SAVINGS BANK

Teller Discovers Loss After Returning to Cage From Answering Phone Call.

CUSTOMERS NEAR AT TIME

The loss of $11,820 from a paying teller's cage in the East River Savings Bank, at 295 Broadway, on the afternoon of April 2, was revealed yesterday by officials of the bank, who have reported the matter to detectives of Inspector John D. Coughlin's staff. According to Darwin R. James, President of the bank, the loss is fully covered by insurance. Detective Lieutenant Mayer, and Sergeant Brown have been assigned to the case.

The loss was first discovered by Frederick Bendolt, a paying teller, when he counted a pile of currency that had been placed on a shelf in his cage. Two other tellers were in the cage with him, and a few minutes previously one of them handed him a pile of currency amounting to $15,000. Bendolt gave the other teller a receipt slip for the money and placed the pile of notes on a shelf, putting some other bills and silver, amounting to $200, on top of the larger amount.

A moment later Bendolt was called to the telephone. After answering the call he returned to the cage, and, when he counted his money, found that $11,820 was missing from the $15,000 pile. The smaller notes and the silver were still on top of the sheaf of bills, giving the impression that the money had remained untouched during Bendolt's absence from the cage.

Bank officials and police scout the theory that the money was taken by an outsider putting his hand in through the bars of the teller's cage, as had that happened, they reason that the thief would have taken the whole sum.

Such a theft, they also said, would have been impossible because of the fact that the money disappeared during the usual banking hours when there were customers in the bank and while the armed watchman was on duty within a foot or two of the teller's cage.

HELD AS A BURGLAR.

Prisoner Had Opium Layouts In Apartment, the Police Charge.

Albert Lalonde, 20 years old, who gave as his home a fictitious address in Montreal, was arraigned in the West Side Court yesterday before Magistrate H. Stanley Renaud on a charge of suspicion of burglary and was held in $5,000 bail for a hearing on Wednesday. He was arrested on Saturday afternoon in an apartment at 738 Eighth Avenue by detectives of the Narcotic Squad, who said that two valuable opium layouts were found in the apartment. The police say that Lalonde admitted three burglaries, and jewelry valued at $5,000 was seized in the apartment.

In court Edward V. Broderick, the young man's attorney, said that Lalonde's confession was made while he was under the influence of opium and that the jewels which the police believe to be stolen were actually wedding presents given to himself and his young wife. He said that Lalonde's wife was the daughter of a prominent Montreal banker.

The police of Montreal were notified of Lalonde's arrest, and photographs and fingerprints were forwarded by the Detective Bureau.

NIGHT TRIAL FOR PASTOR.

New England Methodist Conference Committee Sits Late on Holmes Case.

SOUTH MANCHESTER, Conn., April 11 (AP).—Hidden away in the chime room of the tower of the South Methodist Church here, a group of churchmen were trying to decide late tonight whether a brother clergyman was guilty or innocent of a charge of conduct unbecoming a clergyman. They were prepared to remain all night, if necessary.

It was the sixth hearing given by a committee of fifteen appointed by the New England Southern Conference of the Methodist Church, in session here, to investigate charges brought against the Rev. Guy Willis Holmes, pastor of the Pleasant Street Church of New Bedford, Mass. The committee went into conference at 4:30 o'clock this afternoon, the second meeting of the day, and was still deliberating when the early morning hours approached.

It was the second time that hearings had extended far into the night in the attempt to settle a question considered grave in church procedure. The committee was in session until 2:30 o'clock this morning, and was back at its labors six hours later.

Mr. Holmes was questioned again by the committee tonight but, as in the previous sessions, the proceedings were kept secret.

The committee hopes to complete its labors before morning, so that it can make its report at the closing session of the conference tomorrow.

Maine's Salmon Fishing Opens.

BANGOR, Me., April 11 (AP).—The first salmon of the season, a seven-pounder, was landed from Bangor Pool after a 35-minute fight today by Frank Rand of Bangor. The fish was purchased by a local market man who will send it to President Coolidge.

STRIKE CHIEF HELD SECOND DAY IN JAIL

ARRAIGNMENT DUE TODAY

Prisoner Fares Well in Cell, Sending Out for Chicken Dinner and Giving Other Inmates Candy.

Special to The New York Times.

PASSAIC, N. J., April 11.—Albert Weisbord, leader of the textile strikers, who was arrested Saturday after the police broke up a parade of children, was held incommunicado in jail until noon today, when his lawyers were permitted to see him. His counsel were unable, however, to arrange for his arraignment before Police Judge William B. Davidson today, and he will spend a second night in jail before appearing in Judge Davidson's court tomorrow.

Weisbord's lawyers were indignant when Judge Davidson declined to listen to their case today. They pointed out that he attended to the cases of other strikers who were arrested yesterday.

Two strikers who climbed up the outside wall of the jail to Weisbord's cell, which is 10 feet above the street level, were arrested. They were released after they explained that they merely wanted to talk to their leader.

Orders Chicken Dinner.

Weisbord ordered a chicken dinner from an outside restaurant, and distributed chocolate bars to the eighteen other prisoners, most of them textile strikers. No written complaint against Weisbord has been made at the jail. It was rumored that an effort would be made to have the strike leader held on a Federal charge. Captain of Detectives Benjamin Turner, who arrested Weisbord, refused to make public the nature of the charges against him except that they came under Chapter 133 of the laws of 1902, which are concerned with "inciting to riot."

The law under which Weisbord was arrested reads as follows:

"Any person who shall, in public or private, by speech, writing, printing or by any other mode or means, advocate the subversion and destruction by force of any and all Government or attempt by speech, writing, printing or in any other way whatsoever to incite or abet, promote or encourage hostility or opposition to any and all government, shall be guilty of a high misdemeanor and punished by a fine not exceeding $2,000, or imprisonment at hard labor not exceeding fifteen years or both."

The second and third statutes provide similar penalties for members of associations and organizations guilty of such attempts. The law was adopted in response to popular outcry against anarchy after the assassination of President McKinley and King Humbert of Italy.

The strikers prepared today to send strong picket lines to the Forstmann & Huffmann mills in Passaic, Garfield and Clifton, which are expected to open this week. No announcement has been made as to the date of the opening, but it was learned that it would not be tomorrow.

An outdoor mass meeting of citizens of the mill section of Passaic brought 5,000 men, women and children to Belmont Park in Garfield. They listened to addresses by Felix Penarel, picket leader, Mrs. H. Jacowski, Thomas Delfazio, Michael Blacik, Michael Timochko, 10 years old, and a young girl introduced as Miriam.

Criticise Ban on Parade.

The speakers criticized the police for their action in suppressing the parade of children yesterday. The children were asked to urge their parents to remain out on strike. No suggestions were made that the school children strike, as had been expected.

The girl introduced as Miriam said, "Our fathers work days and our mothers work nights. Who cares for the children?" To which the boys and girls responded, "Nobody."

Chief of Police Forss and Detective Arthur McParlin of Garfield, it was learned today, visited Weisbord in jail and assailed him verbally for criticizing them a few weeks ago when he was under the impression that the Garfield police assisted those of Passaic in clubbing strikers.

Chief of Police Siccardi of Hackensack will have four officers in Garfield today to assist the local police if necessary.

With Captain Esteves these two airmen left Cairo at 7 o'clock this morning. Larigo reached here at 4 P. M. and Gonzales at 7 P. M.

POLICE QUELL A ROW AT HUNGARIAN RALLY

EXILE HITS HORTHY REGIME

2,000 Men and Women in Uproar as Policemen Subdue Crowd—Many Evicted, One Arrested.

Police reserves were called to supplement the bomb squad and a squad of patrolmen from the East Sixty-seventh Street station when Hungarian Bolsheviki threatened yesterday afternoon to break up a meeting at the Central Opera House, 205 East Sixty-seventh Street, under the auspices of the New York Party for a Republic in Hungary.

Fists flew and men and women struggled to reach the offenders while policemen, who knew nothing of the reasons for the trouble, hustled gesticulating shouters from the hall and herded them down the stairway to the floor below. Franz Gondor, Hungarian exile, who was guest of honor and speaker at the meeting, continued his attack on the Horthy régime, despite the efforts of some of his audience to stop him.

During the afternoon about fifty persons, among them women, were escorted from the hall and only one man, Lester Bologh, 21 years old, of 82 Wadsworth Avenue, who insisted that he be arrested, was taken to the East Sixty-seventh Street station by Policeman Daniel Bethel, where a charge of disorderly conduct was preferred against him.

As the crowd filed from the hall at the close of Gondor's speech, several hundred of the Bolsheviki leading their hats in their hands and the strains of their Internationale ringing through the building and into the street, the affair had more the appearance of a Red than of a Republican gathering. The Republicans remained quiet, although they seemed willing enough to do battle while the meeting was in progress.

Gondor Escorted From Scene.

Gondor, surrounded by a group of several men, was escorted from the building, and was met by a crowd of the Bolsheviki in the street. They followed him, shouting "Spy!" and booing him, until a policeman summoned a taxicab, shoved Gondor and his escort into it and ordered the driver to get them away. He did not pass, however, until a woman had hurled the skin of a grapefruit at him and the police had separated many groups of shouting and fighting men and women. A policeman was struck with a handbag by a woman.

As explained by the Republican committee, Gondor, formerly President of the Hungarian Newspapermen's Association and a leading Social Democrat, was exiled from Hungary in 1918 and went to Vienna where he edited a journal, The Mas. He has refused bribes of the Royalist and Bolshevik groups, his friends say, and today is practically penniless, fighting for the Republican cause. He has come to the United States for a six months' tour and will visit the principal cities, speaking for the Republican cause.

When his appearance here was announced, it was said yesterday, the Bolshevik clique threatened to prevent the meeting. Through their paper, The Forward, they announced that they would be present to stop Gondor's appearance. To prevent trouble the police were notified of these threats and the bomb squad, under Lieutenant Reynolds, was sent to the meeting. The Reds bought tickets and were seated in various parts of the hall when the meeting opened. They also hired a smaller hall in the building, the Republicans said, to serve as a centring place for their forces.

Peaceful Until Gondor Speaks.

All was peaceful while Dr. Samuel Buchler, former Deputy Attorney General, recited the story of Gondor's career and Algernon Lee of the Rand School of Social Science, Samuel Baum, President of the Federation of Hungarian Jews, and others spoke.

Then Gondor was introduced and the crowd rose and cheered him for more than a minute. There was no indication that enemies were to be active. Gondor had been called a Czechoslovak spy by the Hungarian press in America. Dr. Buchler said, but he preferred exile in Vienna to slavery in Budapest. He had come "with an open mind, an open heart and an open mouth" and was prepared to tell the truth.

Hardly had he begun to speak when some one in the audience disagreed and rose to his feet to take issue with the speaker. The hall was in an uproar. The police were soon in action and three young men were escorted from the hall. Tactics were gentle early in the afternoon, but disagreements became more frequent and remarks more vitriolic.

Shouts of "Czechoslovak spy," "Hurrah for the Hungarian Soviet" and "Liar" were frequent. Women were on their feet whenever trouble started, and the result was their banishment. On several occasions Gondor replied to the speakers on the floor. He confined his remarks to an arraignment of the Reds as exemplified by the Bela Kun régime and the White Terror, or Horthy régime. People were exiled, he said, industry was failing and the country's best brains were forced into other lands.

Addressing his audience as "exiles of Hungary," he said:

"We must form a great movement to throw off the yoke in Hungary. Neither we, assembled here, nor other exiles will tolerate conditions as they exist in Hungary today. We have lost our greatest statesmen, scientists, artists and laborers, who have left the country as exiles, and 75 per cent. of these intellectuals are in America. I have come here to organize these forces in the cause of liberty and freedom. I have come prepared to fight both the White and the Red Terrors."

He remained seated at a table during most of his talk, but rose to his feet when he reached the high spots and when his audience took issue. Disturbers at times stood on chairs and shook their fists at him while they shouted replies to his charges. About 2,000 men and women attended the meeting.

Dr. Buchler said the meeting was only "a big beginning" of a common action, a union of the various elements in this country to alter conditions in Hungary. Gondor is expected to serve as a magnet in uniting sentiment among the Republicans, though his unpopularity with the Reds was apparent yesterday.

Among the speakers were L. B. Wilda, President of the American Party for a Republic in Hungary; Miss Irene Karoli, Hungarian actress, and Louis Sugar, lawyer.

Honeymoon Ship' on Last Trip; In Bermuda Service 23 Years

The Furness-Bermuda liner Fort Hamilton, which in its twenty-three years' service between New York and Bermuda has won the title of "honeymoon ship," made her last trip in the Bermuda service yesterday when she docked here. She did not bring a bridal couple this time, but there were 378 women school teachers aboard.

The Fort Hamilton has been sold to the Cosulich Line, which will operate her in the Mediterranean service under the name of Stella d'Italia. She will sail on her first Mediterranean trip on April 24. Captain Roberto Stuberrich, new commander of the Fort Hamilton, made the last two Bermuda voyages to familiarize himself with the characteristics of the ship.

ADMIRAL ADVISED BUTLER'S CHARGES

Robertson Declares He Told the General to Prosecute Colonel Williams.

BUT FOUND HIM RELUCTANT

Court-Martial of Officer in Marines Charged With Intoxication Begins Today in San Diego.

Special to The New York Times.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., April 11.—Upholding Brig. Gen. Smedley D. Butler, commander of the San Diego Marine Base and former Philadelphia Director of Public Safety, in the charges of intoxication and conduct unbecoming an officer which he laid against Colonel Alexander Williams, Fourth Regiment, United States Marine Corps, who will be placed on trial tomorrow before a general court-martial board here, Rear Admiral Ashley H. Robertson, Commandant of the Eleventh Naval District, has issued his first statement regarding the events following the famous alleged cocktail party at the Williams home in Coronado.

Backing General Butler in strong terms, the Admiral says that the Marine Commander acted reluctantly in preferring the sensational charges and finally took action solely on military grounds.

"There are two things which have nothing whatever to do with this case," Admiral Robertson said. "One is General Butler's former connection with the Police Department of Philadelphia; the other is the party Colonel Williams gave at his home just before Butler ordered him under technical arrest at the Hotel del Coronado.

Advised Butler to Act.

"Colonel Williams is to be tried as a military officer by a military court for a military offense. It is an unfortunate coincidence that the name of General Butler, who happened to be the officer who preferred the charges, also happened to be in the public mind a synonym of rigorous enforcement of the prohibition laws.

"General Butler will not be on trial in this case, and it is because there appears to be a disposition to regard him as the unofficial defendant that I think it is only fair to remind the public that the General preferred his charges only after consulting with me and being advised by me to file them."

Despite the Admiral's assertion, General Butler is regarded in some quarters as being on trial before the bar of public opinion, charged with betraying a man whose honor guest he had so recently been.

The test of society's disapproval, it is maintained, has not been thorough, for soon after preferring the charges against his predecessor here General Butler went to the naval hospital, where he has since been confined because of a nervous reaction due to the loss of ten infected teeth.

Butler Is Able to Testify.

Others assert that General Butler's charges were not a result of the party at the Williams home, but of Colonel Williams's condition at the hotel, afterward.

Through the storm of both approbation and censure that broke around his head since he filed the charges in March, General Butler has remained virtually silent, preferring evidently to let the court-martial decide whether he took the proper course in arresting Colonel Williams and relieving him of command of the Fourth Regiment of Marines.

General Butler will be able to appear as a witness at the trial tomorrow, it is said by his doctors.

Civilians and officers, among the latter eleven recently ordered transferred, it is said because of their connection with the party, are expected to testify at the trial, which, it is expected, will be completed in three or four days.

The acquittal of Colonel Williams is freely predicted in many quarters, it being maintained that the Government will find it difficult to prove that he was not ill, as illness will be his defense.

Rear Admiral Thomas Washington, President, and Captain Joel R. Pringle, Chief of Staff to Vice Admiral R. H. Jackson, are the only members of the court-martial board not in San Diego. They are expected to arrive today. The trial will be open to the public.

PRAISES NEW YORK LEGION.

Gen. Pershing Commends Recording of A. E. F. Heroes' Lives.

The historical records of all the New York soldiers of the American Expeditionary Forces who were killed in France, which are being compiled by post historians of 900 American Legion Posts, are commended by General John J. Pershing as a "fitting monument" to the soldier dead. He has expressed the hope that other branches of the Legion will compile such records, according to an announcement yesterday by the American Legion, New York Department. In commending the historical work, General Pershing in part wrote:

"The recording of these heroic lives will be of inestimable value to future generations. There is no better way, or more fitting monument to commemorate their gallant deeds and to perpetuate the memories of our comrades, than through the written word of a contemporary. You are creating a form of testimonial which I hope will be followed by all of the American Legion posts throughout the country."

SHRINE OF MOON GODDESS

Lowest Walls of Structure Date to 3000 B. C., When Bricks Were in Primitive Shape.

LATEST WORK IN 539 B. C.

The evolution of a great temple that was built, extended, torn down, reconstructed and remodeled in a continuous process for more than 2,500 years is described in a report of the joint expedition of the British Museum and the Museum of the University of Pennsylvania, which was made public by Dr. G. B. Gordon of Philadelphia yesterday.

This is the Temple of the Moon Goddess at Ur in Lower Mesopotamia. The lowest walls were made of primitive pudding-shaped mud bricks belonging to a period 3000 B. C., while the latest were restorations of Nabonidus (556-539 B. C.), the last King of Babylon, a passionate archaeologist, who formed museums of antiquities, collected libraries of ancient clay tablets and restored ruined temples. This royal antiquarian was overthrown in 539 B. C. by Cyrus of Persia, and the active life of the temple came to an end after more than twenty-five centuries of existence as a religious and civic institution.

Describes the Excavation.

C. Leonard Woolley, director of the excavation, described the work as follows:

"Our first task was to complete the excavation of the great Temple of the Moon Goddess, upon which we had been engaged for two months. Here the main discoveries had already been made, and what remained was to clear up doubtful points in the complicated plan of the building.

"The work was not so easy as it might have appeared to a visitor who saw for the first time the brick walls standing to more than a man's height, for these walls were not all of the same date, and to establish the original plan one had to eliminate much of what was most obvious. The temple built by the royal priest Enannatum in the twenty-first century before Christ, over the foundations of the building set up by Bur-Sin a hundred and fifty years earlier, had been partly destroyed, probably in a rebellion of the city against Babylon in the twelfth year of the reign of the son of the great conqueror and lawgiver Hammurabi. It was rebuilt by the Babylonians, but with various changes and on simpler lines, and about 1400 B. C. was again rebuilt by Kuri-Galzu of Babylon and again changes were made, but over much of the site the floor level remained the same and there was no real stratification to help us distinguish the work of each respective builder. But the time and patience required to unravel the tangle of brickwork were well repaid by the plan so evolved, the most perfect that we possess of a fortified temple of early Sumerian times and one whose balanced proportions and spacious dignity would do credit to any architect.

How the Temple Looked.

"The building is a square measuring some eighty yards each way, with towers at the south and east corners; to these leads a passage which runs from the main gate round three sides of the rectangle, through the twenty-five foot thick outer walls, while another passage cuts across the middle of the building and divides it into two halves, in each of which is a separate temple; each is complete in itself, with its courts and sanctuary and its rows of service chambers. An intermediate block is formed by a series of minor shrines, including that of the deified founder Bur-Sin, and by a complex of small rooms, under the floors of which we found vaulted tombs, perhaps those of the chief priests of the temple.

"As the work on the temple drew to a finish the bulk of the men were drafted off to a site within the sacred area whose excavation had been begun by Dr. Hall in 1918 and never completed; now all that remains of it has been cleared. The building, originally started by Ur-Engur, was apparently unfinished at the time of his death, and, whereas the wall bricks are stamped with his name, those of the pavements bear the name of his son and successor, Dungi. The bricks, very large and of admirable quality, are set in bitumen mortar, and there is no building at Ur with the sole exception of the Ziggurat, also Ur-Engur's work, so well and solidly constructed. One part of it, apparently the living quarters of the priest in charge, is well preserved, but the temple proper has suffered severely and not all its plan could be recovered, but under one corner from which all the brick work had disappeared we lit upon the foundation box containing the conventional copper figure of the King carrying his basket of mortar and the stone model brick not inscribed.

"Meanwhile a smaller gang has been digging close to the foot of the Ziggurat on its southwest face, where we had previously traced the enclosure wall built round the Temenos by Nebuchadnezzar, but now hoped to find an earlier version of the same dating from the time of the Larsa Kings, about 2000 B. C. Actually the results were better than our hopes, for the area proved to contain within a small compass a very compendium of history. Inside the Nebuchadnezzar wall there were chambers of Nabonidus, the last of the Kings of Babylon; below these were floors laid by the Assyrian Governor of Ur in about 650 B. C., and below these again a great double wall with intramural rooms built by Kuri-Gal

ST. PATRICK'S HEARS APPEAL FOR CHARITY

Christian Faith Demands That We Help the Needy, Says the Rev. Henry Hammer.

HE DECRIES HUMAN DOUBT

Church Insists on Faith Christ Rose From Dead, He Asserts, as Evidence of His Divinity.

The Rev. Henry F. Hummer, preaching on "Charity" in St. Patrick's Roman Catholic Cathedral, Fifth Avenue and Fiftieth Street, yesterday morning, appealed for support of the annual drive for Catholic charities, headed by Cardinal Hayes, which will be launched officially next Sunday. Father Hammer announced a meeting of the campaign workers on next Friday evening, and asked for volunteers.

The drive is going to be carried on as a house-to-house canvass. Last year the Cathedral's contribution was over $37,000. Strenuous efforts will be made this year to give the Cathedral territory first place among contributing institutions.

Father Hammer called attention to the synchronism of the seasonal changes in nature and changes of ritual in the Church. "As the seasons change," he said, "the change is reflected in the changing tones of the chants of the clergy and the changing colors of the vestments. This is the best time of all to note the appropriateness of these changes.

"Conspicuous among them is the symbolism of the Pascal candle. It symbolizes the joy in the hearts of the Christian people. It stands for the dawn of a new day of light, and mercy and charity made most glorious by the resurrection of Jesus Christ. It symbolizes the Master's conquest of sin and death."

Speaking of widespread doubts regarding the truth of the resurrection, Father Hammer said they were due to the narrow range of human credibility regarding phenomena beyond personal experience. "The Church," he added, "lays particular stress upon the fact of the resurrection of the Master because He Himself based His claim to divinity on the actuality of the fact of rising from the dead. Lose that and our faith is vain indeed, as is our teaching, as Paul said."

"Our Christian faith," Father Hammer said, referring to the charity drive, "demands of us not merely hands raised in dutiful prayer, but lips that speak in behalf of the poor, ears that are attuned to the cry of the oppressed, eyes that see the distress of the lowly."

CARDINAL ON THE RADIO.

Broadcasts Appeal for the Catholic Charities Over WLWL.

Cardinal Hayes used the radio last night to appeal for the Catholic charities of his diocese, for which money will be collected beginning next Sunday. He spoke from Station WLWL of the Paulist Fathers, saying in part:

"I feel highly privileged as well as deeply gratified, through the courtesy of WLWL in charge of the Paulist Fathers, to have the opportunity of addressing, by the spoken word, the thousands and thousands of friends of the Catholic charities of the Archdiocese of New York. Truly, modern science has opened to us a wonderland of communication. What is denied to the written word is caught by the ear, almost in the twinkling of an eye, simultaneously across a continent and seas, in the human cadences and spiritual tone of the spoken word of a shepherd to his beloved flock. After all it was Christ's own way when He walked among men to teach with the living voice and it is today Christ's way in the living voice of the Church that His divine message should be carried to mankind in the preaching of the Word of God.

"Once more my pastoral office leads me to appeal to our beloved clergy, religious and faithful in behalf of our Catholic Charities. The angel of charity, sent by God, stands again in our midst with suppliant look and outstretched hands, pleading for Christ's poor, Christ's afflicted, Christ's helpless and Christ's abandoned ones. The message the angel bears has become a household word in every Catholic family of New York—namely, 'God is charity; charity is kind.'

"The exalted motive which urges you to Christ-like charity is of the finest and highest spiritual temper. The charity of Christ rises far superior in nature and purpose to the social urge to serve stirred by group consciousness; or to the instinct of self-preservation; or to the common cause appealing, in a corporate way, through humaneness, necessity or a sense of legal justice. With temporal betterment or social reform, considered in themselves, Christian charity is not primarily concerned. It goes much further. While including all that is of God in His providence over the earthly welfare of mankind, true charity loves man, not for his own sake only, not merely because he is a human being, not that he is our fellowman, but rather because he is God's man, year, God's own child, in the sonship man receives through Christ Jesus Our Lord, in the very family and home of God.

"A distinction is to be observed between love and charity. Love is a more comprehensive term and has for its object not only God, our neighbor, ourselves, but a variety of created objects that easily draw us from the friendship of God. The selfishness of love, at times, is proverbial even to a sordid degree. Charity, however, viewed as a supernatural virtue, is entirely unselfish in the love we bear toward God and the neighbor. It is known as the love of benevolence, in the sense of friendship.

"What a depth of meaning and how elevating the thought hidden in the simple English word 'befriend,' when viewed in the light of Christian charity! Charity seeks the friendship of God and that of the neighbor in God. It demanded an act of infinite love on the part of God, through the incarnation of the Son of God, to lift man to the dignity of an adopted son in the family of God. The yearning and quest of God for the friendship of man, sinful and imperfect though man be, create an unfathomable mystery of divine love which, to the human mind, might appear folly. If it were not the act of Infinite Wisdom himself.

"Were it possible to enter into possession of the known and unknown treasures of the earth, past, present and future, the riches of one act of Christ-like charity would exceed and excel them all. The cup of cold water and the widow's mite, given in Christ's name, outvalue and outmeasure, as heaven the very earth, countless millions from the coffers of wealth, given in any other name than God's or from any other motive, no matter how noble or praiseworthy.

"The material contribution made by you, the subscribers of Catholic Charities, has amounted to some $6,000,000 for the past six years. The largeness of the figure fades to insignificance compared to the magnanimity of the spirit of Christ who changed the mere dross of earthly gold into the gold of the realm of Heaven."

The Cardinal, scheduled to begin to speak at 8:30, did not start until 9 o'clock. He spoke eighteen minutes.

Father James F. Cronin, in charge of the radio station, while waiting for the Cardinal to arrive, put on a program of songs.

DR. RAY DISCUSSES CHRISTIAN VICTORY

He Declares It Comes to Us Only Through Implicit Belief in Jesus Christ.

The Rev. Dr. Randolph Ray, rector of the Episcopal Church of The Transfiguration, Twenty-ninth Street, east of Fifth Avenue, chose the subject of "Victory that Overcometh the World" for his sermon yesterday on the third anniversary of his rectorship. "Victory that overcometh the world is celebrated in this Easter season. It is not a mere sentimental and emotional ecstasy but rather a realization that through the spirit of God and the sacrifice of Jesus Christ victory over things material and worldly is certain.

"Christian victory is not for the idle man who sits down and speculates. It is not for the man who has no vision or only a dim vision of the Word of God. Victory capable of overcoming the world comes only through implicit belief in Jesus Christ. We win this victory only if we realize that living in our bodies there is the spirit of God, the 'Logos' with divine attributes.

"If we believe that God is merciful, we must show mercy ourselves; if we believe that He is love, we must show love ourselves; if we believe that He is the given of all good things, the Father who takes care of His children, we must be bountiful and generous. If we believe, as all Christians do, that the Lord Jesus came to earth to serve humanity and to die for its sake, we, too, must be ready to serve our fellowmen."

DISCUSSES SPIRITISM.

Dr. Crowder, Pointing to Its Dangers, Says It Is Not Un-Christian.

The Rev. Dr. Frank Warfield Crowder, rector of St. James's Episcopal Church, Madison Avenue and Seventy-first Street, in his sermon yesterday morning said that there was nothing in Christianity innately opposed to spiritism. He went on:

"Christianity certainly doesn't discourage us from thinking and speculating about the conditions of the future life and of our dear ones there. Most Christians would probably be glad if the claims of the Spiritists were true. It would certainly make the immortal life intensely real. It would bring the unseen world upon the map.

"But whatever of truth and comfort there may be in Spiritualism, one of its dangers is to unfit people for dealing dutifully with their daily life; to make them lose interest in the apparently tame realities of the prosaic earth; to destroy their sense of proportion and perspective; to change their center of gravity, so to speak; to sweep them off the solid foundations of character, duty and service; to rob them of mental balance and sometimes even of reason itself.

DEFINES SPIRIT OF AMERICA.

Dr. Howard Stresses the Joy of Work and Glory of Achievement.

"The spirit of young Americans should be not what can be made out of this country, but what can be contributed to make it the greatest nation on earth," the Rev. Dr. Henry Howard said yesterday morning at the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, Fifth Avenue at Fifty-fifth Street.

"Joy of work, glory of achieving things, the spirit embodying these ideals—is that which Americans must reincarnate and spread so that it will pass on to our heirs further enriched," he said. "What matter is it what men say of us? We may be persecuted, we may be hated, but our works shall carry on. It is this thought that urges us to hold on in the face of the discouragement."

OPPOSES LAUSANNE TREATY

The Rev. Dr. Edward Charles Russell in his sermon yesterday morning in St. Ann's Episcopal Church, St. Ann's Avenue and 140th Street, supported the stand of the Episcopal bishops who have appealed for the rejection of the Lausanne Treaty between the United States and Turkey.

"May God grant to those in authority in this great nation that they may have the red blood and backbone to express in no uncertain tones the fact that America does not approve or wish alliance with any nation whose unrepentant and criminal record is crimson with the blood of innocent and helpless people," he said.

Dr. Straton Calls Palm Beach America's Cleanest Resort

The Rev. Dr. John Roach Straton said that Palm Beach was "the cleanest resort city in America" last night in his sermon in Calvary Baptist Church, West Fifty-seventh Street, between Sixth and Seventh Avenues. He went on:

"The misconduct of a few is often played up, and the gathering together of divorcees and the financial magnates who abandon their wives and homes and carry stage 'stars' to Florida on their private yachts—such things as these, I say, have given Palm Beach an undeserved notoriety.

"Let me give you a few illustrations showing that it is true that Palm Beach has maintained some of the old-fashioned ideals of decency and righteousness. Take, for example, the fact that the Royal Poinciana Hotel and the Florida East Coast Railroad Company, which owns and controls the hotels, close their golf links there every Sunday. This is certainly a very praiseworthy thing, especially in view of the fact that one of our distinguished New York Bishops weakened on the Sabbath question recently and endorsed Sunday golf for his already too self-indulgent, luxury-loving constituents."

Bishop McConnell Asserts Church Should Not Aid Government on Wrong Moral Issue.

PRAISES CATHOLICS' SPIRIT

True to Their Convictions, He Declares, in Methodist Conference Sermon.

The American flag should never be nailed above the cross, Bishop Francis J. McConnell of Pittsburgh declared yesterday morning in the Washington Square Methodist Church in the course of the official sermon as presiding Bishop over the 127th annual New York Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church. The Conference, which began last Wednesday afternoon, will close this evening with the assignments of pastors for the next year.

It was a mistake, the Bishop asserted, for the Church to support a particular policy of the Government simply because the Government sponsored it. "If the Government is morally wrong on some vital issue," he said, "it is not only the duty of the Church of Christ to say so, but to stand firmly by its position. Too many ministers make 'adjustments' to meet the need of political expediency. And the same criticism applies to the way the Church treats the problems of wealth in its relation to social conditions. Christ did not soften His messages. He did not seek to make His truths pleasant to get the world to accept them.

Try to Soften Warnings.

"But today there is too much effort on the part of some preachers to soften the meaning of the admonition that it is easier for a camel to pass through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter the kingdom of Heaven."

Bishop McConnell said that a "mighty lesson" in the way the heroic spirit which guided the ministries of Christ and His disciples could be drawn from the history of the Roman Catholic Church.

"In the days when Spain was persecuting and oppressing the Indians a humble Dominican priest raised his voice in protest. The objections of kings failed to still him. Pope after Pope, to whom the great crowned heads of Europe appealed, refused to interfere. To still a voice like that, they said, would be to quench the very spirit upon which the Church was founded. It has always been the policy of the Church of Rome, once its ministers acknowledged the leadership of the Pope, to give them the utmost freedom of expression of the spiritual convictions that moved them."

Woman Ordained Deacon.

For the first time in the 127 years' history of the conference a woman was ordained a deacon yesterday. She was Miss Edith E. Dewey, a worker in Union Methodist Church, Forty-eighth Street, just west of Broadway. She is about 30 years old. The service took place at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, with Bishop McConnell officiating.

Bishop McConnell ordained six men as elders as follows: Sylvanus M. Duval, Clarence W. Smith, Ashley G. Skidmore, George W. Weber, Milfred E. Douglas and Charles E. Hewett.

Others ordained as deacons were L. Egbert Dougan, Thomas H. Foxton, Stephen E. Fritchman, T. Arthur Gross, Donald Troy Kell, Donald B. McBain, John G. Waelde, R. B. Guice, Albert Chappell Abbe, Elmer H. Douglas, Barton Bovee, Raymond W. Houston, J. K. Benedict, John B. Glenwood and Frank B. Venable.

CALLS SELF-DENIAL THE PRICE OF PEACE

Father McSorley Sees Harm in the Efforts to Cultivate Self-Expression.

The Rev. Joseph McSorley, Superior General of the Paulist Fathers, preached the sermon at high mass yesterday morning in the Roman Catholic Church of the Paulist Fathers, Columbus Avenue and Fifty-ninth Street.

"Suppose that a heavenly visitor were to visit this earth and, as one would say colloquially, to 'size us up,'" he said. "I fear that he could find no answer as to where we are going and what we are looking for.

"Very likely such a visitor to our earth would be reduced to the necessity of saying that the only thing many people care about seems to be amusement, and that sometimes they seem merely the tools and instruments of their passions.

"If the end and aim of human life is peace, then it is most important for us to realize just how we are to obtain it. Peace, indispensable to human happiness, is based on what a great saint called the tranquillity of order. It is disorder that is the matter with mankind and with us.

"Today invitations are sent broadcast to people asking them to cultivate self-expression. It is harmful because people are led to think that self-expression is following every impulse in the order of its appeal. But self-expression, to get us anywhere, must be coordinated. That is the difference between the self-expression of a pagan and the self-expression of a saint.

BRIGHT DESTINY FOR CHURCH

Dr. Trexler Says Its Growth Is a Marvel of the Present Day.

Special to The New York Times.

NUTLEY, N. J., April 11.—"The Church is destined for triumphant progress," said the Rev. Dr. Samuel Trexler, President of the Lutheran Synod of New York and New England, in a sermon to the congregation of the Holy Trinity Lutheran Church in the Town Hall this morning.

"The growth of the Church in and around New York is one of the marvels of the present day," he added. "Today there is a more appreciative understanding of the Gospel of Christ and greater activity for Him than this world has ever known. At the beginning of the nineteenth century there were but two Lutheran congregations in New York City; today the Lutheran Church has 451 congregations in the metropolitan area. It is scarcely conceivable that anywhere else in the history of the Church has there been such an astounding development."

Quoting Mrs. Carson's "My Patch of Blue," Preacher Ranks Invalid With Bible Heroes

The poem, "My Patch of Blue," written by the late Mrs. Mary Newland Carson, wife of the pastor of Grace Presbyterian Church, was used yesterday for a sermon preached by the Rev. Horace E. Clute at St. George's Episcopal Church, Gates and Marcy Avenues, Brooklyn.

Speaking of Mrs. Carson's life, Mr. Clute said: "Her suffering was great, and for twenty-six years she could not raise her head to look at the sky. Her only chance was to glimpse a little patch through a mirror. Yet her life is a great lesson to us if we will heed it. Her shining example was another proof that the Bible is not the only repository of heroes.

"Some people would like to do away with the cross, but the cross will reach them to aid them in their time of need," continued Mr. Clute. "We need a consecrated religious life. If we have this, life will not be too hard, or the way too difficult. Jesus had faith in the righteous, so let us have faith too, as this noble woman did in the midst of her sufferings."

Two of the verses of Mrs. Carson's poem follow:

"When I lie upon my bed at night
With a heart full of pain and fear,
I think of the twinkling stars out there
That shine so bright and clear;
I think of the radiant, glorious moon
Shining the whole night through
And I know that the morning sun will bring Once more my Patch of Blue.

"Oh, Friend of Mine! Are you shut in?
Does your life seem hard to bear?
Does your heart grow sick with longing
For the joys you once could share?
'I'll go with you' saith the Master,
And his promises are true
So we're sure that in His blessed arms
We'll find our Patch of Blue."

DEBT OF THE STRONG IS WILSON'S TOPIC

Bishop Tells Methodists at Session Strength Must Not Exploit Weakness.

APPLIES THEORY TO NATION

Bishop Luther B. Wilson delivered the sermon yesterday at the morning session of the New York East Methodist Episcopal Conference being held at the Hanson Place Methodist Episcopal Church in Brooklyn. The Bishop chose as his text the fourteenth verse of the first chapter of the Epistles to the Romans and dwelt on the three words of St. Paul, "I am debtor."

"It has often been said that preachers are not good business men," said Bishop Wilson, "and it might be thought that St. Paul was entering on a field in which he was not an expert, but St. Paul was as well acquainted with the material and common things of life as he was with the spiritual. This is demonstrated in the runaway slave incident when he said, 'Put that to my account.'

"St. Paul has a great philosophy of life. First, there is his theory that the strong is debtor to the weak. Second, that everything is bought with a price. Not so long ago we were scornful of the suggestion that might makes right. How many times has the plea gone to the ends of the world that it should not be? The temptation of the strong has been to exploit the weak. It is those whose strength has never exploited the weak but who have administered to the weak who have deserved the wreaths of gold.

"The life of Walter Page in London proved him to be the same Walter Page who learned his lesson in North Carolina, who had chosen as his first ambition that of helping the forgotten man. His was a life of golden living and high ideals. Abraham Lincoln was described by Woodrow Wilson as the 'supreme American in our history.' Lincoln never forgot that strength is debtor to weakness. That is what made him great."

Later Bishop Wilson said: "If America has treasures that the countries of Europe and Asia have not America will not recognize the divine basis of obligation unless she follows the principle that the strong is debtor to the weak.

"If Protestantism has anything that Catholicism has not then it is not for Protestantism to lord it over Romanism but to share as much as possible."

The opening prayer at the services was given by the Rev. John W. Langdale, District Superintendent. During the prayer Dr. Langdale said:

"We pray for power to withstand the Hindenburg drive on temperance. The cause of sobriety is being jeopardized, the moral life of America is in danger."

Nine elders and a deaconess were inducted into office by Bishop Wilson at the afternoon session of the conference. The elders were: The Revs. David K. Sloatman of Pennsylvania, Arthur Baggarly of East Quogue, Charles C. Noble of the Bronx, Stanley B. Crosland of Philadelphia, Theodore Consevitch of All Nations' Church, Brooklyn; Carlton F. Hubbard, Brooklyn; Harold G. Sabin, Sag Harbor, L. I.; William P. Talley, Madison, N. J., and Damiano Rossi of Troy, N. Y. Grace C. Shaler was made a deaconess.

OLDHAM TELLS VIEWS ON SOUTH AMERICA

Buenos Aires Bishop Declares That the Monroe Doctrine Has Been Outgrown.

The South American nations have outgrown the Monroe Doctrine, Bishop William F. Oldham, resident North American Methodist Bishop in Buenos Aires, declared last evening in a sermon before the seventy-eighth annual New York East Conference in the Hanson Place Methodist Church, Brooklyn.

"The Monroe Doctrine was all right when the ten nations that comprise South America were in their infancy," said Bishop Oldham. "But now, in the phase of adolescence, on the verge of manhood, it is rather annoying to be reminded of precepts formulated for the protection of babies—that Uncle Sam is a big brother ready to defend poor little South America from all those fellows in Europe. As a matter of fact, the feeling is current below the equator that the poor little nations could do a little defending of themselves."

Bishop Oldham stressed the vastness, the real and potential riches and ever-increasing importance of the South American republics.

"People are wont to speak facetiously of Chile as 'the shoe-string,'" said the bishop, after calling attention to the size of Brazil. "Why, if that 'shoe-string' remained stiff as it was picked up and laid across from New York to London, people could cross the Atlantic with dry shoes and still be in Chile. Do you want scenery? Amalgamate California and Florida, retaining the best features of each, and you'd still have to go some if you wanted your product to compare with the central part of Southern Chile!"

DR. REISNER ASSAILS 'WET' WITNESSES

He Calls Talley's Testimony as Wrong on Prohibition as on Conditions in Mexico.

SAYS DRIVE WILL FAIL

Political Bosses Find It Harder to Rule Under the Dry Regime, He Declares.

The Rev. Dr. Christian F. Reisner in his sermon last night in Chelsea Methodist Episcopal Church, 178th Street, west of Broadway, attacked some of the witnesses on the "wet" side in last week's prohibition hearings at Washington. He said:

"Who elected or designated Judge Alfred Talley as the Government's omniscient adviser? First, he goes down to Washington and misrepresents conditions in Mexico and advises the Secretary of State to cease friendly relations with that country because the President is enforcing the laws and insisting that one church shall not sow disloyalty and disrupt local order. And since he would give the Mexicans the right to obey only the laws they 'like' he encourages the same crowd in this country and charges that most of the criminality in the United States is caused by prohibition because he drew such conclusions from some cases he tried.

"Boss Brennan and Boss Vare are running for office to restore liquor. It is rather significant that notorious political bosses are so eager to bring back liquor. Is it so much harder for them to rule under the 'dry' regime? At least the old bosses ruled through the saloon.

"Some 'drys' are frightened over the avalanche of charges and so-called facts turned loose at once. All the froth and half-truths will disappear, for most of them are produced by selfish profit-seeking liquor sellers or by prejudiced or ill-informed but sincere people who are seldom spurred by lofty ideals or have little courage to follow.

"There is no basis for the cry that the law cannot be enforced. For, as Mr. Buckner shows, no real attempt has been made and few means exist to enforce it. And, meanwhile, the 'wets' have advised a willful breaking of it to prove that it was non-enforceable. The 'wet' campaign will collapse if the church continues to fight. And there is no sign of genuine religious leaders weakening."

SEES BIG LIQUOR STRUGGLE.

Dr. Young Says Wet Onslaught Will Be Met by Uprising of Drys.

"Liquor has come back like a wounded tiger, but anti-liquor will return like a mad lion," said the Rev. Dr. S. Edward Young last night, commenting on the prohibition hearings at Washington in his sermon at the Bedford Presbyterian Church, Nostrand Avenue and Dean Street, Brooklyn.

"These unprecedented onslaughts by the Wets," he asserted, "in Congress and throughout the country will be met by universal uprising of the Drys reinforced by those who demand that a law, while it remains a law, be obeyed. For the solidification of temperance and law and order forces the only thing needed was this attack all along the line.

"We will now see the most tremendous struggle we have had yet on this question. The processes will be a severe test of our form of government. The timid will be frightened. The uncertain will vacillate, but right-minded people will just keep on advocating what they believe to be right, and will not call those who differ from them by any hard names or accuse them of all infernal motives."

TELLS VALUE OF FRIENDSHIP

Dr. Norwood Says It Is Basis of All Religious Experience.

Taking as his text the story of St. Paul's conversion, the Rev. Dr. Robert Norwood, preaching in St. Bartholomew's Episcopal Church, Park Avenue and Fifty-first Street, said yesterday that the basis of all religious experience was friendship.

Through the friendship of St. Paul and St. Luke on the Emmaus road where they met, the former was converted, Dr. Norwood said.

"We will understand Christ as we are faithful to the Emmaus road," he went on. "When I was a boy Christ was a strange figure on a stained glass window, an interesting myth in a class with the heroes of fairy tales. Then a very dear friend of mine died, and for a while I grieved terribly. Then suddenly I met him again on the Emmaus road, and he has been my companion ever since. It has given me an understanding of the world, for now I know that Jesus is best seen through friendship."

Rabbi A. S. Rosenberg Installed.

Installation services for Alexander S. Rosenberg as Rabbi of Congregation Obeb Zedeck took place yesterday in the Synagogue on Prospect Avenue, the Bronx. Rabbi Rosenberg, who is only 23 years old, was graduated recently from the Isaac Elchanan Theological Seminary. He succeeds his father, Dr. Philip Rosenberg, who has been called to a congregation in Cleveland.

GIVE DRYS A CHANCE, DR. CADMAN PLEADS

Fair Test for Prohibition Will Make America Leader of Mankind, He Says.

RECALLS EVILS OF SALOON

Canadian's Testimony to Senate Will Be Refuted, He Declares—Cites Wet Propaganda.

"National Prohibition in the Balance" was the subject of an address yesterday afternoon by Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, President of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America and pastor of the Central Congregational Church in Brooklyn, at the Men's Conference of the Bedford Y. M. C. A. Dr. Cadman went on record as personally in favor of prohibition and urged that the Volstead act receive a fair and impartial trial.

Halsey Hammond, General Secretary of the Bedford Y. M. C. A., who presided, announced that a radio audience of from 2,000,000 to 4,000,000 was listening in on Dr. Cadman's address.

Dr. Cadman asserted that a costly financial campaign had been conducted by persons opposed to prohibition, who placed their private desires ahead of the public good. The discussions concerning prohibition, he said, have been anything but unprejudiced or dispassionate.

Some Drys Too Zealous.

"There is no need for exaggerated statements in regard to this subject," said Dr. Cadman. "The wets have outdone the drys in propaganda, although I am sorry to say that some drys have hurt their cause by their zeal. Prohibition is as thoroughly American as the Statue of Liberty or the national anthem. The fight for the overthrow of drink is centred in this country."

Dr. Cadman quoted Abraham Lincoln as having said, more than twenty years before he entered the White House, that a temperance revolution was on foot and if it was successful it would dissolve bonds greater than those broken by the Revolutionary War.

On a recent trip abroad Dr. Cadman said he found foreign brewers and distillers greatly interested in American prohibition and spoke of the agitation in England for temperance. He mentioned Lloyd George and Lady Astor as being in favor of prohibition in that country.

"England ridden by a war debt spent nearly a billion dollars for drink last year," he said. "Whatever else Britain can teach us, and there are many things that we can learn from her, she cannot teach us anything about controlling the brewer and the distiller. We have them down now and we are going to keep them down. Personal liberty must be limited for the public good. You will find no people on the earth where private rights have not been curtailed for the larger rights of the community. Only yesterday a bread trust was dissolved before it started to function.

"Does drinking come within the category of things which should be controlled? I contend that it does. There was a day in which saloons existed on nearly every corner in opposition to the pleas of the churches. Breweries were in full blast. Prostitution and gambling followed in the wake of drink. Even those in favor of modification do not ask for the return of the saloon but prohibition was the great force which did away with the saloon. yet should prohibition be modified it may lead to the return of the saloon. The saloon never obeyed the law and never will.

Expects Wets to Be Refuted.

"I have not had time to check up on the stories told by our Canadian friends at Washington, but I have no doubt that we will be able to answer anything said by them. Other laws are difficult to enforce, but we do not ask for their modification. I ask that the prohibition law be given a fair and equal opportunity with the other laws. No sooner was prohibition established than its opponents started about the work of its destruction.

"Is there any man present who can deny that the javelins of drink have not penetrated at least one member of his family? If there is, he is a singular and fortunate person. Give sobriety as good a chance as you gave drunkenness. Give prohibition a chance to operate for the next ten years and see how it works out. We have lawless sellers of liquor and lawless buyers. Make them know that the traffic in drink has been outlawed. The work of the education of the public in regard to prohibition must be carried on. I am confident that a fair trial of prohibition will make the United States the leader of mankind."

MORE TOLERANCE NEEDED, HE SAYS

Dr. Fitch Asserts No Culture Can Survive Unless Based on Kindliness.

"The good is the worst enemy of the better and the better the subtlest foe of the best," declared the Rev. Dr. Albert Parker Fitch, a member of the Faculty of Carleton College, Northfield, Minn., in his sermon yesterday morning on "The Problem of Goodness," in the Universalitat Church of the Divine Paternity, Central Park West and Seventy-sixth Street.

"The sense of moral obligation of enjoying things that are good, is fundamental in human nature," he said. "Most of us want to be good if the price is not too high, but the majority are not willing to make the sacrifices required. Yet, the perplexity and child-like simplicity of those who desire to do the right thing is touching."

Dr. Fitch pleaded for more tolerance and kindness in men's relations toward each other in the every-day affairs of life.

"There is nothing so despicable as the way we are prone to sit in judgment on the characters of our neighbors in the light of fragility of our own," he said. "We shall attain more ethical illumination if we are kinder, and no culture can survive unless based on this fundamental considerations. But all the important issues are dual issues, and it takes courage to choose the path we know to be the best."

Lawmaking Orgy' Discredits Our Courts, Dr. Ribourg Warns

"Character is the final court of appeal in all life's controversies or difficulties. When a man in public, social or religious life becomes unpopular, the first thing his critics do is to scrutinize his private life to see if there is anything whereby they might accuse him. The true reason for this lies in the fact that it is not so much the policy which most right-thinking men are concerned about but the moral motives which lie at the back of all actions.

"People cannot be made good and righteous by repression and coercion. Our generation has gone mad on the subject of lawmaking. This orgy of lawmaking will in time, and is already doing it, bring discredit on our courts of justice."

SEES DRY HEARINGS TESTING DEMOCRACY

DEFENDS YOUTH ON DRINKING

But Suggests Giving Young People Jobs Instead of Money—Finds Too Much Idleness Today.

The Rev. Daniel A. Poling, pastor of the Marble Collegiate Reformed Church, Fifth Avenue and Twenty-ninth Street, told the members of the Young People's Conference at a service yesterday afternoon in his church under the auspices of the Greater New York Federation of Churches that the great question involved in the hearings at Washington on prohibition was "Can democracy survive the application of its own principles of law and government?"

"Again and again," he said, "the statement has been made that prohibition is a failure, that it cannot be enforced, that it—the law—is responsible for lawlessness, and that it should be repealed. Whenever any free government consents to law revision by those who violate or those who propose repeal because the law is violated, the failure—not of the law, but of democratic government itself—is conceded.

"The only man who has the right to propose a law's repeal is the man who has obeyed the law and who has supported its enforcement. There are many people in this country who stood out against prohibition until it was enacted but from that time to this have observed it in private practice and in public expression and have promoted its enforcement. These are the only people who have a right to ask for modification or repeal.

"The statement has been made that $75,000,000 would be necessary to make prohibition effective in New York. There is a greater question at issue. Shall free government fall of its own weight? This country is headed straight for bolshevism or fascism when a clamorous minority, or, indeed, a clamorous majority, can on the basis of such argument as has been entered upon the records of the hearing in Washington for the modification of prohibition achieve its purpose.

"I resent the inference, whether from a labor leader or from a United States Senator, that those young men and women they have seen drinking together from hip-pocket flasks in public places represent youth generally. The wholesale indictment of American young people in the interests of prohibition modification and for light wines and beers is a shameless thing.

"I know youth in every State in the union and in almost every considerable city. I have seen these sights, but they represent an insignificant number when compared with the whole body. Perhaps I may be accepted as a competent witness, for the organization I serve as President—the Christian Endeavor Society—enrolls more than 3,250,000 members in the United States."

"One of the problems of modern city life," Dr. Poling said at another point, "is to find opportunities for boys and girls to work. There is an unfortunate idea abroad in these parts that physical toil belongs to the foreign-born and to their children; that the vacations of our sons and daughters should be spent by the sea or in the mountains rather than in the harvest fields and on truck gardens.

"A good deal of the youthful delinquency that troubles us is directly traceable to the fact that boys and girls are given spending money instead of jobs.

"One of the vital weaknesses of American life today is the failure of so many people to set themselves toward any worthy goal. We have unprecedented prosperity.

"The curse of wealth, for women particularly, is idleness. Unnumbered physical ailments, as well as mental and moral disappointments, come to the lives of women today because so many of them have absolutely nothing worth while to engage their lives."

IRREVERENCE IS DEPLORED.

Irreverence is at the root of many modern social evils, according to the Rev. Dr. Ralph W. Sockman, the pastor, who preached yesterday at the Madison Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church at Sixtieth Street. He said:

"We hold fewer things sacred than our fathers did. If social life is to be redeemed from vulgarity, laxity and sensuality, we must replace some of the labels of 'sacred.' We must do it intelligently. Our enlightened world will not tolerate superstitious taboos. We must recognize, for example, that marriage is a social contract, but that the principle of monogamy is so essential to the integrity of human nature that it truly may be said to be ordained of God."

DR. KRASS OUTLINES JEFFERSON'S CREED

Cites Statesman's Advice to a Youth to Prove He Was a Religious Man.

LINKS HIM TO JUDAISM

Characterizing Thomas Jefferson as "the incarnation of political and religious democracy," Dr. Nathan Krass yesterday morning told the congregation of Temple Emanu-El, Fifth Avenue and Forty-third Street, that the author of the Declaration of Independence derived much of his inspiration from the Old Testament, his philosophy being "steeped in the teachings of Judaism." Dr. Krass's sermon, "Judaism and Americanism," was conceived as a tribute to Jefferson on the centenary of his death, which occurred on July 4, 1926.

"Let us realize," Dr. Krass said, "that the more we understand Judaism the more shall we understand the principles of Jefferson."

Dr. Krass paid honor to Jefferson as one who "embodied the finest conception of democracy," who "loved sincerely the masses of the people," who "loved religion ardently," and who "believed in the right of individual conscience, in freedom of thought."

"It is for this reason," he added, "that in my mind he typifies more than any other individual of his time the principles and ideals of American democracy."

To prove that Jefferson was "essentially a religious man," Dr. Krass quoted six precepts which the author of the Declaration of Independence once addressed to a young man, a namesake of his. These were:

"Adore God.

"Reverence and cherish your parents.

"Love your neighbor as yourself, your country more than yourself.

"Be just.

"Be true.

"Murmur not at the ways of Providence."

Dr. Krass prescribed "more democracy" as a cure for "rotten democracy."

ASSERTS JEFFERSON WAS A UNITARIAN

Dr. Slaten Says He Leaned to That Faith, Though It Had Not Then Been Organized.

Thomas Jefferson was a Unitarian, a materialist and a humanist, the Rev. Dr. A. Wakefield Slaten said yesterday in his morning sermon at the West Side Unitarian Church on 110th Street, east of Broadway.

"Though at that time there was no organized Unitarian Church," Dr. Slaten said, "Jefferson was in thought and in attitude a Unitarian, an antitrinitarian. He saw the reasonableness of the religion that was just then beginning to take form, and in his letters he predicted that it would soon sweep over the country. But he failed to realize that to spread rapidly a religion needs, as well as cool reasonableness, favorable social conditions and enthusiasm that approaches fanaticism.

"Jefferson did not believe the Bible story of the creation of Adam and Eve, nor of the deluge and Noah's ark, nor of the numerous miracles. But he believed in prayer and God. His letter and other writings clearly show it."

WISE SAYS GOD OF JEW GROWS WITH THE JEW

Rabbi Declares Revelation Is Continuous and Did Not Come to Any One Man.

"The God of the Jew survives and will survive because He is the God that can be hallowed in righteousness," Dr. Stephen S. Wise of the Free Synagogue told a capacity congregation yesterday morning in Carnegie Hall.

"The God of the Jew grows with the Jew and reveals Himself more and more as the Jew's insight grows," he said. "He does grow with the Jew; that is the position of the Jew; that is the faith of the Jew. It is an irreverent way of saying it, but it embraces the thought and conviction that the whole of the ideal of the infinite God was not revealed to any one man at any one time, regardless of how prophetic and wise that man was.

"Revelation is not an act, static, but a process, continuous, dynamic, ever unfolding. The God of early Israel was a God of stern, rigid, immutable justice. An eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth, did not mean that for an eye an eye was to be exacted or that for a tooth a tooth must be torn to revenge the loser; it meant that for an eye no more than an eye was to be exacted; that for a tooth no more than a tooth was to be repaid.

"The God of the Jew who revealed so little of Himself to Abraham, and a little more later to other great prophets, is revealing Himself today more and more."

WANTS DISPUTES PUT ASIDE.

Dr. Scherer Says Church Needs to Regain Its Leadership.

The Rev. Dr. Paul Scherer, pastor of the Lutheran Church of the Holy Trinity, Sixty-fifth Street and Central Park West, in his sermon yesterday morning said that Christianity was in desperate need of its former "sublime assurance of victory."

"The sooner the Christian church forgets its disputes," he went on, "the sooner it quits trying to prove its doctrines, the sooner it brushes aside everything else and begins to avail itself of its God-given energies, begins to lay hold on its enmities with the grip of the eternal, the sooner will it come back into its position of unquestioned leadership and demonstrable authority."

"SECOND A. E. F." FORMING.

Veterans Seeking Reservations for 1927 Convention in Paris.

Steamship reservation and reservations for lodgings in Paris are already being made for thousands of former service men and their families who intend to go to the American Legion Convention in that city the week of Sept. 19 to 24, 1927, according to an announcement yesterday by the France Convention Committee of the Legion.

The announcement explains that the members of the "second A. E. F." must "enlist" soon, but that they will have to undergo no physical examination, that they will submit to no fingerprinting, and that in Paris there will be no military police. The only day they will spend in the first line trenches will be on a pilgrimage to the battlefields. The announcement in part follows:

"Ex-service men must be paid up members in and for both 1926 and 1927 of the American Legion. Members of auxiliaries, father of Legionnaires, and minor lineal descendants must likewise be paid up in and for both 1926 and 1927. Brides of 1927 who join the auxiliary then will be eligible, but there may be no accommodations left. Therefore you had better get the ceremony through in 1926."

Goldstein, head of the Union of Orthodox Jewish Congregations of America; Joseph Barondess, Max D. Steuer, Congressman Emanuel Celler, Adolph Stern and Abram I. Elkus former American Ambassador to Turkey.

Dr. Randall Views a New Humanity.

Preaching on "The Coming of a New Humanity" at the Community Church, Park Avenue and Thirty-fourth Street, yesterday morning, the Rev. Dr. John Herman Randall said: "We are standing on the threshold of the coming of a new humanity. This experience of universal love will not be limited to a few men; it will be common to many. A new era of world unity will result. A new minority is coming into existence in every land, in every institution—a minority with a new consciousness in which there will be no place for division, doubt, fear, hatred and war. This is the psychological revolution which we are witnessing and in which we have part."

PASTOR IN FAVOR OF DEATH PENALTY

ELIZABETH, N. J., April 11.—The Rev. Dr. Llewellyn Brown preached on the hanging of Gerald Chapman this morning in the First Baptist Church.

"On Tuesday morning last," he said, "at four minutes after 12 o'clock midnight, Gerald Chapman, super-bandit and arch-criminal, went silently to his death.

"His tragic end may teach us some valuable lessons: There may be detours and delays by the way, but in the end men always reap what they sow. He sowed death and death he surely reaped. As long as capital punishment strikes fear into the hearts of the criminal class, I am for it as a deterrent to crime.

"Here is a man who committed cold-blooded murder Oct. 12, 1924, and who successfully stayed the hand of justice until April 6, 1926. Through vague legal technicalities and groundless appeals Chapman eluded justice, burdened the taxpayers and lengthened his life. We can learn a lesson from England in this matter, an older nation than ours and one more experienced in the handling of crime. There the most serious cases require but a few weeks at most until finally disposed of. Murder trials last but a few hours and juries deliberate but a few minutes."

SETS FORTH AIM OF SUNDAY.

The Rev. Dr. Minot Simons preached on "The Use and Abuse of Sunday" yesterday at the All Souls Unitarian Church, Fourth Avenue and Twentieth Street. He said:

"There is no supernatural sanction for Sunday. Sunday is a natural opportunity in which to meet human needs. It is so humanly necessary that the very nature of things gives it a divine sanction. People need to rest, to play, to strengthen their spiritual control of life. They need all three. Sunday is a special opportunity for religion, for the enlargement of the horizons of life. The wise man will plan his Sunday for rest, for church, for play, for some good book."

Rich Steers and Mrs. John W. Mackay.

PREACHING A BIG BUSINESS.

Dr. G. H. Baker Says He Prefers Saving a Soul to Riches.

"There is no business in the world as big as the business of preaching Christ," said the Rev. Dr. Gordon H. Baker in his first sermon as pastor of the Washington Heights Baptist Church, Convent Avenue and 145th Street, yesterday morning. "I would rather save one sinner than make a million dollars of this world's money."

Before accepting the pastorate of his present church Mr. Baker was for six years minister at the First Baptist Church, Schenectady, and was a pastor in Montreal for thirteen years. He succeeded the Rev. Dr. R. Harold Pattison, who resigned.

"There is an appeal in the message of the cross," he said, "which never loses its power, even on the battlefield. The one supreme mission of the Church, as I see it, is to bring men into the fold of Jesus Christ through its interpretation. That will be the keynote of my preaching while I am in this church. I know no other message than that of the supreme sacrifice at Calvary."

TO DIG UP OLD SYNAGOGUE.

Dr. Wise's Congregation Backing Excavation in Palestine.

Plans for the excavation of the synagogue of Chorazin, said to be the oldest one in Palestine of which there is record, were made public yesterday by the Free Synagogue, 40 West Sixty-eighth Street.

The City of Chorazin, now known as Kerazeh, located in Upper Galilee, only two miles from Capernaum, contains this synagogue, built immediately after 135 A. D., when Roman persecution drove the rabbis to Galilee from Jerusalem.

The Free Synagogue, of which Dr. Stephen S. Wise is rabbi, is financing the expedition at the instance of Dr. J. L. Magnes, formerly a rabbi here but now Chancellor of the Hebrew University in Jerusalem. Professor Garstang, curator of the British Archaeological Museum in Palestine, will supervise the excavation.

BETHLEHEM WINS, 7-2; TAKES SOCCER TITLE

LARGEST SCORE IN SERIES

STARK TALLIES THREE TIMES

The Bethlehem Steel Football Club of Bethlehem, Pa., won the soccer championship of the United States and the Dewar trophy by defeating the Ben Miller Football Club of St. Louis, 7 to 2, at Ebbets Field yesterday afternoon. The margin of victory was the greatest in the history of the championship.

It was the first United States championship to be held in New York and a record crowd of 18,000 turned out for the game. They saw the Bethlehem team, exponents of the carpet system, clean up the Ben Millers with all the efficiency of a vacuum cleaner. The victory yesterday was the fifth for Bethlehem in championship play.

Bethlehem won by outclassing the Western team in every department of the game. The victors were better on the offense, superior on the defense and even outspeeded the Ben Millers, who were known as the Greyhounds of the West and based their play on fast footwork.

Stark Hero of Game.

Archie Stark was the individual star of the game. He is one of the leading goal scorers of the American Soccer League, of which association the Bethlehem club is a member, and yesterday accounted for three of his team's seven goals. Bethlehem led, 3 to 0, at half time and Stark scored two of those goals and made the third possible. Stark, who won the American League high-scoring title last year, also scored the first goal for his team in the second half and was in every play.

The Ben Millers did their best work in the second half, when they rallied strongly. They were outscored even in this period, however, 4 goals to 2. Nash was the individual star of the losing side and accounted for both of his team's goals.

Bethlehem won the toss and the Ben Millers kicked off to start the game. The ball was no sooner in play than Bethlehem started with a rush and forced the ball into Ben Miller territory. The Greyhounds were being outrun by the steelmakers and the game was not three minutes old before Bethlehem forced its first corner. In all, the Bethlehems forced six corners in the first half as against two for the Ben Millers. Jaap forced the first corner, but Rollo's attempt at the goal went wide.

Three minutes later, Goldie forced the second Bethlehem corner and Archie Stark scored the first of his three goals in the period. The Bethlehems were on the ball so fast that the Ben Millers had hardly kicked off after the first goal when the play was again in the shadow of the St. Louis goal posts. Rollo made a good but unsuccessful try for the goal.

St. Louis Eleven Attacks.

The St. Louis team swept the play into enemy territory for the first time as a result of some tricky work by Nash. He confused the opposing players so thoroughly, with the aid of Mulroy, that the ball was within a few yards of the Bethlehem goal before the Ben Millers lost it. Nash started his fine work right after Bethlehem had forced its third corner.

The time the St. Louisans had the ball was short, however, and the Bethlehem forwards soon had the play back in Ben Miller territory. Following Bethlehem's fourth corner, which was forced by Goldie, Bethlehem made three tries at the goal, all of which were saved by the Ben Miller goal keeper.

The St. Louis team could not withstand the sustained driving of Bethlehem, however, and Stark scored again after twenty minutes. Stark took the pass from Granger, who did good work in getting the ball to his mate.

As if spurred on by the two Bethlehem goals, the Ben Millers attacked fiercely, and Mulroy, one of the youthful Western players, got away with the ball and made a fine attempt at a goal. It was the first time that the Bethlehem goal had been seriously threatened. The Ben Millers forced the pace and made another try, but it too went for nothing.

The fight became hot when Bethlehem got possession of the ball and carried it down the field. Goldie, Stark and Granger all tried for goals but failed. Rollo made a drive also, but it remained for Goldie to score. He put the ball through on a cross from Stark, after thirty-five minutes. The play was very keen, Goldie's cross drive taking the goalkeeper out of position. Immediately after Goldie forced the fifth Bethlehem corner, but nothing came of it.

With about five minutes of the period left to play, the Ben Millers rallied and swept the play into Bethlehem. On a cross from Dunn, Nash made a try from about twenty yards out that narrowly missed the goal. Soon after the Ben Millers forced their first corner of the game.

Carson Checks Rival Shot.

Bollam made a try for a goal, but Carson saved for Bethlehem. The Ben Millers forced their second corner soon after but lost the ball to Bethlehem. In the scrimmage for the ball, Berryman threw Daley heavily, knocking him out, but he soon recovered. Two minutes before the whistle, Goldie forced the sixth Bethlehem corner.

After the rest period, the Ben Millers started to play in a do-or-die spirit and swept down the field for their first goal, which came in the first three minutes of the period. The goal was by Nash and was headed in. It brought a great cheer from the crowd.

Bethlehem rallied strongly, however, and soon again assumed the upper hand. The Ben Millers fought back viciously, however. The fourth Bethlehem goal soon followed. Stark made it. He outgained two Ben Miller men. It followed the forcing of the seventh corner by Bethlehem. Stark made his goal from eighteen yards out. It hit the crossbar and bounced under and into the net. The time was 9 minutes.

Two minutes later, Bethlehem scored its second goal of the period and fifth of the game when Rollo outgeneraled the Ben Miller backs and put the ball into the netting.

Despite the four-goal lead by Bethlehem, the Ben Millers played hard, even somewhat roughly. They swept down the field and E. Dunn got near enough for an attempt. The Ben Millers retained possession of the ball and after a foul kick by Croak, Nash scored the second Ben Miller goal. It came after twenty-five minutes of play.

The Bethlehem team forced the ball into enemy territory after the kick-off and was in such control of the ball that the Ben Miller efforts looked very helpless at times. The play became rougher as the time remaining to play became shorter. At one time three men were out of the play and McDonald for Bethlehem did not resume for five minutes.

St. Louis then forced a corner. It was followed by Bethlehem's eighth corner and then by Bethlehem's sixth goal. McDonald scored the goal on a pass from Goldie. It was scored with only four minutes to play. In another two minutes Bethlehem scored again when Jaap took a cross drive and put it in for the seventh Bethlehem goal.

ALL OVER CAPTURES TIJUANA CUP EASILY

DR. CLARK DISTANT THIRD

Finishes Eight Lengths Back of Sanford—Heavy Track Slows Winner's Time to 3:29.

TIJUANA, April 11 (AP).—All Over won the Tijuana Cup race—the final major event of the season—here today. In addition to $11,350, the seven-year-old horse won for Mrs. C. B. Irwin, his owner, a silver cup of huge proportions.

Sanford of the Rosedale Stable was second, a length behind, and brought to the owner $1,500. Doctor Clark, owned by I. Linnell, was eight lengths back of Sanford and secured $1,000 for his owner, while $500 went to Baron Long for his horse Cherry Tree, finishing fourth.

The time was 3:29, five seconds slower than the track record, the track being slow and cuppy.

Cherry Tree Favorite.

All Over paid as good as 3 to 1, while Cherry Tree, despite the 113 pounds up, ruled a bit over even money as the favorite. Doctor Clark was off in the lead and held it throughout the first mile, but when the mile and a quarter was reached Jockey Sylvia sent All Over to the front, attaining a lead of five lengths at the mile and a half. Horse and rider increased it to seven at the mile and three-quarters, with Doctor Clark second.

Rounding the last turn Sanford moved into second place, cutting down All Over's lead at the stretch to two lengths.

The grueling run over the slow track began to tell on all, and toward the finish, although All Over seemed to have the race, Sanford, after a weak ride in the stretch, was straightened out by Jockey Vessell, and after gaining a good stride began pushing the leader. Sylvia vigorously applied the whip and All Over managed to cross the finish a length ahead of the fast-coming Sanford.

Cherry Tree Far Back.

All Over paid $8.20 to win in the two-dollar mutuels, $3.60 to place and $2.60 to show. Sanford paid $3.40 to place and $2.60 to show. Doctor Clark paid $3 to show.

Washington Crew Will Row at Princeton And Train There for Poughkeepsie Race

PRINCETON, N. J., April 11.—Princeton will engage in its first intersectional crew race since 1921 on or about June 19, when the Tiger oarsmen will meet the University of Washington on Lake Carnegie, the Board of Athletic Control announced here today. The exact date for the race, which will be the first of its kind since Princeton defeated the University of California five years ago, is still to be settled.

Chuck Logg, crew coach at Princeton, was captain of the University of Washington crew in 1921 and is highly pleased with the arrangement which will pit the crew of his alma mater against the Princeton eight. He declared today that he approved the arrangement because it would add desirable length to Princeton's varsity crew schedule and also because of the additional interest arising from intersectional regattas.

After the race with Princeton, the Coast oarsmen will accept the invitation of Princeton athletic authorities to take advantage of local aquatic facilities to train for the Poughkeepsie regatta at the end of June. It is expected that the rowing delegation from Washington will be a formidable organization inasmuch as it has won twice and finished second twice in Poughkeepsie regattas in the last four years.

Proof of the power of the Washington eight is found in the six-length victory of the Huskies over the University of California for the Pacific Coast championship last week. Coach Rusty Callow, however, takes nothing for granted and makes sudden shifts, veterans of the last Poughkeepsie event having been sent to the second shell only recently when reserve men showed more ability. Indications are that the Huskies of this year will be as strong as those of the last four.

SILVERSTEIN IS SECOND

Milofsky Comes Next, Followed by Werbin and Lichtenstein—Winner's Time 25:15.

Sam McNeil, unattached, led a field of twenty-four rivals yesterday in the invitation road race of the Swedish-American A. C. over a course of about four and three-quarters miles around Prospect Park, Brooklyn. McNeil, leading practically from the start, finished nearly fifty yards ahead of Abe Silverstein, Glencoe A. C. harrier. McNeil's time was 22 minutes, 15 seconds, and Silverstein finished ten seconds after the winner.

Third honors went to Louis Milofsky, who was twenty-five yards back of Silverstein. In fourth position was H. Werbin, and he was trailed home by Harvey Lichtenstein, another Glencoe runner, in fifth position.

McNeil, Silverstein, Milofsky, Werbin and Lichtenstein struggled for the honors almost from the outset. The strong finish of McNeil, however, brought the unattached runner victory. He broke away from his rivals soon after passing the three and three-quarter-mile post, and through the last three-quarters of a mile set a pace which enabled him to shake off the opposition and work up a commanding lead. Lichtenstein weakened in the last mile and slipped back. Silverstein gave chase to McNeil for a time, but the Glencoe runner's endurance was not up to the task.

NAVY TURNS WEST FOR ATHLETIC FOES

2 FOOTBALL GAMES LISTED

ANNAPOLIS, Md., April 11 (AP).—Naval Academy athletes must look westward for adequate competition in the future, Commander Byron McCandless, Navy athletic director, believes. Not only do the West and Middle West supply half the academy enrolment, with consequent desire on the part of authorities to develop sport competition with those sections, but there is increasing difficulty in arranging schedules with Eastern institutions, Commander McCandless has told the Associated Press.

"Only this Winter," he said, "the Navy was asked not to enter the Eastern intercollegiate gymnastic competition." He added that Navy gymnasts have dominated the event for several years.

With the advancement of science and the placing of additional burdens on the technical side of the midshipmen's course of study, the need for well-rounded athletic competition is greater than ever before, the Commander declared, and continued:

Must Develop Athletics.

"We are building up mentally and physically at the Naval Academy the future representatives of the United States in all the ports of the world. These boys represent the finest young manhood of the country. We must breed in them through athletic competition the spirit of combat, while developing at the same time the highest type of sportsmanship. To do that we must meet the finest teams in the country.

"We will be whipped sometimes, perhaps, as Michigan crushed us in football last Fall, but the Navy must be made able to hold her own against any athletic team in the country."

As far as possible under Academy regulations limiting all teams except the football eleven to one trip each season away from the Academy, plans are being formulated for increasing Western sports relations, he said. The football team is allowed two away-from-home trips each year.

Making Start This Year.

"In the coming season alone," Commander McCandles said, "we meet Drake University and Purdue, both newcomers from the West, and the annual Army-Navy football battle will be at Chicago."

While the Chicago game will not be strictly a Western competition, taking it west in the mind of Commander McCandless, serves the purpose of placing it near the "home port" of a large number of cadets and midshipmen.

The Navy's first invasion of the West was in 1924 and 1925. The basketball five sacrificed its Christmas holiday to engage the Universities of Chicago, Minnesota and Michigan on their home floors, and the Navy eleven and University of Washington battled to a 14-14 tie at the Pasadena tournament of roses.

By RICHARDS VIDMER.

An even dozen. That's what the Yankee victories over the Robins totaled when the Spring series ended with a blare of base hits at the Stadium yesterday. Twelve straight games is what the walloping warriors of Miller Huggins gave to the Flatbushers and eighteen straight they have won. All of which is something to boast about even in the pre-season song.

The score of the final massacre was 14 to 7, and all the Robins had left at the finish was a deep, dull thanksgiving that they won't have to play the Yankees again until next Spring. Everything else was torn away by the rifle fire from the Yanks' battery of siege guns that stretches from the lead-off man through the pitcher in the batting order. Brooklyn's pride in its pitching staff was gone, Brooklyn's hopes were withered and Brooklyn's attack appeared small and weak in comparison.

Manager Wilbert Robinson took his line-up and tossed it in a hat before the game started in an effort to draw out a winning combination. Snooks Dowd, once with the Athletics, was borrowed from the Jersey City Skeeters to plug the hole at second and was drawn for the lead-off position. Marriott was moved up to second place, Felix was pushed into centre field in place of Witt and hit ahead of Cox. Maranville was shoved down to seventh in the batting order. But all this rearranging availed nothing, as 15,000 fans observed.

Robins Hopeful for Seven Innings.

True, for seven innings the Robins plodded along just a little bit behind. A long-delayed victory was possible, and even the possibility of such a thing was more encouragement than the Robins have had since the series started. But every time they made moves toward catching up the irritating Yanks gave a light tug on the string and moved the possibility a little further away.

When finally the Yanks gathered in their dugout for the eighth inning Manager Huggins reminded the boys that this would be the last opportunity they would have to face Brooklyn pitching, and suggested that they make the most of it. They did.

Ray Moss, the Memphis rookie, was on the mound, and he still was there at the end of the inning, but seven runs were added to the New York score in the interim. Moss was no more sinned against than sinning, however. With one out, he walked Bengough, threw wildly past Fournier on Myles Thomas's sacrifice, allowing Henry to go to third and then unloosed a wild pitch, allowing Bengough to score.

There was one run without a hit, for which no one was responsible but Moss himself. There were others made much the same way, four hits, two of them doubles, being all the Yanks contributed toward the accumulation of those seven tallies.

One of those doubles was by Ruth, who, after Maranville had switched over to the right side of second base and stopped the Babe in the fifth, crossed the Rabbit and started hitting to left field. When Ruth came up Maranville switched over to the wrong side of the bag, giving the Robins two second basemen, no shortstop and only half a third baseman, Marriott moving down toward second.

Babe Outwits Strategy.

The strategy worked beautifully in the fifth, when the Babe shot a drive over second base, only to have the Rabbit there waiting for it, but the next two times Ruth came to bat he pulled the ball down the left-field foul line and both blows went for doubles.

Besides that, the Babe made a double in the first. Koenig laced out three singles and Cullop and Lazzeri pounded the ball for home runs. Lazzeri's drive was made off Buzz McWeeny, and it was the only hit registered off him during the three innings he toiled, but that one wallop was enough to take the wind out of the Buzzer's sails. It sped on a line into the right centre field bleachers and would have gone clear through to the street were the Stadium not built of concrete.

Cullop's wallop was made off Bob McGraw, who started in the box for Brooklyn. It didn't go outside the park, but it went as far as it could in the direction of left field, and Cullop was able to make the round trip standing up. It hit the sign that says "You can't Yank 'em out," but Cullop found that you can drive them out, for McGraw disappeared soon after.

Two other Brooklyn pitchers were also driven out. They were Dazzy Vance and Jess Petty, but it was no home run that caused their disappearance. Umpire Rowland didn't like some remarks they made from the dugout and shooed them from the park.

International Polo Assured For Philadelphia Exposition

PHILADELPHIA, April 11 (AP).—Officials of the Sesquicentennial announced today that plans have assumed definite shape for an international polo tournament to be held, probably early in September, in connection with the exposition. The program thus far arranged assures two or three representative teams from the United States, two United States Army teams, one from Great Britain and one from South America. The United States Polo Association has agreed to sacrifice its main playing field at the Philadelphia Country Club for the Summer, so that it will be in tip-top shape for the games.

SKEETERS SURPRISE THE ATHLETICS, 7-3

Connie Mack's Philadelphia Athletics walked into a surprise in yesterday's battle with the Skeeters at the Jersey City ball park, the International Leaguers winning by 7 to 3. The Skeeters outbatted their rivals ten hits to six and excelled in the field.

The pitching of Guy Cantrell for Jersey City was of midseason calibre, except in the second, when his lapse in control paved the way for the three tallies by the visitors. He walked Welch, Miller singled and Cochrane grounded to Cantrell, who made a late throw to second and the bases were crowded. Cantrell walked Poole, forcing Welch over. Bates flied to Rogell, but Pitcher Pate singled to left, scoring Miller and Cochrane. Cantrell tightened and the Athletics never threatened thereafter.

Lew Malone blazed the trail for Jersey City's success by hitting to the centre field flag pole in the second for a homer, which was followed in the sixth with a collection of base hits which accounted for three runs. Five hits in a row were made by Gaudette, Hutson, Rogell, Malone and Corgan, which forced the retirement of Pate.

The Skeeters handled Willis roughly in the seventh, when three extra tallies were made.

With the presence of Chuck Corgan, secured from Brooklyn, in the game, Manager Donovan made a complete shift in his infield which proved effective.

Brooklyn recalled First Baseman Del Bissonette at the conclusion of yesterday's game and Jersey City is in the market for a first sacker, who must be secured before the opening on Wednesday. Red Holt, the Skeeters' regular first baseman, will be out with a bad leg for at least a month.

HOMER BEATS ORIOLES, 4-3.

Dykes's Drive in the Ninth Gives Athletic Team Victory.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Md., April 11.—Jimmy Dykes's drive over the left centrefield fence in the ninth gave a Philadelphia Athletic team a 4 to 3 victory over the Baltimore Orioles this afternoon at Oriole Park. There was no one on base. Another Athletic team lost to Jersey City today.

Lefty Groves, former Oriole, yielded two runs in the eighth, enabling the Orioles to tie the count. Rommel relieved Groves at the start of the ninth and blanked the home team.

M'QUILLAN BLANKS SENATORS IN FINAL

By JAMES R. HARRISON.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 11.—The first Giants' pitcher of the year to go the full nine-inning route, Hughey McQuillan, today allowed no runs and only five hits, and on the wings of his 5 to 0 victory the Giants slipped through to win the final and deciding game of the series with the Senators.

The Senators, by the way, are now accustomed to having titles wrested from them by a last-minute rush. Last Fall the Pittsburgh Pirates had to win three straight to capture the championship and did that very thing. Last week the Giants were face to face with the same proposition, win three or fall. The Giants did not fall.

Capital pitching by Virgil Barnes yesterday and by McQuillan today turned the gallant trick. Barnes in seven innings allowed one run, McQuillan in nine allowed none. This is sixteen innings of twirling that can't be beat.

McQuillan Baffles Senators.

In a misty rain, on a muddy field, with a ball that was difficult to control, McQuillan made a baseball dance before the eyes of the Senators. He thwarted them with a hopping fast ball, a sharp curve, control and change of pace.

If this fails to impress you, consider the fact that no Senator got further than second base and only three that far. In five of the nine innings the first Senator up got on base, but McQuillan let them die cruelly in the rain, while his mates buffeted the offerings of Bullet Joe Bush for four runs and Curley Ogden for one.

The Giants were perfectly willing to call the series a draw and go home. It rained all morning, and the weather was still very damp as late at 1:30, a handful of fans stood bravely by their guns outside the dripping park, and it was for the benefit of this insignificant minority that Clark Griffith, President of the Washington club, ordered the gates thrown open as soon as the rain stopped.

Southworth Is Injured.

It was only through some miracle that none of the costly athletes, carefully trained at great expense in the South, was badly injured. As it was, Billy Southworth wrenched a tendon in his back and the crop of resultant colds and sore arms has not been determined yet. Southworth's spikes slipped as he caught a fly ball, but he was not badly hurt, although he left the game at the end of the inning.

Not more than 1,500 fans shivered and soaked through the game, the only redeeming feature of which was that the Giants won it and with it the series, five victories to four.

The Giants got themselves a pair of runs in the first round. Frisch and Young walked with one out and Southworth dropped a double out of Rice's reach, scoring Frisch. Kelly parked a single in left and Young dashed in. Bush was wobbling badly and was about to be laid out for the full count when Bucky Harris saved him by making a running catch of Tyson's liner near second and doubling up Kelly. Lucky man, Mr. Bush.

A bad throw by Bluege presented two more runs to the Giants in the fourth. After Kelly and Tyson had singled, Eddie Farrell bunted safely to Bluege. The third baseman whistled a throw past Judge, both Kelly and Tyson scoring. Farrell turned a somersault at first and landed on the back of his skull, otherwise he would have hastened to second on the overthrow.

Busy Again in Seventh.

Nothing more doing until the seventh, when the Giants faced Curly Ogden. Frisch got a triple on a drive over Rice's fingertips. Sam playing the ball badly. While Meyer was throwing out Young, Frisch ran home.

McQuillan was unreasonable and refused to allow more than one hit in any one inning. The nearest the Senators got to third was when Goslin hit to the fence in the sixth. A flying relay, Tyson to Frisch to Lindstrom, killed the Goose at third. Lindstrom doing a beautiful bit of blocking.

Eddie Farrell's headlong diving catch of a pop fly and Myers's barehand grab of a grounder were the fielding features.

The Giants hurried from the park and caught a 5:30 flyer for New York, where they were scheduled to arrive at 11:10 at the Pennsylvania Station. The boys will practice at the Polo Grounds tomorrow morning at 10.

All Scores Made by Newark in the First Five Innings Off O'Neil and Pierce.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWARK, N. J., April 11.—Twelve hits helped the Newark Bears turn back the Phillies by 9 to 7 in a nine-inning game at Sprague Field here today before a crowd of 9,000.

The Phillies used Pitchers O'Neil and Pierce, but it was off the former that the Newark club gained most of its runs and hits. O'Neil yielded ten hits and Pierce two.

The Bears scored all their runs in the first five innings, while the Phillies tallied in two innings. They got five in the second and two in the sixth. The batting of Cy Williams and George Burns and a sensational catch in left field by Harper featured.

Outroll Gerioski-Shackett by 5,550-5,504 in Intercity Opener.

Dwyer and Fogg, Who Faced Each Other Two Years Ago, Due to Meet Again.

After its successful trip in the South in which three out of four games resulted in victories, the Fordham baseball team will be home this afternoon to play the University of Vermont, also returning from a Southern trip. The same pitchers who toiled on the mound two years ago when Vermont won, 7-0, will oppose each other again today. Johnny Dwyer will be Jack Coffey's selection, while Fogg will work for the visitors.

With Fogg, a righthander, pitching against the Maroon, Coffey will be able to use his regular line-up, which includes five lefthanded batters. Last week against Quantico, he was forced to withdraw three with a lefthander in action.

Bill Feaster, the big Maroon catcher, will be out of the game for several weeks with a broken finger, which he received in the first Marine game. George Shefflot relieved him and caught well in all three games in which he participated, but the regular catcher's slugging will be missed. Feaster will probably be away from the Yale game next Saturday and the contest with Boston College at the Hub a week from today. Fordham will play Providence College at Fordham on Wednesday.

Today's game will start at 3:30 o'clock.

JOHNNY DUNDEE TO MEET KAPLAN

MERIDEN BOXER TO DEFEND

By JAMES P. DAWSON.

Johnny Dundee, veteran Italian fighter, plans to struggle again for the world's featherweight championship title he voluntarily relinquished two years ago. It was learned yesterday. The Italian hero of more than fifteen years of ring activity has been matched with Louis (Kid) Kaplan, Meriden, Conn., recognized as the world's featherweight champion, for a fifteen-round bout to be held at the Queensboro Stadium, Long Island City, on June 1.

The battle is scheduled as the feature of the Queensboro's second show. The club is to open its doors for the first time during the outdoor season on May 25 with a card featured by a ten-round clash between Jack DeMave and Johnny Grosso, rival heavyweights.

Official announcement of the match probably will be made today. It is expected that the principals or their representatives will go before the State Athletic Commission to apply for sanction of the bout. It is expected that approval will be granted the match since a clash between Kaplan and Dundee will eliminate whatever doubt exists as to the legitimacy of Kaplan's qualifications as successor to the title Dundee surrendered in August, 1924.

The discovery that he can train down to 128 pounds, and the conviction that he can give a satisfactory account of himself at this notch, together with a compelling desire to make another attempt to lift the title, has led Dundee to accept the match with Kaplan.

The one condition the Commission will insist upon, however, is that Dundee enter the ring as the challenger for the title, not as champion. This was made clear by Chairman James A. Farley of the Commission, when the subject was discussed with him over the telephone to his home at Stony Point, N. Y.

It was thought by many that Dundee surrendered the championship to avoid a meeting with Kaplan, on the theory that he could reclaim the title without difficulty at his convenience. The Commission accepted Dundee's action, and to insure against his reclaiming the title, forbade the Italian to engage in matches at the featherweight limit.

A featherweight championship elimination tournament was instituted and in this Kaplan was triumphant, battering his way to victory in nine rounds of spectacular fighting over stouthearted little Danny Kramer of Philadelphia, in the final bout at the old Madison Square Garden.

BERNSTEIN IN ACTION TONIGHT IN BROOKLYN

Jack Bernstein, Yonkers boxer, who formerly held the world's junior lightweight title, and Tony Vaccarelli of Harlem yesterday were reported in excellent condition for their ten-round bout, the feature tonight at the New Broadway Arena, Brooklyn. In the ten-round semi-final Johnny Drew, Worcester junior lightweight, will engage Harry Wallach of East New York. Andy Martin, Boston bantamweight, and Johnny Green of Harlem are slated for the third ten-rounder.

A large crowd is expected to witness the three ten-round bouts scheduled for decision tonight at the Uptown Lenox Sports Club. Carl Duane, Bronx favorite, is to tackle Georgie Balduc of Lewiston, Me., in the stellar bout. Mickey Lewis and Willie Spencer have been paired in the semi-final, and in the first ten-round encounter Sid Burt and Morris Meola will be rivals.

Harry Martone, Jersey City welterweight, who recently knocked out Georgie Ward, returns to action tonight at the Bayonne, N. J., Casino, where he will tackle Billy Leonard of Syracuse in the feature ten-round bout. Mickey Walters will face Giovanni Salerno in the ten-round semi-final. The first ten-round bout will be between Lew Snyder and Tony Palmer.

Giants and Senators Picked to Win Pennants—Passing of Jay Gould—Bethlehem's Soccer Title and the "Carpet" System—Yale's Great Polo Team—New Swimming Stars.

BASEBALL

Another baseball season will dawn on the expectant public tomorrow wherever possible. Of course, the fans of Chicago may have to wait a few days, as the White Sox park was reported recently to be snow-covered; the fans in Boston may have to take their baseball between shivers for a few days; the fans of Detroit may be washed away with wet weather prevailing in that district. But the baseball season will dawn wherever playing is possible.)

It is a long way to October and any of many things may happen between now and then, but on the eve of battle it may be well to see with what the warring forces have to fight.

There are the Giants, Yankees and Robins for metropolitan fans to follow and it would not be surprising if their eyes turned upward toward the top of the league when September winds begin to blow.

McGraw Has a Good Team.

The Giants are picked by the majority of experts to do the most toward dislodging the Pirates from the ship of supremacy in the National League. Manager McGraw has as good a team as he put in the field during his four successive pennant-winning years and a far better pitching staff. The Pirates are no better than they were last year, and then they were able to beat the crippled New York club only by a scant margin.

Of course the Cardinals may come pounding along at a terrific pace and upset everything in their way and the Cincinnati Reds must be considered in the running, but, risking the perils of prediction, the clubs ought to finish about in this order: New York, Pittsburgh, St. Louis, Cincinnati, Brooklyn, Boston, Philadelphia and Chicago.

Eighteen Straight for Yankees.

The eighteen straight games that the Yankees won during their exhibition campaign through Southern cities and at the Stadium, where it concluded yesterday still unbroken, have caused the experts to look a second time at the array Miller Huggins has assembled. At first it did not seem as if the Yankees would be even on the outside looking in; now it is highly probable that they will be well on the inside of the first division.

The Washington Senators and Philadelphia Athletics are the only other teams in the American League which appear to be worth bothering about. The Senators are too old and the Athletics are still too young, according to those who like to figure the Yankees as prospective champions, but the Senators are going to be a hard team to beat, anyway.

And again risking the dangers that are bound to follow such a course, the writer predicts that the American League will find Washington again at the top, followed in order by New York, Philadelphia, Detroit, Chicago, St. Louis, Cleveland and Boston.

RICHARDS VIDMER.

Europe scored a marked victory in the soccer championship of the United States at Ebbets Field in Brooklyn yesterday afternoon, for the Bethlehem Steel club used the "carpet" system of play, developed to a high degree by elevens abroad, to defeat the Ben Millers of St. Louis, employing what is known as the American style of attack.

Europeans advance the ball by means of a prearranged series of passes, whereas the so-called American plan calls for the man with the ball to go as far as he can with it before passing to a mate. Speed is the essential requisite of this method, while accuracy and precision are the factors making for success in the other.

The majority of the Bethlehem players learned the game abroad, and not a few of them have won the honor of being called internationalists, soccer's highest award. These players are as familiar with the aerial game as the kicking and often send the ball the length of the pitch by bouncing it from their heads, never ones letting it strike the ground. This tête-à-tête style also is made a part of the American attack, but Bethlehem proved more adept at it yesterday than their rivals.

Brilliant Work by Stark.

To Archie Stark, veteran player, must go a great share of the honor of victory. His three goals, two of them before the Westerners had tallied one, put his team so far in front that the Miller cause was almost hopeless. Stark is fast, but owes much of his success at the goal mouth to his ability in outwitting the goalkeeper, drawing the guardian to one side and booting the ball in at the other.

On the field of battle the Westerners were light as compared to their opponents, but light men are needed for a fast attack, so there was no error of judgment so far as the line-up was concerned. The fact that stands out, however, is that the science of the European method, where soccer has been played for years, while it is comparatively new to America, is better for scoring goals, and that, after all, is the main issue in many sports.

Soccer Growing Rapidly.

When it is recalled that 121 clubs entered the tourney which resulted in Bethlehem's victory in the final, one is struck by the fast growth of the sport in this country. Not many years ago an entry of thirty-one teams would have been a record, but now followers of the sport say that in a year or so the number 121 will seem small.

Soccer is an international sport, being played in fifty countries under uniform rules. It served as Russia's only recreation in the days of the revolution, the equipment being inexpensive and easily supplied. In England eighty-eight clubs are members of the leading leagues. Nearly 20,000 players are registered in the United States and close to 1,200 elevens are taking part in organized tourneys. In New York sixty-five schools play the game, approximately 7,500 boys comprising the teams. The same is true in other cities of the country, and while no one gets a headache over whether the "carpet" style of attack is being used, advocates of outdoor exercise are gratified at the strides soccer is making in the United States.

SWIMMING

Eight of the thirteen titles at stake changed hands in the national A. A. U. indoor swimming championships at Chicago last week, and although in two cases this may have been due to the default of Johnny Weissmuller, unable through sickness to defend his holding at 50 and 100 yards free-style, results in the other events must be ascribed to the development of watermen of exceptional rating within the last year.

Among them stood out conspicuously Walter Laufer, 18-year-old marvel of the Cincinnati Y. M. C. A. He captured four of the individual fixtures, besides gaining the winning lead for his team in the 400-yard relay race, and it is an indication of his amazing all-around ability that he clipped seven seconds from the record in taking the 200-yard medley (breast, back, free-style swims) in 3:45 1-5, then came dangerously close to the international standard of winning the 100-yard sprint in 0:57 2-5 and the 150-yard back-stroke test in 1:42 4-5.

Mere New Material.

Another who surprised was Philip Daubenspeck of Venice, winner of the 50-yard dash in 0:24 2-5, a totally unconsidered candidate. And there was further evidence of the new material produced in the victory of the Cincinnati sprinters in the 400-yard relay swim, for they lowered the universal short-pool record to 3:38, and in the defeat by the Chicago A. A. of the crack water-polo teams of the Olympic Club and Illinois A. C.

Most significant of all, however, was the severe drubbing received by the Illinois A. C. in the contest for team laurels. For nearly twenty years the Tricolor organization had placed in the field invincible squads, yet at the recent meet the Cincinnati Y. M. C. A. ran up 51 points, the Chicago A. A. followed with 31 and the long-standing champions could do no better than garner 27 points and finish third.

Only Berg Did Well.

Nor was Weissmuller's inability to compete in large measure responsible for the big upset. He could not have stemmed the tide of defeat, for Arne Borg, winner of the 200 and 500 yard free-style swims in 2:15 4-5 and 5:43 2-5, was the only Illinois A. C. representative to figure at all in the individual classics.

Taken as a whole the championships were deeply gratifying. Collectively the fields were the finest in the history of the annual fixtures and the striking exploits chronicled afford assurance that the international leadership attained by American watermen in recent years is not likely to be remotely threatened for a long while.

JOHN DREBINGER.

POLO

Indoor polo touched a new high mark in its most successful national championship, just concluded. More teams were in the competition and greater support was excited than ever before. Play continued with unabated interest over a period of six weeks.

Yale University's trio established itself as the most powerful in the country when it won the intercollegiate championship by administering to the Pennsylvania Military College team the most crushing defeat ever suffered in championship play and then nosed out the powerful and experienced Triangle Polo Club combination for the Danforth Cup and the first open championship. The New York Athletic Club earned new laurels for the Winged Foot organization by taking from this same Yale team the Class A championship, albeit with the aid of a liberal handicap.

Lesson by Squadron A.

However, it remained for Squadron A teams, winners of the Class B, C and D championships, to supply what many followers of polo consider one of the most significant developments of the game. The Squadron A players owned no ponies, were frequently on Government horses, lower in calibre than those of their opponents, and won their championships mainly because of constant practice.

The fact that this was done proves that it is no longer necessary to own an unlimited string of expensive ponies to play the game. The result has been an increase in the ranks of polo players and a stimulation of the interest of those who place more reliance on the skill and strategy of the rider than on the quality of the mount.

Practice Scores Another.

Another confirmation of the value of practice as opposed to fine mounts was the frequency of upsets in many of the preliminary games of the various classes. Many of the combinations in these games were formed of younger players who have been playing too short a time to be handicapped. Yet by virtue of constant practice on any kind of mount that offered they put themselves in such form that they were able to overcome more experienced players who had neglected practice, relying on the superiority of their ponies to carry them through.

The increase in the number of clubs in the United States Indoor Polo Association is further proof of the spread of the game. The association has increased its membership by nine since the beginning of the year.

BRYAN FIELD.

HOCKEY

With the recent Stanley Cup series at Montreal an exceedingly active hockey season came to a close and the pro players will not take up the cudgels again until late in October when training begins for a new season.

The triumph in the Stanley Cup play of the Montreal Maroons over the Victoria Cougars, champions of the Pacific Coast League, was clean-cut and the outcome indicated that the Eastern sextet was probably 40 per cent. faster than their Western rivals. Montreal outplayed the Cougars in three out of four games and outskated Victoria under Western as well as Eastern rules.

The world's series hockey games were by no means as hard fought and close as the playoff series between Ottawa and Montreal for the championship of the National Hockey League. This two-act of two-game drama of the ice will be remembered as one of the greatest exhibitions of hockey ever staged.

Clancy's Splendid Work.

The spectacle of King Clancy, the great defense man of the Ottawa Senators, tying up the score in the last minute of the first game, will stand out for many a year as one of the high-lights of a series packed with thrills and dramatic moments. The picture of Clancy, tottering and weak after his valiant efforts to do the trick again in the second game, ended with Montreal victorious, will also be remembered, sorrowfully, by the Ottawa fans. It was an unfortunate windup for Ottawa, which had led the league almost through the entire season.

There is little question, although the teams were very evenly matched, that the Maroons had something of an edge on Ottawa in the play-off series. Led by the great Nelson Stewart, ably backed by that whirlwind on the attack, Babe Siebert, the Montreal fliers were able to develop a fiery offensive that few teams could withstand. So close and hard-fought was the play, however, that it is reasonable to suppose the Senators also might have beaten the Cougars if they had come through against the Maroons.

Locally, hockey also had a great season, although the New York pro team suffered a severe slump and scarcely shone during the greater part of the season. Despite this, huge crowds went to the Garden to see Gorman's sextet perform against Ottawa, the Maroons and other outstanding teams of the National League. Hockey, played again for the first time in many years in the metropolis, appealed to New Yorkers because of its wonderful speed, color and skill.

SEABURY LAWRENCE.

COURT TENNIS

Since the days of the eleventh century, when the Normans of William the Conqueror brought their game of La Paume to England, court tennis has been the sport of kings and "gentlemen of leisure." The almost prohibitive cost of constructing a court, the expense to the player and the amount of time that he must devote to the game to acquire any degree of proficiency make court tennis the recreation of an extremely limited number.

But, in spite of the fact that the competition is so restricted, the record of Jay Gould, whose reign of twenty years as the national champion came to an end on Saturday, when he defaulted in the challenge round, has made the name Gould as outstanding in sport as it has been in the realm of finance.

Game's Greatest Player.

The Old World as well as the New pays tribute to the master as the greatest exponent of the game since Cardinal Richelieu officiated at the celebrated match between Louis XIII and Philip IV. Eustace Miles, George F. Covey and E. M. Baldfield, his outstanding contemporaries in England, all have yielded to the wizardry of his racquet, and the international play for the Bathurst Cup has demonstrated that there is no one in France who can touch him.

Gould has been the one absolute monarch in America, holding the sceptre of power in the throne room of the Racquet and Tennis Club, a replica of the famous Hampton Palace tennis court presented to Henry VIII by Cardinal Wolsey.

Court tennis is not only the diversion of the few. Even an understanding of the nature of the game is confined to a comparative handful. When it is realized that it is one of the most strenuous games played, calling for the maximum of stamina, just as much as does lawn tennis, Gould's amazing feat in keeping the title for twenty years can be more properly appreciated. No one who has not played the game or watched it for years can appreciate the full degree of Gould's skill.

Has Many Intricacies.

Court tennis, with its dedans, grille, penthouse, tambour, galleries and chases, is probably the most intricate physical game ever devised. It is a game bewildering with its complexities and calling for a variety of tactics that leaves the layman hopelessly befuddled. Not even a glossary would help him. The only way to understand court tennis is to see it over and over again with an interpreter. After he has done that for years the spectator is prepared to appreciate the artistry and generalship of a player like Gould, an artistry and generalship that have been developed through twenty-five years of devoted practice and study.

Champions may be born, but Jay Gould was made a champion. His father, the late George Jay Gould, willed that he should be one, and the best of teachers carried out his will from the time Jay Gould was twelve years old.

It did not take more than five years for him to distance his instructors and when he was seventeen they found that neither they nor any one else could teach Jay Gould court tennis. The royal game had a player to the manner born and bred.

ALLISON DANZIG.

TURF

It would be unfortunate indeed if the injury to Carlaris proved to be any more serious than to delay temporarily his shipment eastward. The colt's infected hock seems to have yielded to treatment, but a change in plans already has been made and the English-bred winner of the Coffroth Handicap will remain in Tijuana an extra fortnight.

Not only because of his injury does this appear to be a wise decision. Carlaris has trained and raced all winter in Southern California and has thrived in the salubrious climate. To send him on the long eastward journey only to arrive amid cold and wet weather in Kentucky might have disastrous results.

Eastern turf lovers are anxious to look over this son of Phalaris and Carnival and want to see him under colors at his very best. There is a romance and glamour about this colt which has shown such electrifying speed, as there is about every horse that beats everything that is sent against him by a wide margin and in record time. Those who have seen him in action proclaim him a great colt.

Rival for Pompey.

In the East we want to see him demonstrate his prowess against Pompey, Haste, Canter and the others we considered the best as two-year-olds. He is not likely to measure strides with all of them in the Kentucky Derby, for a lot of the Eastern three-year-olds will not be ready to parade at Churchill Downs.

He is not eligible to the Spring stakes hereabouts, but has been named for the rich three-year-old events at Saratoga Springs and doubtless will be nominated for the Autumn stakes that are still open. By midsummer the best of the easterners will be ready to try conclusions with him and his presence will add tremendously to the interest of the running of the three-year-old classics.

Cassidy on Florida Racing

Manager Luke Cassidy of the Miami Jockey Club, recently returned from Florida, is not at all perturbed over the movement to curtail activities at Hialeah next Winter.

"Miami wants racing," he said last week. "What opposition there is comes from the little real estate operators, who object to anything that is likely to divert dollars from their pockets."

As to possibilities of future competition he is not alarmed.

"You can't race out of season in Florida and that season is limited, with a very narrow margin on either end," he declared. "I cannot see any future for racing on the west coast. The visitors are of a type entirely different from those attracted to the east coast. The latter have money and the desire to spend it for diversion and excitement. On the other hand visitors to the west coast are there to escape northern Winters and to rest; they are not looking for excitement and racing has no attraction for the great majority."

CHAPMAN FINISHES THIRD

Pichione, Last Week's Winner, Is Fourth—Grenda Beats McBeath In Variety Match.

Vincent Madonna, Italian cyclist, pedaled to victory yesterday afternoon at the New York Velodrome in the Eddie Leonard Stakes, a thirty-mile motor-paced race, before about 8,000 fans. The Italian rider, getting on to the pace furnished by Frank Jeehan before any of his three rivals caught up with theirs, led from start to finish. He crossed the finish line in 45 minutes 19 1-5 seconds.

Frank Keenan, Boston rider, paced by Otto Miller, finished second and George Chapman, American motor-paced champion, who followed the pace of Jimmy Hunter and Charley Stein, was third. Dan Pichione, Providence rider, victor last week had to be content with fourth position.

Keenan, getting off in third position, moved into second place after half a mile had been covered, and several times as the event progressed challenged Madonna. The Italian, however, pulled away whenever Keenan became dangerous.

Chapman and Pichione Battle.

Chapman and Pichione had a battle for third position. The Providence rider rode third until four miles had been covered, when Chapman slipped into the position. Pichione was lapped by the field at fifteen miles and after five more miles Chapman began to weaken. At twenty-three miles the champion was forced to discard the pace of Hunter when the latter's motorcycle developed engine trouble, Chapman hooked on to the rear of Stein's motorcycle without losing his position.

Victor Hopkins, D enport (Ia.) cyclist, annexed his second successive victory of the season when he captured the ten-mile motor-paced race. Hopkins got away in the lead of the ten-mile test and never relinquished the position, crossing the finish line in 15 minutes, 12 seconds. Charley Jaeger, Newark youngster, closed with an exhibition of speed which brought him second position, and Frank Cozzolino, Newark, and Otto Petri, German cyclist, finished third and fourth respectively.

Grenda Takes Variety Race.

Alf Grenda, veteran Tasmanian, scored in straight heats over Alex McBeath, Australian rider, in their variety match race. Grenda showed the way to McBeath in the first heat at one mile. The time of the race was 2:45 and Grenda rode the last eighth mile in 13 1-5 seconds. The second heat of the test was an Australian pursuit race which required a re-start when Grenda experienced wheel trouble. Grenda overtook McBeath after covering two miles and three laps in 4:39 2-5.

GREENLEAF OPENS CUE MATCH TODAY

Meets Rudolph in Twelve-Block Handicap Pocket Billiard Clash at Dwyer's Academy.

Ralph Greenleaf arrived here yesterday from Philadelphia, where he registered a decisive triumph over Andrew St. Jean, and announced that he was in shape for his handicap pocket billiard match against Erwin Rudolph, which will open at Dwyer's Broadway Academy this afternoon. Greenleaf will play for 1,500 points against 1,250 for Rudolph in a test extending over twelve blocks.

Greenleaf has arranged a series of matches against the headliners in pocket billiards, with the intention of demonstrating that he is entitled to a meeting with Frank Taberski for the world's championship. Greenleaf held the title for five years and is making a determined drive to force Taberski into a title meeting before the season closes. He already has posted a forfeit of $2,500 to bind a championship match with Taberski, but as yet no word has been heard from Taberski.

A meeting of the billiard officials is scheduled to be held the latter part of this week in order to take action on the title challenge of Greenleaf.

FOOTBALL TO START AT COLUMBIA TODAY

Coach Crowley Will Direct Three Weeks' Drill—Veterans to Be on Hand.

Spring football practice at Columbia will start at Baker Field this afternoon under the direction of Head Coach Charles F. Crowley and his assistants. Goal posts and tackling dummies have been set up on the lower gridiron, where home games are played, and everything is in readiness for three weeks of intensive drilling.

Although many of the letter men and substitutes who will form the nucleus of the eleven next Fall are now engaged in other forms of athletic activity, Coach Crowley will have several of the 1925 regulars on hand for the Spring drills. Captain-elect Bill Madden and Mike Sesit, backfield aces, and Hick Brady, end, are among the men who have signified their intention of taking part in the workouts, while several of last season's reserves and a number of freshmen are also due to report today.

The coaching staff for 1926 includes Crowley and five assistants. Billy Murray as backfield coach, John Depler and Frank Brodil as line coaches and Bliss Price as junior varsity tutor are hold-overs from last year's staff, with Ray Wagner, former varsity end, added to aid Price with the jayvees. This year's Spring training period will be considerably shorter than the last one.

REISELT TO PLAY HERE.

Negotiations Opened With the New Holder of Three-Cushion Title.

Otto Reiselt, new holder of the world's three-cushion championship, is likely to be seen here in a special match shortly, it was announced yesterday by Henry Kline of the Strand Academy, who had just returned from Philadelphia where he conferred with the new titleholder. Reiselt finished first in the National Championship Three Cushion League, which has just closed, and his victory was decisive. He punctuated his triumph by setting a new world's record for the best game, running out fifty points in sixteen innings.

Reiselt has displaced Robert L. Cannefax as the new titleholder. Cannefax, who finished first last year, was barred for one season as the result of "conduct unbecoming a champion" in a match against Willie Hoppe in Chicago last Spring. Since then Cannefax has been forced to retire from billiards on account of ill health and now is making his home in Arizona.

BLOOM CHARGES BAN BY RADIO STATIONS

Says He and the Composers Are Kept From Broadcasting Reply to "Propaganda."

FIGHTS DILL-VESTAL BILL

He Declares It Is a Plan to Deprive Song Writers of Adequate Fees.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 11.—A charge that radio broadcasters are conducting a one-sided propaganda on the air to tear down the protection granted by the Constitution to authors and inventors was made today by Representative Sol Bloom of New York in a statement relative to efforts to have the Dill-Vestal bill enacted for amending copyright laws affecting musical compositions. Hearings have been conducted on this measure several days, before a joint committee on patents of the House and Senate, the broadcasters presenting witnesses last week, and will be resumed this week.

Mr. Bloom said that broadcasters had refused to permit any defense the composers might wish to offer on the air "in reply to the one-sided propaganda recently sent out urging support of the legislation under consideration."

"I have asked to be heard," he said, "as has Gene Buck, President of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers. Both of us, however, have met with a firm refusal. That needs no further comment."

Sees Price Fixing Attempts.

Mr. Bloom estimated that the stations licensed by the Government are worth $800,000,000 and "could not be bought for that." He added in part:

"The radio interests do not want collective bargaining through any association of composers. They prefer to deal with the individual composer, which means that one thing—one individual would receive hardly anything for his musical creation. • • •

"Congress is faced with the unique situation of having a business interest which on one hand can charge what it pleases for its services, endeavoring to have a price, and, mind you, a permanent one for all times, set as to what they shall pay for that which actually constitutes 90 per cent. of the service they are selling.

"The man who sings the song gets from fifteen to twenty-five times as much as the man who wrote it, which is a very sad state of affairs, to say the least. • • •

Fears Radio Patent Control.

"The broadcasters are slowly but surely reaching the point where they will have in one group complete control of all radio patents. When that is attained, will not these men reach out for still greater revenue and demand that the listener-in pay for 'sitting in'?

"The Federal Trade Commission, is investigating this pool of interests. That body's report will bring home to the people this fact more forcibly than any warning of mine.

"The members of the committees have been told broadcasters are being put out of business because of the demands of composers and authors. That is 'bunk.'

"The best answer is the figures of the Department of Commerce on the number of stations on the air and clamoring for licenses. These disclose that there are 533 licensed stations, with 530 applications on file for the eighty-nine wave lengths available. Applications are coming in at the rate of six to ten a day. They are actually fighting to get on the air."

RABBIS BACK RELIEF DRIVE.

Fifty Orthodox Ministers Offer Their Services in $5,000,000 Campaign.

Fifty rabbis, members of the Union of Orthodox Rabbis of America, at a meeting held at the Broadway Central Hotel yesterday, offered their services in connection with the campaign to raise $5,000,000 of the $15,000,000 national relief fund for the Jews of Poland, Russia and Bessarabia.

Rabbi Isaac Rosenberg, Chairman of the council of rabbis emphasized the importance of the work which is being undertaken and depicted the misery of many Jews in Europe. Other speakers were David A. Brown, National Chairman of the campaign; Rabbi M. S. Margolis and Felix M. Warburg, Chairman of the American Joint Distribution Committee. Mr. Brown said the campaign aimed to raise New York's quota within three years.

DROPS DEAD AFTER DANCE.

Cedar Rapids Youth Fails in His Sister's Arms.

Special to The New York Times.

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa, April 11.—"Had this dance lasted longer I'd have died," Charles Trefny, 21 years, said to his sister last night just after a fox trot came to an end. With this he gasped, stumbled and fell dead in his sister's arms.

A brother who was dancing just behind him failed in his effort to catch the dying lad, and a physician pronounced his death due to dilation of the heart, brought on by excessive exercise.

Trefny is the second person who has died on a local dance floor in the last few weeks. The other was a woman, and she dropped dead after her heart had collapsed at the conclusion of a Charleston.

MRS. GARVEY TELLS OF RAID.

Negro Leader's Wife Informs Police Dozen Men Broke Into Rooms.

Mrs. Amy Garvey, divorced wife of Marcus Garvey, negro leader now in the Federal prison at Atlanta, has asked the police of the West 135th Street Station to protect her from possible attack by a dozen men who, she says, broke into her rooms at 666 St. Nicholas Avenue early last Thursday morning and created general disorder.

Mrs. Garvey said that the raiders took away with them fifteen of the most interesting pages of the manuscript of "The Rise and Fall of Marcus Garvey," which she had been writing for some time.

Mrs. Garvey was unable to explain the raid but said that she feared the men might return.

PRISONER ENDED HIS LIFE.

Edward Brennan, 60 years old, who was found dead in a cell in the West 123d Street Police Station on Friday night a few hours after his arrest on a charge of grand larceny, did not die of a heart attack as had been supposed, but committed suicide by taking cyanide of potassium, it was announced yesterday by Dr. Charles Norris, Chief Medical Examiner.

Dr. Norris said that an examination of the body revealed the poison. How Brennan came to get it was not learned. When first booked he was searched by several detectives who found five gold watches and a number of stolen postal money orders on him.

A Postoffice Inspector asserted that Brennan answered the description of one of the robbers who held up the Pawtucket, R. I., post office last February and escaped with a large amount in stamps. He was captured when he gave a stolen money order to a jeweler for a $150 watch and then tried to pawn the watch. It was believed that he disposed of numerous stolen money orders in this way and that he kept the poison secreted to commit suicide when arrested.

Special to The New York Times.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., April 11.—To Mrs. Charles Messenger, 75 years of age, has been awarded a gold medal by the Twentieth Century Club of Goshen for rushing into a burning building and rescuing her great-grandson, 5 years of age.

The other members of the household had escaped at the height of the fire and supposed the boy had been taken out. Mrs. Messenger, being in doubt, groped her way to the second floor, where she found him asleep in bed and carried him to safety, but was so severely burned it was at first feared she would die.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

New Signs of the Times—Falling Money Rates and Rising Steel Output.

The unmistakable downward trend of money rates last week, when even three months' loans were offered at the lowest rate since the first week of last September—4½ per cent., as against 5 per cent. a month ago—was the first decided change which has occurred this year in the financial or industrial situation, outside of the stock market. Numerous separate explanations have been offered for this fall in rates, which was not foreshadowed in the earlier market of the year, among them the large gold importation from Canada and completion of the Treasury's extensive March financing, and some disposition has appeared not to connect it primarily with the Stock Exchange liquidation. Even the New York Reserve Bank's April bulletin remarks that "liquidation of loans to brokers and dealers does not release any large amount of funds for other uses, unless bank deposits are equivalently reduced"—which has not happened, possibly because the out-of-town banks which have cut down their Stock Exchange loans so sweepingly have left most of the proceeds on deposit in New York.

However this may be, the sudden removal of the lately urgent requisitions on the credit fund for purely speculative uses was bound to influence the general rate for money. Bank funds which could lately be loaned in all but unlimited quantity on Stock Exchange collateral, at a rate substantially above the charge for term accommodation, but which now find demand in that quarter shrunk to small proportions, must at least compete with other lenders in the general money market. It is not yet clear how far this process of return to easy money will be carried. The requisitions of general trade have yet to show themselves; when they come, they are likely to be modified, as they were throughout 1925, by the policy of "hand-to-mouth buying" which has become traditional. No other conclusion would seem to be certain than the inference that a distinctly and continuously lower rate for money must have great effect on the market for investment securities, old and new. In that respect, its influence on the maladjusted international balance ought to be favorable.

Of all the signs of the time which have conflicted with one another or with the popular inferences drawn from the break in stocks, the rise of the country's monthly steel production to the highest figure in its history has perhaps caused most perplexity. Under ordinary circumstances, Wall Street at least would draw altogether cheerful conclusions from the coincidence of such a phenomenon with bank clearings and railway freight traffic, which continue to surpass all previous records for the season.

One reason why that picture is at present contemplated with some reserve of judgment is that the present expansion in all three of these directions comes, not as a movement of recovery from inactive trade, but as sequence to a prolonged and remarkable period of activity. The other reason is based on past experience, which has proved that steel output and railway loadings and bank clearings sometimes reflect trade conditions of the past rather than foreshadow conditions of the future. Of this the notable case in point was 1920, when volume of railway traffic and value of checks drawn on the banks continued to "break records" up to and in some cases after reaction in the country's trade was visibly under way. Even in the Spring of 1923 and 1924, a great increase in steel production occurred when slow but continuous reaction was destined to mark the immediate trade future.

All this may give ground for caution in drawing inference even from what appears on its face to be evidence of continuing activity. But it provides no basis for unfavorable conclusions, unless and until there is evidence that this extremely large production and distribution means accumulation of unsold goods in the hands of producers or merchants, and of that there appears as yet to be no evidence. In 1923 and 1924, it was the steel trade which gave the first sign of reaction, and it did so by presenting plain evidence that the material produced was not going into the final consumer's hands but was accumulating in the yards of producers and middlemen. But that is precisely what the present movement in the industry does not appear to show; the steel trade reports practically no cancellation of orders, and more than the usual call for delivery under old contracts.

That general trade will continue indefinitely at the pace of 1925 is not to be supposed. The very fact of a "record-breaking" steel output in March may mean that actual consumers' requirements are being filled more rapidly and completely than had been the case in previous months; if so, nothing would be more natural than a slackening in purchases later on. But that is not what Wall Street calls "trade reaction" and it is not what Wall Street talked about when the stock market was collapsing.

FRENCH DEBT MATURITY.

Large Payment Due in May—No Difficulty Expected.

Copyright, 1926, by The New York Times Company. By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, April 11.—On May 20 occurs another maturity of the fixed-date public debt; it will aggregate 6,189,000,000 francs. Only half of this amount has given notice that cash payment is desired.

The proceeds of such payment are now expected to be mostly reinvested in defense bonds, as has always happened on similar occasions in the past. As matters now stand, the market anticipates no difficulty in meeting the May maturity.

LONDON DOWNCAST AT COAL DEADLOCK

Markets Hold Unexpectedly Well, but Sentiment Is Unfavorably Affected.

FAVOR 'GILT-EDGED' ISSUES

Fear That an Actual Stoppage of Production Would React on the London Gold Reserve.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 11.—The critical coal situation was a complete wet blanket to last week's markets, emphasizing holiday idleness and encouraging unfavorable views of values. At present the coal discussions threaten to end in a deadlock between the owners and miners, with governmental intervention apparently the only avenue of escape from a pitched battle, which could only result disastrously for the whole country.

This explains the relative firmness of gilt-edged securities which at all times of adversity satisfy the desire for safety. That advantage will be taken of this trend of investment instinct appears highly probable. There is talk of further early issues of investment securities, some carrying the Government's guarantee under the Trade Facilities act, some for the Colonial Governments and others more speculative but attractive, represented in foreign loans.

Markets Held Well.

Considering all circumstances of the industrial situation, the security markets, as a whole, remain wonderfully steady. The bears hesitate to make use of a position which is capable of developing surprisingly good or bad features, while holders of securities refuse to be frightened out. This results, consequently, in a condition of stagnation, holding possibilities of very sharp movements when the coal situation develops definitely for evil or good. There is little doubt that if an amicable settlement were to be effected the markets would revive rapidly, because the menacing coal situation has been present for months and its settlement would do much to improve the business outlook.

Indirectly, a fear of coal mining stoppage is influencing the money situation. It is still considered necessary to keep a tight control over the market with a view of supporting the bank rate, and such control is regarded more than ever necessary if the exchanges are to be kept from falling in the vent of dislocation of ous export trade by a coal strike.

Coal Dispute and Money Market.

The previous coal strike was of no concern to the money market, because it occurred when gold exports were controlled by official decree. Now, however, that a free gold market exists, it is possible to foresee disastrous effects upon our gold reserves in the case of a prolonged coal stoppage.

Currency notes outsanding at the end of the week aggregated £287,726,096, compared with £295,337,267 one week ago and £286,302,227 two weeks ago. The week's figure is the highest of the year to date, due mainly to the increasing needs of cash during the holiday season. The lowest of the year was £284,178,770 of the week ending Feb. 19.

REICHSBANK'S NEW GOLD CAME FROM NEW YORK

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, April 11.—The strain on the Reichsbank for discounts in the last week of March turned out to be only moderate, the outstanding total increasing not more than 121,000,000 marks. Advances, however, as a result of the reduced interest charge ran up from 5,000,000 to 77,000,000, and the increase of 646,000,000 marks in circulation was abnormally large. The bank's total circulation of 3,159,000,000 is the highest up to the present date.

As a result of this increase in note issues, the combined gold and exchange cover against the circulation fell from 79.9 per cent. to 62.4. The Reichsbank, however, added 41,930,000 marks to its gold reserve during the week. All but a small part of this was left on deposit abroad. It is understood that this instalment of gold was purchased in New York.

EXPECT NO TRADE REACTION

European Prediction of Little Reduction in American Trade Activity.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

AMSTERDAM, April 11.—The view of the American situation taken in this market is still negatively favorable. It is not believed that the recent severe break in the stock market will have any serious influence in disturbing trade. That there will be a moderate reduction in American trade activity this year is generally believed, but no serious reaction is anticipated.

The important factors bearing now on the American situation, as seen from this market, are the increasing ease in the New York money market and the evidence of large American production without any resultant inflation of credit.

German Prices Little Changed.

BERLIN, April 11.—The index of wholesale German prices for March is stated at 115.3, as against 118.4 in the preceding month.

LOWER MONEY HERE TO HELP EUROPEAN MARKET

Possible Effect on Bank of England's Gold—The British Trade Position.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

AMSTERDAM, April 11.—The past week's decline in the New York money rate is expected to influence the movement of capital to London in particular and to Europe in general, especially by insuring the retention of American balances on the London money market. It is therefore still believed here that the Bank of England will be able to increase its stock of gold.

No improvement seems yet to be visible in British trade, but some attention has been called to the fact that whereas before the war the greater part of the new loans issued in London were for foreign account, only £9,250,000 out of the $75,000,000 new issues in the first quarter of the year were for that purpose—which appears to show a greater demand for capital by home trade and industry. This should be a favorable indication.

It is also remarked that notwithstanding the decrease of 10 per cent. in the average prices of commodities in England during the past twelve months, unemployment has decreased. This contradicts the much-quoted opinion of Keynes, who has contended that British unemployment could be decreased only by the advance of commodity prices under the slow process of inflation.

INTERNATIONAL STEEL SYNDICATE IS DOUBTED

German Trade Organs Say England Favors Collaboration With America, Not Continent.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, April 11.—Regarding the prospects of establishing the proposed international steel syndicate, much skepticism now prevails. It seems to be evident that the first reports from Paris exaggerated the measure of agreement attained by the negotiators.

The Bergwerks Zeitung of Essen, organ of the steel industry, declares that the negotiations never got beyond the tentative stage, and have now been suspended because England prefers to collaborate with the American steel industry and thereby make herself independent of the Continental competitors. The Bergwerks Zeitung intimates that this will result in "war to the knife" between the Continental and the "Anglo-Saxon" group.

BANK OF FRANCE RETURN PERPLEXING TO PARIS

Movement of Loans to State Affected by Operations of Private Banks.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, April 11.—The statement of the Bank of France was more difficult than usual to analyze last week. Although there was no increase in advances to the State and although bills discounted decreased 830,000,000 francs, the circulation rose 726,000,000 to the highest recorded figure. The discrepancy is undoubtedly due to part of the increase in circulation at the bank's branches in the preceding week having been temporarily entered only under the item "sundries account."

The changes in advances to the Treasury are somewhat obscured by movements in the accounts of private banks with the Treasury, which are not made public. The leading deposit banks make a practice of keeping very large balances with the Treasury, but they regularly withdraw funds at the end of each month, and this accounts largely for the increase in the Bank of France circulation at those periods.

LITTLE CHANGE IN THE GERMAN TRADE STATUS

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, April 11.—In the present slow revival of trade, the German metal industries show little change, but emphasis is laid on the increasing activity of their foreign trade. In this February shows considerable further improvement over January. Exports of iron and ferro-alloys in February were 377,000 tons, against 241,000 in February of last year; of machinery 37,000 against 24,000.

Exports of coal in the same month were 1,379,000 tons, against 727,000 last year, while imports were only 423,000, against 727,000. The home and foreign sales of the potash syndicate in March were 139,118 metric tons of pure potash, as against 143,959 in March of 1925.

DUTCH LOAN MARKET ACTIVE

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

AMSTERDAM, April 11.—The Dutch market for new loans continues very active. Reports of emissions during the completed first quarter of the year show 93,000,000 guilders in new loans, as against 61,000,000 in the same quarter of the preceding year. In addition to this, 91,000,000 guilders of conversion loans were floated, bearing a lower interest rate than the securities redeemed.

Private issues were 52,000,000 guilders, against 47,000,000 in the first quarter of 1925 and 13,000,000 in 1924.

BERLIN CONTINUES IN HOPEFUL MOOD

Only Partial Recovery in Trade, but Money Continues Exceptionally Easy.

HOME AND FOREIGN LOANS

Very Large Increase in Issues of New German Securities at Berlin.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, April 11.—Optimism continues to spread in German business circles, under the influence of the settlement of the tax controversy, of abundant money and of more confident returns in the monthly reports of German trade banks. The Prussian Trade Ministry's survey is more favorable for the month than any in the past year, although it admits that the increase of manufacturing activity has been only moderate.

The survey states that there was no general improvement last month in the coal, steel or shipbuilding trades, and that the chemical branch was less active. But it reports increasing activity in such branches as motor car production, cutlery, spinning and weaving, leather, wood and building. Some of the electro technical branches also showed improvement.

The money market continues highly favorable. Immediately after the end of March it brought unusually large pressure on the credit market, money began to stream back into the open market. Borrowers in good standing are now getting day-to-day loans at 4 per cent. and a further reduction from the present 5 per cent. private discount rate is being discussed.

It is true that some apprehension arose during the week that the easy money period is approaching its end as a result of the extraordinary revival in the market for home capital and the large number of pending bond issues. The Federal bureaus and numerous cities are raising considerable amounts of domestic loans, with such success that the commercial organ, Handel und Industrie Zeitung, is publishing articles under the caption "Reaction Against Foreign Borrowing."

In the first quarter of 1926 bond issues in the home market aggregated 198,000,000 marks, against 144,000,000 in the whole of 1925, and issues for increased company capital have doubled month after month. Bankers, however, refuse to believe that this indicates material reduction in the supply of short-term credit. That, they seem to agree, can be expected only when industrial recovery has made further progress.

FRENCH STEEL OUTPUT FAR ABOVE LAST YEAR

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, April 11.—The iron output of France as now reported for February was 706,500 tons. This compares with 763,000 in January and with 637,000 in February of last year. The monthly average of 1925 was 706,000. Steel production in February slightly exceeded 630,000 tons, comparing with 661,000 in January, with 569,000 in February of last year and with a monthly average for 1925 of 618,000.

The reports of foreign trade in steel and iron show that during January and February imports of iron were 4,901 tons and exports 133,375 tons, whereas imports of steel were 13,902 tons, against 519,795 tons exported.

SHARP REACTION ON BERLIN STOCK MARKET

Ascribed to Rapidity of Recent Rise—Speculating in Austrian Paper Loans.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, April 11.—On its reopening, after the Easter holidays, the Berlin Boerse was firm, but it has since grown weaker and on Friday a very sharp decline occurred. The downward movement began merely with profit-taking, but the market's feeling is that reaction was undoubtedly due because the rise after the pause in the second part of February had been extremely rapid.

It is also stated that German operators have of late been actively concerned in the "bull gamble" in Austrian paper crown loans at Vienna, where these securities have been bid up on the basis of an alleged prospect of valorization. It is believed that this diversion of capital withdrew support from the Berlin Boerse. The Frankfurter Zeitung's index of Stock Exchange prices, based on 100 as of Jan. 2, 1925, shows for April 1 an average of 86.18. This compares with 58.31 at the beginning of the present year.

OUTLOOK FOR GERMAN CROP

Indications Better Than Average, but Not Up to Year Ago.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, April 11.—The Prussian Ministry of Agriculture reports that crop conditions in Germany as of April 1 are somewhat better than the average. The accompanying percentage index, however, shows them to be less favorable than a year ago.

In the index, in which 3 means "middling" and 2 means "good," wheat is rated at 2.9, against 2.6 in April, 1925. Rye, is figured at 2.9, against 2.8 a year ago.

NARROW MOVEMENTS ON PARIS MARKET

THE NEW TAX PROPOSALS

Strength of French Government Bonds Taken to Reflect Public Confidence in Fiscal Reform.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, April 11.—The markets both for securities and foreign exchange have fluctuated within very narrow limits during the past week. Influences bearing on both markets are conflicting. On the one hand the improving prospects for the balancing of the budget, now that the Briand Ministry has weathered the storm, continue to create a favorable impression. The temporary improvement in Belgian exchange has also influenced the franc.

On the other side, much attention is paid to the socialistic character of the new taxation, which is believed to be impeding business. The Treasury also, which lately was offering foreign currencies in order to support the franc, has withdrawn from the market. On the whole the stock markets have been weak, but with very small business, moving along the same lines as the franc.

The New Tax Proposals.

The new tax schedules, as applied to the Bourse, are certain to discourage trading. Under them the buyer of 100 shares of De Beers, for instance, will pay between purchase and sale 2,180 francs in tax and brokerage. On 100 Rio Tintos his payment will be 2,610 francs, on 100 Suez Canal shares 5,950 francs.

These are heavy taxes for high-priced shares, but conditions are still worse with the very low-priced shares, which will in some cases have to pay more than the cost of the shares themselves, the minimum tax being 5 francs. It is believed that the resultant paralysis of professional business on the Bourse will result in greatly decreased yield from the tax.

Recovery in French State Bonds.

The recovery in French Government bonds is generally ascribed to the vote for the new tax schedules, but it is taken also as illustration of the wonderful confidence of the French public in the final solution of the financial difficulties.

In financial circles it is hoped that the Senate will not sanction the proposed petroleum monopoly, which it is believed would create serious difficulties. Financial opinion is that notwithstanding the reorganization of the cartel Herriot will not attempt to take office again, at least until after the large Treasury obligations of May shall have been disposed of.

WATCHING FRENCH TARIFF.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

AMSTERDAM, April 11.—It is still believed in this market that the European trade outlook is not unfavorable. The financial situation is hampered, however, by the fall in francs, also by the tariff policy of the French Government. The increase, beginning April 1, of 30 per cent. in the French import tariff has met angry opposition from Italy, whose exports to France are believed to be prejudiced. Threats of reprisals have been made.

On the other hand, France is doing a better export business and is confronted with no unemployment at home. There is a feeling, however, that the continued activity in the French export trade has been mostly obtained through the declining value of the franc and that an unfavorable effect is bound to be produced through the movement of inland prices.

LONDON AND THE FRANC.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

AMSTERDAM, April 11. — Rumors were in circulation on last week's market that the Bank of England would help matters in the market for Belgian and French francs by gold exports. The story attracted little attention here. The financial situation at London is not considered strong enough to make any such intervention possible.

Furthermore, it is not believed that any financial help would be extended to the franc by London until the French debt payment has been settled.

NO GOLD INTO LONDON BANK

Week's Movement at Bank of England Very Small.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 11.—No gold was taken into the Bank of England during the past calendar week. Withdrawals amounted to only £60,000.

Of the gold taken out, £50,000 was sent to India and £10,000 to Holland.

STOCK AVERAGE ADVANCES.

Weekly "Index Number" 1½ Points Above Preceding Week.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, April 11.—Professor Irving Fisher's index number of weekly Stock Exchange prices, based on the week's fifty most active industrial shares and on the average for January, 1925, as 100, is 129 for the last week. This compares with the revised figure of 127.5 for the week before, 129.8 two weeks before, 141.8 three weeks before and 144.9 four weeks before.

The highest point reached thus far in 1926 was 135, for the first week in February; the average of a week ago was the lowest. The revised figure for the full month of March is 135.7 and for the quarter ending with March it is 145.3.

PREDICTS LARGE GRAIN PRODUCTION IN RUSSIA

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, April 11.—The official Moscow organ, Ekonomitcheskaya Zhizn, continues to write optimistically of Russia's crop prospects. It predicts that Russia's corn crop will be very large, because the area sown, which in 1925 exceeded the previous year by 2,000,000 acres, has been further increased. This increase in some respects threatens trouble, because the demand has not expanded correspondingly.

The same journal is pessimistic, however, about other Russian products. It states that flax culture is threatened by the fact that its purchasing power in goods is 33 per cent. lower than before the war, and states also that the cotton districts of Central Asia are endangered by the abnormal lowness of the water in the rivers and irrigation canals.

Among the reports on Russia's industrial resources, it is stated that Professor Gubkin, who has returned from inspecting the so-called magnetic field in the Province of Kursks, states that he has located sixteen to twenty million tons of workable magnetic ore and hematite.

LONDON DISLIKES BANK'S FAILURE TO GET GOLD

Fears Period in Which Recent Losses Might Be Recouped Is Passing.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 11.—The time is now rapidly slipping by during which gold might be expected to flow naturally to London, but none comes. The Bank of England still requires nearly £10,000,000 of gold to balance its foreign gold transactions for the period since the gold standard was restored, about a year ago. This loss would not matter were there any guarantee that gold will not flow out during the coming Autumn, but plans have to be laid so as to take into consideration the possibility of such action.

Normally, no active step to attract gold would be necessary for another few months, but a coal strike would probably hasten matters in this respect, and it is therefore considered surprising that discount rates for long maturities are now higher than those for short bills. The market will probably awaken suddenly to the dangers of this situation, but meanwhile it seems content with the short view, hoping for the best and shutting its eyes to the worst that may happen.

LONDON'S VIEW OF EUROPEAN SITUATION

Believes That Financial Position on the Continent Is Slowly Improving.

CONFIDENCE IN GERMANY

Chief Element of Doubt Is Still the Fiscal Difficulties of France.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 11.—Generally speaking, the European financial situation is regarded as slowly on the mend. Recovery, however, is hampered by high tariffs, which in the British view are quite unjustified in countries greatly weakened by the war and needing outside assistance. Hungary's example of concluding a commercial treaty with Austria might be followed with great advantage. There is hope that other trade agreements will soon be concluded, while eventually Europe as a whole will probably come once again to learn that freetrading intercourse is the shortest way to financial rehabilitation.

There is confidence in the German financial situation here. The recent decline in the German bank rate to 7 per cent., which was the second downward movement this year, clearly indicates monetary conditions which have in fact been developing for some months past. It is true that this relaxation results largely from inactive trade, but it arises also from the stronger position of the Reichsbank, whose gold holdings are now three times greater than two years ago. The present gold reserve is more than half the total note circulation, whereas the legal minimum is 30 per cent.

Reduced exports have turned Germany's adverse trade balance into a favorable one, while commercial banking figures show increasing activity and new capital more easily raised than in the last few months. By continuing the discouragement of foreign loans Germany is easing the strain on exchange, which must always be severe owing to reparation payments.

Some measure of unanimity appears at last to have been accomplished in regard to the French financial policy, but it is still quite impossible to view the French financial situation other than with serious misgivings. A country suddenly driven into heavy taxation cannot be contented. French finances are still very far from being disentangled. Taxes may be voted, but in a country like France it is another matter to collect them, so all estimates upon which the budget may be based may be easily falsified. It is felt, therefore, that considerable time must elapse before British confidence in France will be restored.

WEEKLY PRICE AVERAGE LOWEST OF THE YEAR

NEW HAVEN, April 11.—Professor Irving Fisher's index number of American commodity prices for last week, based on 100 as the average of 1913, is 150.7, comparing with 151.5 the week before, 151.7 two weeks before, 152.6 three weeks before and 153.3 four weeks before. This week's average is the lowest for the year to date, and also lower than any reached in 1925; the highest thus far this year was 159.7 on Jan. 20.

The highest weekly average reached in 1925 was 164.6, on Jan. 31, which was also higher than any reached in 1924; the lowest was 134.1, on May 2. The highest percentage since the war was 247, in May, 1920; the lowest, 130, in January, 1922.

Crump's British index number, as cabled for the past week, is 139.3, comparing with 138.8 a week ago, 140.6 two weeks ago, 140 three weeks ago and 140.1 four weeks ago. The highest Crump average thus far in 1926 was 146.7, in the week ended Jan. 9; last week's average was the lowest for the year to date, and also lower than any reached in 1925. For that year the highest was 166.5, on Jan. 10; the lowest, 144.4, on Dec. 31.

The index number of average Italian prices, compiled by the Chamber of Commerce at Milan, was 638 last week, as against 639.4 the week before, 639 two weeks before, 641.9 three weeks before and 643.5 four weeks before. This week's average is the lowest of 1926 to date; the highest was 660.8 on Jan. 8.

COTTON IS SWAYED BY WEATHER NEWS

Anxiety Is Felt Over Start of Crop, Because of Rains and Low Temperatures.

PLANTING IS BACKWARD

Shrinkage in Exports Indicate Consumers Are Limiting Their Purchases.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ORLEANS, La., April 11.—There has been very little change in the condition and prospects of the cotton market during the past week. Trading has been restricted to very moderate proportions owing to the unwillingness of traders to buy because of the generally accepted intention of farmers to plant about the same large acreage as last season and an equal indisposition to sell owing to the absence of pressure from holders of spot cotton, at least of tenderable grade. Also there is more or less anxiety as to the sort of start the crop will make because of the unfavorable weather which has been experienced up to date. As a result price fluctuations from day to day have been insignificant and the extreme spread between high and low points has been less than 30 points.

As the weather over the protracted Easter holidays was rather better than had been predicted, the first days of the week were characterized by a moderate decline in prices, which reached their lowest levels on Tuesday. Later, however, there was a return of bad weather, including both unseasonable low temperatures and an abundance of rain, which, according to the weekly weather report, as well as private advices received by the trade here, further delayed crop preparations over a large portion of the cotton country.

This return of bad weather, coupled with the admissions from people in the interior that very little planting has been done so far and that field work is very backward, was sufficient to cause nervousness on the part of those who had sold at the opening of the week, with the result that there was considerable covering as well as some trade buying. While many traders claim that a return of good weather would soon permit the recovery of all delays to the crop, it is still recognized that April is usually a cold month and so far there are no indications that the weather is changing for the better.

As a result of the covering and renewed anxiety as to the delay in crop preparations prices gradually improved during the second half of the week, although the improvement was rather in old crop months than in the new crop positions. Thus, while Friday's closing prices showed a net loss for the week of only 2 points on May and 6 points on July, the net loss on October was 18 points and on December 17 points.

Shrinkage in Exports.

The shrinkage in exports and the comparatively light takings by spinners indicate plainly that the consumers of manufactured cotton goods are limiting their purchases to actual needs, fearing a lower price later on, and the mills are following a cautious policy so as to avoid overstocking with goods that they may have to sell at lower prices later on.

There has been much talk recently of mill curtailment, and without doubt if the demand for manufacturers' goods does not soon pick up the talk will become a reality. As yet, however, there are no reliable reports that the mills have actually inaugurated curtailment to any extent. Among Southern mills certainly there has been little or no slowing down as yet, although spinners are undoubtedly preparing to adopt that alternative to prevent overstocking.

HOGS ARE CHEAPER BUT WEIGH HEAVIER

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, April 10. — Live stock prices are not satisfactory to farmers, as was expected some time ago. Cattle and lamb prices are working lower and hogs are irregular, recovering the loss of the previous week and closing well toward the best level. The average for hogs for the week of $12.05 was 35 cents better than the previous and $1.20 lower than a year ago. Top prices were $13.80 and they closed the same as a week ago.

While hogs are selling lower the fact that they are weighing around 250 pounds, 17 to 20 pounds more than last year, counts in favor of the farmer, owing to the increased weight which, in a measure, makes up for the difference in prices. At the same time packers are securing more product by slaughtering fewer hogs.

Cattle prices regained part of last week's break only to weaken again, although the dressed beef trade was better. Top prices on heavy steers were $10.75, yearlings $10.60 and fancy yearling heifers $10.25. The average of beef steers was $9.45 against $9.50 the previous week and $10.25 last year. Butchers' stock declined 25 cents and calves $1, with feed steers 25 cents lower.

California Spring lambs were on the market at $15.50 for 65-pound weights, against $17 last year. The top of fat lambs was $14.25 and average $12.80, or 50 cents advance for the week and $1.55 under last year. Sheep averaged $8.15, gaining 15 cents and compared with $7.75 last year.

The week's receipts of live stock were larger than the previous week, and with exception of hogs exceeded last year. Estimated receipts at Chicago for this week are: Cattle, 53,000; hogs, 125,000; sheep, 74,000, or about the same as last year.

Trade in Land Relatively Light.

CHICAGO, April 11.—Speculative holders of land have liquidated freely and shorts have covered. Stocks are accumulating as the make is heavy, as domestic and export business in all hog products is comparatively light. Hams are ½ to ½ cent lower on heavy weights and dry salted bellies are ½ cent higher. Lard prices are 20 to 22½ cents lower than a week ago, with short ribs up 5 cents with bellies 40 to 57½ cents higher.

Weeks Primary Grain Receipts.

CHICAGO, April 11.—Primary receipts of wheat for the week were 1,221,000 bushels, last year 1,797,000. Corn receipts, 3,770,000 bushels; last year, 2,132,000. Wheat shipments this year, 2,332,000 bushels; last year, 1,366,000. Corn shipments this year, 1,460,000 bushels; last year, 3,634,000.

COTTON BOLL WEEVIL EMERGENCE IS LIGHT

Decrease Is Shown, However, in Sales of Fertilizer in the Planting Region.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ORLEANS, La., April 11.—A Government report on the emergence of boll weevils from hibernation, issued last week, showed that fewer weevils had emerged than was the case last year, except in Louisiana. This led to the conclusion that the initial infestation for the coming season would probably be light, except possibly in the lower Mississippi Valley. While the character of this report was such as temporarily to halt a tendency toward recovery in cotton prices, the actual effect on the market was slight and short-lived.

Of more serious import, however, was the report issued by Secretary Hester of the Exchange here on the sale of fertilizers for the eight months of the season to the end of March. This report showed a marked decrease in sales during March, compared with the corresponding month last year, indicating that the bad weather during that month had checked the tendency of farmers to prepare for large planting. It is true that the total sales for the eight months to the end of March showed a fair gain over last season, but the excess was very much smaller than it was a month earlier.

STEEL BUYING RUNS AT A LIGHTER PACE

But It Has Been So Heavy for Several Months Past That a Let-Up Seems Natural.

NEW HIGH IN PRODUCTION

PITTSBURGH, April 11.—Reports of decreases in the volume of steel buying have grown more prevalent, and it appears now that in the majority of finished steel products the buying is running at a lighter pace this month than last. Since buying was somewhat heavier in March than in February and the reported decreases are not large, it may be taken that the volume is still quite good from a long range comparison. It must be noted, also, that this period of steel activity has been unusually protracted, so that the trade has gotten keyed up to look for a turn and it does not take much to influence opinion.

No volume of buying could be expected sufficient to maintain mill operations at the recent rate, for steel production has made two new records, having had the highest output for a period of months and having attained just recently the highest operating rate ever known. It would require very exceptional conditions to create such a demand for steel, and exceptional conditions are not present. The consuming trades do not as a whole appear to be especially active, and indeed an outstanding feature of the recent steel tonnage is the fact that so much steel is absorbed with so little show of effort and no sign of strain.

Production of steel ingots in March made a new high record for all time. With 4,491,699 tons produced in twenty-seven working days, the daily rate was 166,359 tons, passing by 2.8 per cent. the previous record made in March, 1924, 161,796 tons daily.

The daily rate in the five months through March was 158,776 tons, while the best previous performance for such a period was the rate of 150,976 tons from February through June, 1923. Thus the previous five-month record has been broken by just 5.2 per cent.

All the circumstances indicate that production will decrease only moderately in the next two or three months, and since in the past there was always a marked decrease after a pulge, output records for six, seven and eight months are likely to be broken by greater margins than the 5.2 per cent. just shown for the five-month period.

The steel industry has gotten nothing out of this movement but the tonnage. It has not been able to advance prices, although in some lines, particularly plates and wire products, prices have been quite low, and it is now faced with the danger that, since prices have merely held during a period of exceptional heavy buying, they may suffer when buying grows lighter. Sellers are endeavoring to devise new means of attracting business short of granting special price inducements.

HEAVY WHEAT CROP SEEMS ON THE WAY

Indications, Up to Now, Are That the Yield Will Exceed the 5-Year Average.

HESSIAN FLY SCARE BEGINS

Outlook Is Wonderful in Southwest, but Cold Chills the Grain in Northwest.

CHICAGO, April 12.—Winter wheat prospects are such that the trade on the whole is disposed to consider the Government report of conditions on April 1 of 84.1 as low, and with favorable weather it will improve materially, so that unless there is a serious set back in the Middle West, where conditions are lowest in the country, a crop that will equal if not exceed the five-year average yield of 585,000,000 bushels is expected.

The Government report is interpreted by Chicago statisticians as showing 530,000,000 bushels, while one statistician says that it is easy to figure 545,000,000 bushels by using an average based on previous years. In April last year the Government figured prospects at 576,000,000 bushels, but drought conditions in the Southwest cut the yield so that final returns were only 454,000,000 bushels.

A Good Outlook in the South and West.

Conditions at present are materially different as compared with a year ago. The Southwest has a good promise with a fair supply of moisture, due to recent snow and rains. Indications are that conditions there will have to be changed decidedly to prevent raising one of the largest crops on record. Conditions there are fairly high, 87 to 92, Texas having 92. They are also high on the North Pacific Coast, with 93 for Washington.

Kansas, with a condition of 87, allowing for an average abandonment of acreage, has a prospect of 175,000,000 bushels or more and with perfect conditions to harvest its record of 180,000,000 bushels in 1914 may be exceeded. Oklahoma and Texas have a like prospect and may raise close to 100,000,000 bushels. The big wheat crop, with remunerative prices, would mean a great deal to farmers west of the Missouri River.

In the group of States east of the river Winter wheat conditions range from 71 to 77, all being below the average. The season there is late and only perfect weather can enable them to secure a crop in excess of that of last year, when they raised 163,000,000 bushels. Grain traders in Chicago and the Southwest are optimistic over wheat crop prospects and have inflated their estimates to figures that can only be secured by perfect conditions in all sections.

Uneasiness is felt over prospects for the Spring wheat crop in the Northwest, as the weather remains cold and little seeding has been accomplished. There is yet time to get in a good-sized acreage between now and the middle of May, so one of the best-posted men on Northwestern conditions says, and should there be a good supply of moisture, a large crop will be raised.

Present indications are for no increase in the Spring wheat acreage, and should the crop of 230,000,000 bushels be 15,000,000 bushels less than last year, and for a possible 820,000,000 bushels of Winter wheat crop, which seems possible at present, there would be 850,000,000 bushels of all wheat, compared with 839,000,000 bushels last year, which was a small yield, and a five-year average of 837,000,000 bushels. In 1923 the harvest was 857,286,000 bushels and in 1919 it was 967,979,000 bushels, while a record wheat crop of 1,025,801,000 bushels was raised in 1915.

A Hessian Fly Scare Begins.

A feature of the Kansas wheat crop situation to which attention is called by the Kansas State report, needs close watching by the grain trade. It refers to the infestation of Hessian fly as being much greater after seeding last Fall than it was in the Fall preceding the 1924 harvest. In some south central counties field examinations on acreage containing much volunteer wheat or early seeded fields show as many as ten or twelve flies in the flaxseed stages this Spring. Weather conditions during the egg-laying time and during the hatch of the first Spring brood, will have much to do with the amount of this year's fly damage. Present moisture conditions are about as good as they were two years ago.

A. H. WIGGIN BECOMES HEAD OF CHASE BANK

Assumes Today Chairmanship of Consolidated Institution, the Second Biggest in Country.

WAS CLERK 40 YEARS AGO

Became an Executive in Boston at 29—Achieved Success Here and Was a Power in War Years.

Albert H. Wiggin, who began his business career as a bank clerk in Boston forty years ago, "at a little something over nothing a week," becomes today the head of the Consolidated Chase National Bank, the second largest in America.

The new institution, which is a consolidation of the Chase National Bank and the Mechanics and Metals National Bank, has combined resources of more than one billion dollars, exceeded only by the National City Bank, also of this city. Mr. Wiggin is Chairman of the Board of Directors of the consolidated institution, and also of the Chase Securities Corporation, one of its subsidiaries. He has a record of hard work and consistent devotion to duty, says The Associated Press. He was born in Medfield, Mass., Feb. 21, 1868, the son of the Rev. James Henry and Laura (Newman) Wiggin, the father being a Unitarian minister in that town. His early education was received in the Dwight School and the English High School of Boston. He was graduated from the latter in 1885.

At once he entered the Commonwealth Bank in Boston as a clerk. So quickly did he learn, that in 1891, he became Assistant National Bank Examiner in the Boston district. Three years later he was appointed assistant cashier of the Third National Bank. At 29 he left this institution after a three-year service to accept the Vice Presidency of the Eliot National Bank of Boston. This position he held until he left the Massachusetts city in 1899 to become Vice President of the National Park Bank of New York.

Mr. Wiggin remained with the National Park Bank for five years and was also associated during that period with the Mutual Bank and the Mount Morris Bank as Vice President. These connections were terminated in 1904 when he went to the Chase National Bank as Vice President and director. His selection as one of the organizers of the Bankers Trust Company in 1903 was a recognition, at 35, of his banking ability by the older bankers of the city, with many of whom he was associated in this work.

His position with the Chase National Bank did not limit his interest in the banking activities of the city. In addition to acting as a director and a member of the Executive Committee of the Bankers Trust Company and the Guaranty Trust Company, he was active on the boards of the Astor Trust Company, the Liberty National Bank, the National Bank of Commerce and the Union Exchange National Bank, until the passage of the Clayton act rendered it impossible for him to retain these directorships simultaneously with his major interest, the Chase National Bank, of which he assumed the presidency on Jan. 11, 1911.

Widens Bank's Field.

In the years prior to Mr. Wiggin's advent the Chase had developed as a banker's bank, with more emphasis placed on increasing its clientele among correspondent banks than upon direct relation with commercial and industrial enterprises. Mr. Wiggin, while cultivating the cordial relations which existed between the Chase and other financial institutions, made it also a bank of industry, manufacture and business. Deposits were increased from $54,000,000 in 1904 to more than $564,000,000 at the close of 1925. In January, 1918, on the retirement of A. Barton Hepburn, Mr. Wiggin became Chairman of the board.

Despite the exacting nature of his duties as head of the Chase National Bank and affiliated institutions, Mr. Wiggin has found time during his busy life to serve on the directorates of about twoscore financial, industrial and public utility corporations and to hold other positions of trust and responsibility. His directorates include such institutions as the American Express Company, American International Corporation, American Locomotive Company, American Sugar Refining Company, Armour & Co., Duquesne Light Company, Inspiration Copper Company, International Paper Company, Mack Trucks, Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, Montana Power Company, Pacific Coast Company, Philadelphia Company, Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company and several others.

Mr. Wiggin's War Service.

Mr. Wiggin, as Chairman of the Clearing House Committee at the outbreak of the war in 1914, was asked, contrary to custom, to remain in office for another year. It was under his leadership that the sum of $100,000,000 was raised in 1914 for the protection of New York city's debt maturing in London at that time. In 1914 also he was Chairman of the Gold Fund Committee which successfully adjusted the problem confronting American business through the demoralization of the foreign exchange market.

When the cotton industry was threatened with ruin at the beginning of the war Mr. Wiggin was one of two New York members of a committee in charge of the nation-wide cotton loan which prevented the collapse of that vital American industry. He also served on the Central Liberty Loan Committee. In addition to his public and private duties pertaining to banking Mr. Wiggin accepted the call of United States Fuel Administrator Garfield to become fuel administrator of New York State during the trying winter of 1917-18, when an influenza epidemic was sweeping the State and other sections of the country.

Mr. Wiggin was married Oct. 4, 1892, to Jessie Duncan Hayden of Boston. They have two daughters. While a member of many up-town clubs, he seldom visits them.

In the banking world Mr. Wiggin is known as "a man of a million friends." Intimate associates in its various fields of activity describe him as a great organizer and an inspiring leader, quick in decision and unerring in judgment.

BANKERS TO WORK FOR M'FADDEN BILL

Will Urge Individual Senators to Vote for Measure as Passed by the House.

OBJECT TO AMENDMENTS

Passage of the McFadden bill by the United States Senate will be urged on individual Senators by the bankers of the country at the instance of the American Bankers Association, according to Thomas B. Paton, general counsel for the association. The bill amends the Federal Reserve act and the association is eager for its enactment as it was passed by the House, without the changes in it as subsequently reported to the Senate.

These changes include the addition of a rider providing for indeterminate charters for Federal Reserve Banks and omission of two provisions in the House bill, known as the Hull amendments, aiming to prevent further spread of branch banking and to create equal rights between State and National banks as to branch banking privileges in places where this type of banking now exists.

"There is fear on the part of many bankers," said Mr. Paton, "that the rider will inject controversial questions which will prove fatal to the bill and render fruitless all the efforts which have been expended in its behalf. Our association is on record in favor of the indeterminate charter for Federal Reserve Banks, but as a separate proposition and not coupled with other amendments to the Federal Reserve act.

"We urge retention of the Hull amendments for two reasons. First, these amendments, which deny city branches or any branches whatever to national and State bank members of the Federal Reserve System in States which do not, at the time of the approval of the act, permit branch banking, even though branch banking may hereafter be permitted by these States, were the compromise upon which our members were brought to support the bill.

"Second, the best opinion obtainable is that the bill will not be accepted by the House without the Hull amendments. Therefore, aside from urging the amendments as a matter of association policy, they should be urged upon the Senate to insure the success of the bill, for, if the Senate rejects them there is danger that the entire bill will fail.

"The Senate Committee has inserted a provision, not in the House bill, that if a national bank has one or more city branches in a State which prohibits branches, any other national bank in the city may have the same number of branches. The complications and uncertainties which would follow this provision afford additional reason why our members should urge upon their respective Senators the rejection of the amendment and enactment of the branch bank provisions as contained in the House bill."

TRADE ORGAN ON STOCK MARKET AS BAROMETER

"It was a hypothesis of the past," The Iron Age points out editorially, "that the stock market was a barometer of business, its rises and falls preceding those of business by some months. That hypothesis often was found to be sound. It is certain, however, that during the last year the stock market has not been so much a barometer foreshadowing industrial prospects as it has been a mirror reflecting industrial events, and reflecting them with more or less distortion. The rise in the stock market in the latter part of 1925 did not have any adequate industrial foundation and certainly it did not correctly foreshadow anything. It is a reasonable inference that the decline in the stock market in the first quarter of 1926 is equally devoid of any economic meaning.

"The rise in the stock market that happened in 1925 was partly founded, soundly, on bringing prices into time with dividend yields. It was largely founded, however, and especially in the later stage, on senseless vagaries in respect to the benefits to accrue from splits, melons, mergers, &c., and the inveigling of thoughtless people into buying shares whereof they knew nothing, but which they hoped to sell to other persons, equally ignorant, at an advance in the course of a few days. Speculative pools helped things along.

"Any kind of bull market is bound to come to an end, but one of that kind is sure to come to an early end. There is an inevitable day when the pools no longer find customers, when there are no more speculative persons to be seduced. The exigencies of liquidation then develop a slump. This need have no connection with real business beyond the timidity that fear of the unknown may produce.

"We think, as we did in January last, that such halt or recession of business as there has been is mild and is associated with the previous overbuying of consumers' goods on credit. Such a condition requires a halting now and then to enable people to catch up with their obligations. In our domestic economy we do not see anything immediately unsound."

HONDURAS MINING INCOME.

The New York and Honduras Rosario Mining Company reports for 1925 net earnings of $480,709 after expenses, depletion, depreciation and taxes. Income from operation was $1,697,847, while expenses totaled $957,118. Depreciation, depletion, etc., was $232,477 and Federal taxes $50,993. After dividends of $400,000 surplus was $80,709.

According to the consolidated balance sheet current assets for 1925 were $2,591,623, including cash, $34,457; loans receivable with accrued interest, $100,292; bullion and broken ore on hand and in transit, $340,718; United States securities, $472,356; and materials and supplies, $247,461. Current liabilities reached $278,038.

WABASH LINE SHOWS RAPID RECOVERY

Year's Net of $7,946,437 Equal to $6.53 on Common Against $2.74 in 1924.

GROSS REVENUE $69,910,000

Road Holds 68% of Ann Arbor's Stock, J. E. Taussig, President, Reports.

The complete pamphlet report of the Wabash Railway for 1925 made public yesterday shows a rapid recovery by the road since its reorganization in 1915. Net income at $7,946,437 is equivalent, after allowing for dividends of the preferred A and B stocks, to $6.53 on the common, compared with $2.74 the year before, when net totaled $3,474,949.

Gross operating revenues for the year were $69,910,300, an increase of $4,129,571 over 1924. Operating expenses were $51,060,423, against $50,289,417. The 1925 ratio of operating expenses to revenue was 73.07 per cent., as compared with 76.46 per cent. in 1924, a decrease of 3.39 per cent.

In his general remarks to stockholders President J. E. Taussig reports that the company's holdings of the capital stock of the Ann Arbor Railroad, of which the Interstate Commerce Commission permitted it to acquire control, amounted to 66.9393 per cent. at the close of 1925.

The statement of the Ann Arbor for 1925, which was issued with that of the Wabash, shows net income of $459,[illegible], or an advance of $122,822 from the $[illegible] reported in 1924.

Mr. Taussig, as President also of the subsidiary, informs stockholders that the new car ferry of the Ann Arbor contracted for in 1924 and placed in service in February, 1925, has resulted in an increase of the number of cars ferried from 65,948 in 1924 to 80,272 in 1925. Service is between the ports on the west bank of the lake and Frankfort, Mich. The Ann Arbor's ratio of operating expenses to gross revenues declined from 77.56 in 1924 to 75.64 in 1925.

FOUNDRY IRON AT $19 A TON

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, April 11.—Pig iron prices in the Mahoning and Shenango valley market made a remarkable record by holding one level for almost five months, $21 for Bessemer, $20.50 for foundry and $20 for basic, f. o. b. furnaces, with $1.76 freight to Pittsburgh.

The market had been quiet for several weeks, lacking any test, until this week, when purchase of 5,000 tons of foundry iron by the Standard Sanitary Manufacturing Company occurred at $19, representing a downright drop of $1.50. Bessemer became quotable on general principles at $20 and basic at $19, there being no actual transactions to make the test.

Heavy melting steel scrap has weakened somewhat more. There has been no mill buying for several weeks and the market is made by dealer buying at $16.50 to $17.50, according to delivery point. The decline since the first of the year runs a trifle over $2.

WEATHER UNSETTLES BUYING IN THE WEST

But Traders Are Hopeful and Better Rail Facilities Account for Small Stock Orders.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, April 11.—Weather conditions have had more to do with unsettled buying than any other factor. Trade leaders are getting over the scare caused by the sharp break in securities and no such break is expected in commodities values, as they have been deflated gradually and are around 3 per cent. lower than a year ago. It would not be out of line for some reduction in general activity after a long period of more than the average of good business; it is not to be expected that buying will continue heavy all the time, a breathing spell being necessary.

With no wide stocking on the part of consumers and distributors in general, there is a situation in the West where little or no uneasiness is felt as to the future, even though some slowing down in buying of commodities is to be expected, as conditions now and a few years ago are changed.

With the most efficient transportation system, there is no necessity for buying in advance of requirements to have supplies on hand as needed, as the adjustment of supply to requirements is such that manufacturers and merchants can buy more frequently and get goods within a few days, where long periods of uncertainty previously prevailed.

In the steel industry, with mills operating at capacity, it is fair to expect that any change will be in recessions in buying and consumption, although there are a few signs of a letting down at present. Competition for business between mills in the Chicago districts and those in Youngstown has become severe and pig iron values are off $1 per ton, to $23 for No. 2 foundry in Chicago.

Active buying, production and shipments have been on of late and eight out often merchant stacks here are in operation, with one more to become active within two weeks. Railroads are buying track supplies fairly, but new orders for cars are scarce. The Pere Marquette Railroad bought 850 freight cars from Hamilton (Ont.) builders. Inquiries are out for 500 flat cars. Car orders for March exceeded 1925.

Sheet mills which slowed down recently owing to weather conditions are now working at around full capacity with books well filled with orders.

Coal buying increased in a few instances and some varieties are held more firmly. Automobile sales by retailers were retarded by bad weather, but where conditions were favorable more cars were disposed of. Consumption of fuel oil is larger than usual for this season and values are strong. Building materials and building operations have had a delay owing to bad weather, but indications are for an active season in construction work.

A fairly easy money market exists in the West, with lessened requirements from nearly all interests, the rush for the monthly settlements and tax adjustments being over. Call rates in Chicago held at 4½ per cent. and time funds were 4¾ to 5¼ per cent. A decided drop occurred in loans of the Seventh Federal Reserve Bank for the week, with an increase in gold and deposits. The ratio of reserve to deposit liabilities was 71.8, against 65.1 the previous week, 74.2 last year and 81.6 percent. two years ago.

SIZING UP STEEL OUTLOOK.

Shading in Sheets Prevails and Slow-Down Is Looked For.

PITTSBURGH, April 11.—From week to week there is little news as to prices in steel, the level being so steadily held. This week plates are found to be somewhat stiffer, it being claimed 1.90c is the minimum in the general Pittsburgh district, against 1.85c recently possible. Also, it is said that certain contracts in wire products favorable to buyers have been canceled as to unspecified portions, leaving the buyers involved to pay the regular market.

On the other hand, the shading in sheet prices has spread somewhat, and as sheet demand is running lighter than the average of the past few months the trend is likely to continue. Also, there are reports that concessions on good sized orders for cold rolled strips are somewhat more prevalent.

Even with five months of exceptionally heavy shipments of steel there is no evidence of any accumulation in buyers' hands, and as stocks have regularly developed in the past in such circumstances, the indication is that consumption in the past five months has been at a greater excess over any previous pace than the excess shown by the production statistics.

The steel producing trade has no momentum of its own by way of an accumulation of shipping orders. There are millions of tons of obligations, but the bulk of such business shipment cannot be made until delivery is specified.

Buying of automobile steel in general seems to have been decreasing slightly for several weeks, but it is still quite heavy by a long-range comparison. There are some indications that steel buying by the agricultural implement trade has been at an even higher rate in the past few weeks than formerly, though this is not taken as any augury that that trade will avoid at least a little seasonal slowing down in the Summer.

In freight car buying there is another week with no important orders, the last business of consequence having been placed a month ago. Some interesting inquiries are in the market, however.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE RATES.

Except for a continuance of the nervousness in French and Belgian francs, which has been a part of the business in these documents for some time now, European exchanges exhibited a fair degree of strength last week. The fluctuations in the francs were again the result of the financial and political situation in both countries, which last week included a deflection in the French Cabinet, and an increase in circulation of the Bank of France, while in the Belgian the dragging along of the credit negotiations for stabilization was a factor. Sterling was firm, moving over a narrow area, while the Italian lire reflected the support accorded it by a Government agency here when news of the attack on Mussolini passed over without any excitement. Scandinavians, Spanish, Holland and Swiss were slightly higher. Far Easterns and South Americans reacted, some to new lows for the year. The Canadian dollar went to a premium for the first time since last October on anticipated increase in exports with the opening of navigation.

The Government has contracted for the lease of the entire building, which is to be erected on Congress Street, between Morgan and Aberdeen Streets.

The bonds are dated May 1, 1926, and will be due Nov. 1, 1936. Operation of sinking fund beginning May 1, 1927, will reduce the issue to less than $600,000 on or before maturity. TRADE OUTLOOK IN GRAINS.

Less Than a Month's Consumption Demands for Wheat In View.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, April 11.—Elevator interests, who have the 21,000,000 bushels of cash corn in store and afloat in Chicago sold for May delivery, are, in some instances, buying in their May hedges and replacing them in July at ¾ to 4 cents premium for the latter.

It is intimated by several of the largest elevator operators that they would prefer to have the cash corn moved out soon after the opening of lake navigation, as they believe that with a big wheat crop in the Southwest there will be more money made in handling wheat than in storing corn.

The International Harvester Company, which has bought more than 1,500,000 bushels of cash corn at 81 a bushel in exchange for implements, is in the market for elevator storage room for the cash corn, which they expect to pay for in May, June and July. In Chicago they will have to pay the regular storage rates, more than ½ cent a bushel per month.

It is understood that considerable outside storage room will be available, possibly at lower rates.

Those who are bearish are looking forward to May liquidation by longs, which should start within the next two weeks.

TO OFFER $1,500,000 SHOE STORE STOCK

Feltman and Curme Plan New Financing—Chain Business Growing.

Within a few days an issue of $1,500,000 of 7 per cent. cumulative preferred stock of the Feltman and Curme Shoe Stores Company will be offered by Merrill, Lynch & Co., who are heading the selling group making the offer. Price of the stock will be $110 a share and accrued dividend, which will include a warrant to purchase one share of Class B common stock at $25 a share at any time not later than Sept. 1, 1930.

This financing is effected by outstanding capitalization of $1,800,000 of preferred stock and 98,000 shares of Class A common stock of no par value. Of the Class B common stock 50,000 shares are authorized and reserved for conversion of the warrants.

The Feltman and Curme organization, which began with one store in 1907, now operates a chain of seventy-three shoe stores in forty-six cities from coast to coast.

In a letter to the selling group Arthur A. Curme, President of the company, said:

"Sales have increased from $150,846 in the first full year of operation to $9,154,855 in 1925. At the same time net profits, before taxes, have grown from $931 to $500,000. Net profits, after taxes, as reported for 1925, were equivalent to 4.63 times the annual dividend requirements on the present issue of preferred stock and indicated a balance of $3.89 a share on the outstanding common stock. The company has paid dividends on the old common stock in every year since 1912, and in 1925 payments at the rate of $2.50 a share on the new common stock were inaugurated.

"The directors and myself feel highly optimistic over the future for the business and present plans call for the opening of about twenty additional stores in the chain."

ATTACK INTERSTATE COMMERCE BILL

FORESEE SECTIONAL BIAS

Two Other Measures Before the Congress Are Upheld by the Association.

Two bills now pending in Congress have been approved by the Merchants' Association, upon recommendation of its Transportation Committee, while a third bill was disapproved, according to C. S. Keene, director of the American Tobacco Company, and Chairman of the committee.

The contested bill is one introduced by Senator Smith of South Carolina, which provides for regional appointment of Interstate Commerce Commissioners, increasing their number from eleven to thirteen and dividing the country into seven distinct groups for purposes of selecting the members.

"Obviously, this legislation," the committee report states, "if enacted, will establish a precedent that may result in the Interstate Commerce Commission being a body that acts along sectional lines, and will be divided in its opinions, inasmuch as Commissioners from the territorial divisions, under the language of this bill, might reasonably be supposed to represent those sections and to have a leaning in the direction of the complainants from the sections they represent very much as is the case in both branches of Congress."

One of the bills the association approved permits shippers to recover the difference between a greater charge for a through rate on a shipment than the aggregate of the local charges between the same points. Heretofore shippers have been required to prove that the through rate charge was unreasonable or discriminatory before they could recover. The second bill to be favored by the association permits the Interstate Commerce Commission to cease publication of sailing dates and other information relating to schedules of vessels engaged in foreign trade, when such vessels are documented under the laws of the United States. The Commission had asked to be freed from this function, which costs annually more than $20,000 and takes up much valuable time that might be devoted more profitably to other duties.

COMMODITY PRICES.

Downward Trend Continued in Majority of Cash Articles—Some Advance, Others Held Firm.

The downward sweep in values continued to predominate in the trading in cash staples last week. This reaction paralleled the easier tendency registered in the primary markets, although there were a few exceptions to the softer tone.

Of the twenty-five articles in the subjoined list, eleven revealed losses, eight were unchanged and but six advanced beyond the previous week's finals. Declines were found in flour, butter, lard, mess pork, lead, copper, zinc, tin, silk, coffee and rubber. Steadiness prevailed in sugar, family beef, iron, steel billets, printcloths, hides, gasoline and crude oil, and improvements scored in wheat, corn, rye, oats, spot and cotton.

62 WERE CONVICTED IN BANKRUPT FRAUDS

324 Indicted, Too, in 10 Months Association of Credit Men Reports.

23 ARE FOUND GUILTY HERE

Courts and Federal Attorneys Are Praised for Cooperation in Protecting Merchants.

In the ten months ended March 31 the National Association of Credit Men had obtained sixty-two convictions and 324 indictments on charges involving criminal acts in bankruptcy proceedings, according to a report issued for distribution today by J. H. Tregoe, Executive Manager. Of the convictions, twenty-three were obtained by the association's metropolitan district office in New York City, which has accepted 197 cases. Four convictions were obtained in March.

The report is being issued to subscribers who raised $1,000,000 toward the association's Credit Protection Fund. It shows that in March throughout the country the Credit Protection Department obtained fifteen convictions and fifty indictments and has 471 cases and 258 indictment proceedings pending. The department has accepted 653 cases since the fund was raised.

In the association's Eastern division, which includes the Atlantic Coast States, forty-two convictions were obtained in the past ten months and ten convictions in March. A total of 338 cases was accepted in this division.

In the central division, which includes the States embraced in a quadrilateral formed by Texas, Alabama, Ohio and Montana, twenty convictions were obtained in the ten-month period and five in March. Cases accepted numbered 317. In discussing the report, Mr. Tregoe said:

"The courts and the United States Attorneys have supported our investigation work so satisfactorily that the bankrupt crook has thought twice before he has attempted a violation of the Bankruptcy act. Assurance of speedy prosecutions is deterring dishonest merchants from committing commercial crimes.

"There is now pending in Congress a bill to amend the Bankruptcy act which will make it more difficult and dangerous for dishonest bankrupts to conceal their assets and otherwise defraud creditors. The penalty for violation of the act if amended by this bill will be increased from two to five years."

NEW NAVIGATION BONDS.

Bankers to Offer $3,000,000 for Hudson River Corporation.

Coincident with the cessation of the five-years receivership of the Hudson Navigation Company, a group of bankers, headed by F. J. Lisman & Co., are planning to offer a new issue of $3,000,000 Hudson River Navigation Corporation 6½ per cent. convertible closed first mortgage 25-year sinking fund gold bonds.

The new corporation has been launched under the laws of Delaware to acquire the properties formerly controlled by the Hudson Navigation Company and its predecessors, the People's Line and the Citizens' Line.

Directors of the new corporation include Clifford S. Sims, former Vice President of the Delaware & Hudson Railroad, President and a director; Major Ellihu Church, consulting engineer, Port Authority, New York City; J. Monroe Holland, President of the Chesapeake Bank, Baltimore; John W. McKinnon; F. J. Lisman and Mitchell May, both of F. J. Lisman & Co.; John de la Valette, former Managing Director of the Holland Steamship Company; Nathan Hatch, President of the Fuld & Hatch Co., Albany; Peter G. Ten Eyck, former member of Congress from Albany; Charles L. A. Whitney, trustee of the City Savings Institute, Albany, and W. C. Feathers, President of the Manufacturers' National Bank of Troy.

BROWN BOVERI EARNINGS.

American Subsidiaries Report 1925 Balance of $1,708,690.

Combined earnings of the American Brown Boveri Electric Corporation and subsidiaries for 1925, irrespective of date of acquisition, show a balance of $1,708,690 after depreciation and interest but before taxes. This equals more than eight times the annual dividend requirements on the 7 per cent. cumulative preferred stock, after allowance for dividends of $3.81 on outstanding participating stock.

The report, which is the first issued in pamphlet form, contains a description of the corporation's scope of operation. It points out that the products of acquired companies are noncompetitive but related within the electrical industry. The volume of business being booked is in excess of that of a year ago. The report says in part:

"The Camden plant now has enough forward business on its books to enable continuance of current rate of activity for a year. At Camden there is being built the largest ship to be launched in America, the airplane carrier Saratoga, being built for the United States Navy. Also under construction there are two large dredges and four freight car floats."

SHOWING OF COTTON GOODS.

Boston to Have an Exhibition of Wearables and Draperies.

Advance showings of Summer dress fabrics of cotton and rayon and of new lines of hosiery will be included in the features of the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers' exhibition in Talbot Hall, Mechanics Building, Boston, during the International Textile Exposition that opens today. At least 250 different patterns of these types of dress cottons will be on display. Living models will wear dresses that will demonstrate the beauty of these materials.

A number of practical suggestions for the introduction of individual color schemes and for otherwise beautifying homes will be another feature of the manufacturers' exhibition. More than 100 different varieties and patterns will be seen in the profusion of draperies that will be hung on the walls of one section of the hall. Sixteen mills will be represented in the exhibition, which the association feels will prove one of the most attractive and comprehensive ever held in New England.

ANALYZES RUBBER DECLINE.

Exchange Head Says Market's Statistical Position Caused Price Cut.

The gradual but persistent decline in rubber price during last week, totaling more than 6 cents per pound, was due chiefly to the statistical position of the market, according to F. R. Henderson, President of the Rubber Exchange of New York.

"Shipments during March from British Malaya were 35,034 tons, including imports into Singapore from the Dutch East Indies of 14,800 tons," Mr. Henderson said. "This is an increase of about 5,000 tons over February. The native rubber would have been more evenly distributed in the February and March shipments, except that considerable quantities were held back due to Chinese holidays in February.

"London stocks now stand at 13,750 tons, and it is estimated that this figure will be increased by about 1,500 tons this week. United States figures for March consumption will be published soon and estimates vary from 30,000 to 35,000 tons."

Kelly-Springfield to Redeem Notes.

Redemption of $500,000 principal amount of Kelly-Springfield Tire Company ten-year 8 per cent. sinking fund gold notes issued under a trust agreement, dated May 15, 1921, will be made on May 15 next at 110 per cent. and accrued interest, according to notice received by holders from the Central Union Trust Company of New York, trustee.

MINE FELLOWSHIPS OFFERED STUDENTS

Various Colleges Have Agreements With Bureau of Mines.

THIRTY AWARDS THIS YEAR

Scientific Research to Be Studied in Eight Institutions.

Excellent opportunities are afforded students who desire a period of active training in research work along mining and metallurgical lines through a series of cooperative agreements effected between the Bureau of Mines and various universities and colleges for the maintenance of a number of research fellowships.

For the college year 1926-27 more than thirty fellowships in eight institutions will be awarded. The problems to be studied cover a wide range of scientific research. Many students who have received these fellowships in past years have, as a result, obtained remunerative positions in the industrial field. Detailed information in regard to the terms of the different fellowships can be obtained by applying to the authorities in charge of the educational institutions named below.

The School of Mines of the College of Engineering, University of Alabama, Tuscaloosa, Ala., offers five fellowships in mining and metallurgical research. The fellowships are open to graduates of universities and engineering schools who have proper qualifications to undertake research investigation. The value of each fellowship is $540 per year of nine months beginning Sept. 1. The fellowships have been established for the purpose of undertaking the solution of mining and metallurgical problems of special importance to the State of Alabama and the Southern States.

The Department of Mining and Metallurgy, College of Engineering of the Carnegie Institute of Technology, Pittsburgh, Pa., offers eight fellowships in mining and in metallurgical research in cooperation with the Pittsburgh Experiment Station of the United States Bureau of Mines and advisory boards representing these industries. Fellowships are open to the graduates of colleges, universities and technical schools who are properly qualified to undertake research investigations. Each fellowship carries a stipend of $750, paid in ten instalments.

The College of Mines of the University of Washington, Seattle, Wash., offers five fellowships for research in coal and clay. The fellowships are open to graduates of universities and technical colleges who are properly qualified to undertake research investigations. The value of each fellowship is $720, for the twelve months beginning July 1. The purpose of these fellowships is to undertake the solution of various problems being studied by the United States Bureau of Mines that are of special importance to the State of Washington, the Pacific Northwest and Alaska.

Fellowships in Chemical Research.

The Arizona Bureau of Mines, a subdivision of the College of Mines and Engineering of the University of Arizona, Tucson, Ariz., offers two fellowships in metallurgical and chemical research in cooperation with the Southwest Experiment Station of the United States Bureau of Mines. These fellowships are open to men who have obtained the equivalent of the Bachelor of Science degree from a recognized university or technical school, who have specialized in metallurgy or chemistry as undergraduates and who are qualified to undertake research work. Each fellowship yields $660 for a period of eleven months beginning July 1. The purpose of the fellowships is to undertake the solution of metallurgical problems of special importance to the Southwest. For the year 1926-27 the subjects to be investigated will be selected from the following list:

Losses in smelting, production of copper from concentrate by leaching, recovery of copper from impure dilute solutions, treatment of by-products in copper smelters, treatment of pyrite middling in copper concentrates, treatment of oxidized copper ores containing gold and silver.

The Department of Mining and Metallurgical Research, University of Utah, Salt Lake City, will award several fellowships, each having an annual net value of $720. This department is maintained in connection with the Intermountain Experiment Station of the United States Bureau of Mines. During the year 1926-27 the problems to be investigated are: Flotation, hydrometallurgy of zinc, hydrometallurgy of lead, the recovery of lead from mixed lead-zinc carbonate ores by calcination and gravity separation, differential sulphating of complex ores and concentrates to facilitate subsequent separation by milling or leaching, pyrometallurgy of lead.

The School of Mines of the University of Idaho, Moscow, Idaho, in cooperation with the United States Bureau of Mines and the Idaho Bureau of Mines and Geology, offers a number of fellowships open to college graduates who have had good training in mining, metallurgy or chemistry and who are qualified to undertake the research work. The net income of each fellowship over and above all university fees and deposits is $60 a month for ten months beginning Sept. 1, 1926. The purpose of this work is to undertake the solution of definite problems confronting the mining and metallurgical industries of the State of Idaho. For 1926-27 the followin- subjects are being considered: Research on classification in relation to the crushing and concentrating of ores; studies in gravity concentration; Idaho ore problems; flotation concentration.

Missouri Offers Four.

The School of Mines and Metallurgy of the University of Missouri, Rolla, Mo., in cooperation with the United States Bureau of Mines and the State Mining Experiment Station, offers four fellowships. These fellowships are open to graduates who have the equivalent of a Bachelor of Science degree and have had the proper training in mining, metallurgy or chemistry and who are qualified to undertake research work. The income of each fellowship is $800 per annum for the twelve months beginning July 1, 1926. The purpose of this work is to undertake the solution of definite problems confronting the mining and metallurgical industries of the State of Missouri. For 1926-27 the four fellowships will be granted in the following subjects: Metallurgy of zinc, refractories for metallurgy of zinc, physical metallurgy (heat treatment of steel).

The University of Nevada, Reno, Nev., offers in the Mackay School of Mines a fellowship open to graduates of American mining colleges of recognized standing. The income of the fellowship is $750 a year, payable monthly. The holder of the fellowship will be required to carry a minimum number of graduate courses in the Mackay School of Mines, and, in lieu of the usual thesis, will be assigned to research service with the United States Bureau of Mines' Rare and Precious Metals Station located on the campus.

NATIONAL EXPOSITION OF MEDICAL SUPPLIES

Purpose Is to Show American Medical Association at Dallas Convention Best Country Produces.

In the days of the venerable saddle-bag doctor, a national exposition of medical supply firms would have been a small affair, says Will C. Braun, business manager of the American Medical Association, which is to begin its seventy-seventh annual convention on April 19 at Dallas, Texas. Practice then was relatively simple and the physician's needs were few. But the doctor of today is heir to a great legacy of new and better methods—so great indeed as to call into existence large and highly specialized industries to supply the necessities for the modern scientific practice of medicine, says Mr. Braun.

"The purpose of the technical exhibits at the annual convention," he continues, "is to show the visiting physician the very best that industry produces for his needs. At Dallas the representative firmms of the entire United States will come together and form one large, orderly, national exposition. A great world's fair would probably not present such a showing of things that intimately concern the work of the physician.

"The very fact that medical practice has become highly developed and complicated makes an exposition of this nature all the more valuable to the visitor. In the olden days it was not difficult for the physician to choose his equipment. There was little to choose. For example, in the matter of books, so great a volume of information on medical subjects is now extant that one can read only a fractional part of it. Books must be chosen with discrimination and fortunate indeed is the convention visitor who plans to spend such time among the publishers' exhibits, for he can actually see and examine the leading productions of most of the medical book publishers. It is a wonderful opportunity to become acquainted with books.

"The same applies to pharmaceuticals, biologicals, instruments, apparatus, infant foods. The great pharmaceutical firms will have at hand specimens of standard remedies made by refined, accurate manufacturing processes. They will exhibit many new medicinal agents. Biological preparations, serums and vaccines, including the newly developed scarlet fever toxins and antitoxins, will be fully represented and capable scientific attendants will give full information.

"With a growing interest in physiotherapy, the exhibits of the electrotherapeutic manufacturers will take on an added significance this year. Extensive displays of roentgen ray and other electric apparatus will be an important part of the exposition. Technical experts will be present at each booth to answer questions and explain problems of technic. The latest models of apparatus for diagnosis, anesthesia and other medical uses will be generously represented.

"Repeated visits to Exhibit Hall will prove stimulating and profitable. The hall will be open daily from 8 A. M. to 6 P. M. (Friday, 8 A. M. to 4 P. M.) It will afford a convenient place to meet friends or to spend the time between section meetings. The visitor may feel free to ask questions or examine exhibits without being unduly importuned or obligated to purchase."

FEAR MINE-TIMBER FLOOD IN NEW YORK

Current Effort to Offset High Cost of Labor in Construction Reveals Menace to Tenants.

BUILDING BUREAUS ALERT

With New York City showing a 19.8 per cent. increase in building construction investments over those of last month and a gain of 21.6 per cent. over the month of March, 1925, in spite of December warnings that certain kinds of building construction in New York City were being overdone, the present runaway construction market in this city is nursing a still more serious danger, according to Allen H. Beals in the current Dow Service Daily Building Reports.

The year 1925 was the biggest building-construction year, when measured by dollars invested in the building construction, ever recorded by any municipality anywhere. Bradstreet's shows that while the foregoing gains have been made in March for New York City, the rest of the country, outside of New York City, reports a decrease in building construction investments of .8 per cent., although the March record for building investments for all sections but New York City, shows a gain of 21 per cent. over February of this year.

Whatever may be the significance the individual reader attaches to these statistics, the fact remains that a tremendous quantity of third-rate fir timber is being thrown back upon certain Western lumber manufacturing concerns and, apparently taking advantage of the fact that New York City is now the only place in the country where building construction is going ahead in spite of greatly added building costs, the tracks are being well greased for running into this market for housing and mill construction a grade of fir timber that has not only been rejected in parts of the West for dwelling and mill construction, but which, though designated as mining timber, is in reality used only for short length propping in mine headings that are destined for quick abandonment.

Western fir timber is highly rated as a building material. It is given a place alongside of yellow pine by the United States Government standards. New York City has been and will long continue to be a big market for Western fir, and the demand for this material is constantly growing, as far as No. 1 and No. 2 grades are concerned. But the best minds in the lumber business are keenly alive to the possibilities of No. 3, or mine prop grades, being swung into this market under present runaway conditions for use in home, mill and housing developments running more than two stories in height, especially in cases where the high cost of building construction is being offset by the substitution of cheaper and inferior materials.

The situation has been made alarming by the fact that this timber has recently been offered for sale to speculative builders of a certain specialty for use in operations of this sort with profuse assurances that this material is just as good for that kind of building as certain well recognized woods.

Where there are well defined efforts being made to cut under the increasing cost of building construction by use of cheaper grades of building materials a very genuine fear is entertained by well informed architects, engineers, financiers, as well as contractors and responsible lumber distributors, that, in spite of the best efforts of the Bureaus of Buildings of the various boroughs to maintain their long-established record of total absence of building collapse due to the use of unsafe and unsound building materials, some of this mine grade of timber will find its way into building construction operations of the mushroom type going ahead this year in New York City and vicinity, with resultant danger to life, limb and financial security.

Ordinarily, official inspection will keep this kind of material out of building construction of this kind, but the fear in the minds of the foremost lumber interests of New York and vicinity is that at the rate at which certain kinds of buildings are being erected and projected, the wild endeavor that is now being made to compensate for higher costs of labor by the use of cheaper building materials will cause the market to be flooded with this kind of timber and serious results will be sure to follow. That the menace is real is shown by the fact that a shipment of 600,000 feet of this material is on its way to New York City now.

The New York lumber dealer of standing will describe this material as having two dangers—one easily seen, and the other almost invisible except to the eye of a trained lumber man.

The easily visible fault is the large and numerous knots. The unseen menace is the evidence of dry-rot.

In the case of the former the soundest fir timber is taken out of the fir tree, which in the West grows to abnormal girth. This is clear, sound, highly-rated timber. But the residue is apt to be full of knots, affecting as much as 50 per cent. of a log of average length. Mining operations require heavy timbers but in short lengths.

The mining engineers cut up the No. 3 stocks into short lengths, eliminating the knots to a large extent and use the knotted pieces for blocks, &c. But when these knotted sticks come next for building purposes, while they may be able to support a two-story frame dwelling, they are unsafe when used in buildings of whatever kind running over that number of stories. When these knot-filled timbers are sold and used in long lengths to carry loads that only the best No. 1 fir or yellow pine should carry, there is always great danger of collapse at the knot joints.

The invisible danger lies in the rather pinkish color of the wood. It is practically of the same color as the first tracings of dry-rot shown in yellow pine. The danger of dry-rot being further advanced than the merchandising imagines is great where expert supervision is not available or sought, as would likely be the case where the timber is sold for use in operations where the builders operate for quick sale and small profit.

Price changes occurring at the first of the month were, for the most part, downward, as far as basic building materials are concerned. Common brick cannot seem to come into New York City fast enough to meet the demand. In consequence second-hand common brick, due partly to the strike of the housewreckers, is bringing as high as $60 to $70 a load of 3,000, which is only $10 a load below the wartime price peak.

The New York Times Oratorical Contest

Music Is Now Popular Feature At Competitions Now Going On In This Region.

High school music is proving a popular supplement to high school oratory at the various school events which are being held in connection with the National Oratorical Contest on the Constitution, sponsored by THE NEW YORK TIMES.

Some of the larger school orchestras have several score musicians, and the performances indicate that the preparation and rehearsals are carried out on almost professional lines. The programs show distinguishable Damrosch or Mengelberg influences. Adults unfamiliar with the ambitious spirit of these orchestras might raise an eyebrow at some of the advanced selections they essay. However, actual hearing probably would convince them that the strings, winds and brasses have something more than courage to influence them.

Those attending some of the fifty contests which will be held this week will have an opportunity to hear what high school players are capable of doing. At the Academy of St. Francis Xavier, Brooklyn, semi-final contest of Brooklyn parochial and private high schools to-night Rachmaninoff, Massenet and Elgar will be interpreted by the Misses Ella Dobbins, Charlotte Rehman, Mary Casey and Helen Janes, and the Flatbush School Glee Club will give favorites from its repertory.

Programs at Finals.

On Friday evening at the Brooklyn Borough finals at Girls' High School the Boys' High School Glee Club and the Boys' High School Orchestra, directed by George C. Flint, will appear. The orchestra will play Latann's Cradle Song and Pizzicato Gavotte. One week later, at the Brooklyn-Queens-Richmond interborough finals at Girls' Commercial High School the same orchestra will play the overture from Rossini's "Barber of Seville," Massenet's Elegie (transcript) and Mozart's G minor symphony, first movement.

The Julia Richman High School Orchestra will be heard at its home auditorium next Friday afternoon during the Manhattan Borough finals. Miss Bennett, Chairman of the Music Department, announced yesterday that the orchestra would play Scotson Clark's Marche aux Flambeaux, Anitra's Dance from Grieg's Peer Gynt, and Mendelssohn's March from Athalie. The Julia Richman String Quartet will play Pochon's arrangement of "Drink To Me Only With Thine Eyes"; first violin, Sylvia Sinchok; second violin, Sylvia Levensohn; viola, Selma Kremer, and 'cello, Anna Bruyn.

Attention first began to be attracted to the work of these orchestras at the borough semi-final contests held before the Easter vacation. Favorable mention was made particularly of the Girls' High School Orchestra, Brooklyn, directed by George A. Wilson, which interpreted various dances from Edward German's Henry VIII Suite, of the James Madison High School Orchestra, Brooklyn, directed by S. Lewis Elmer, for a program whose feature was Beethoven's Minuet in G, and the Boys' High School Orchestra, with numbers by Kela-Bela, Valensen and Paradise.

Contests Over Wide Area.

Additional word received yesterday on the progress being made in the National Oratorical Contest throughout the country again brought home that while THE NEW YORK TIMES's contests is taking place here six other regional contests of similar proportions are going on from coast to coast. The Kansas City region will hold its finals in that city on May 14, according to an official announcement, which said the judges would be Governor John Hammill of Iowa, Gilbert N. Hitchcock, former United States Senator from Nebraska; F. Dumont Smith, Chairman, and Charles E. Matson, member, both of the American Bar Association Citizenship Committee, and J. A. Van Osdol, Chairman of the Committee on Constitutional Education of the Indiana State Bar Association.

The winner of the meeting in Kansas City, like the winner of THE TIMES's regional finals at Town Hall here the same evening, will be one of the seven national finalists at Washington on June 4, and will share in the trip to Europe this Summer without expense, which will be the awards given to all seven. THE TIMES offers in addition to its own campaign a cash prize of $1,000.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 11.—The disturbance that was over the St. Lawrence Valley Saturday night has advanced to New Foundland with greatly increased intensity, St. John's reporting a barometer reading of 29.10 inches. The northwestern area of high pressure has spread rapidly eastward and southward in the area of the disturbance and it is now central over Northern Michigan, Alpena, 30.36 inches. The southern disturbance has made very little progress eastward and it is now central over Alabama and Mississippi, Meridien, Miss., reporting the lowest pressure, 29.76 inches. Still other disturbances are central over Alberta and Arizona, while high pressure prevails in the vicinity of Bermuda and along the North Pacific Coast.

Except for showers Monday in portions of the Southeastern States in connection with the southern disturbance, which will likely advance slowly eastward toward Bermuda, fair weather is indicated for Monday and Tuesday over the eastern half of the country.

The weather will remain cool in north and middle sections Monday, and cooler weather will overspread Tennessee and the South Atlantic and Eastern Gulf States within the next twenty-four hours. The temperature will rise, however, during Tuesday east of the Mississippi River except in the extreme south.

SAYS HARVARD NEEDS FAITH

Bishop Lawrence Declares Religion Is More Urgent Than New Chapel.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., April 11.—Harvard's need is not a new chapel, but rather a greater amount of personal religion in the daily lives of the Faculty and the students, declared William Lawrence, Episcopal Bishop of Massachusetts, in addressing several hundred Harvard students this afternoon at the Phillips Brooks House, Harvard yard.

The Bishop said that a new memorial chapel would be a fine thing, but that a building of bricks and mortar would not necessarily introduce a greater amount of personal religion.

He also criticized parents who send their young people away to schools and think that because the schools are called "religious schools," the students will become religious, and declared that religious beliefs and habits were developed in the home rather than in the school.

An additional entrance to the Hamilton National Bank has been provided on the West Forty-first Street side of the Bush Terminal Sales Building. The bank now occupies the entire street floor of the building extending from 130 West Forty-second Street to 133 West Forty-first Street.

TEN SHOPS THROUGHOUT GREATER NEW YORK

Where is the Place to Stop Spending

"Let every man have a firm purpose to expect worth from those things only that have worth in them."

THERE is a point at which further expenditure of time, money or effort becomes an extravagance. Economists say it is fixed by the "Law of Diminishing Returns." Translated into terms of purchasing, it means that the secret of economical buying lies not in getting merchandise at the lowest price, but in getting merchandise intelligently adapted to the purpose it must serve. It means suitability, worth—100% usefulness without waste.

You would not buy platinum if gold would answer your purpose.

And in the purchase of printing that consideration is vitally important. Whether you buy a poster, book, ticket, printed form, or a piece of advertising literature, you buy the fitness of the job for the purpose, not simply paper and ink.

That is the real meaning of "Quality" in printing.

In New York City, the Printing Centre of the World, printers understand this fact, and they apply all the Completeness, Craftsmanship and Service of New York City to its realization.

If you want maximum value in printing, at minimum cost, consult a New York City printer and tell him exactly the purpose that the particular piece of printing is to accomplish. Then you will get printed results which are neither overembellished nor underdone.

This is the ninth of a series of messages in which you, a user of printing, are made better acquainted with the New York City printer and his tremendous capacity to serve you.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES

PULHAM, April 12.—The Norge will be ready to leave the Pulham airdrome tomorrow at dusk if the weather is favorable.

Captain Amundsen's airship came through the 1,400-mile journey from Rome in splendid shape and needed only to have her gas and fuel containers replenished before starting for Oslo. Colonel Nobile, the Norge's Commander and designer, announced this afternoon that he had heard from Leningrad that the hangar there was ready to receive him and consequently there was no reason for tarrying long here.

He said he hoped after flying over the North Pole from the base at Spitzbergen, to be able to fly the ship to Nome, Alaska, where he would dismantle her. The Norge is built in sections and can easily be taken apart. If all goes well he will reassemble her in the United States and do some flying there.

The Norge he thought would reach Oslo in six hours, remain there at the mooring mast for one day and then go on to Leningrad.

If the weather is good when the Norge sets out from Spitzbergen on May 1 she will reach Alaska in forty or forty-five hours, according to Lieutenant Oskar Omdal, who was with Amundsen's 1922 polar expedition. As her fuel will last sixty hours she has a leeway of 15 hours.

Lieutenant Amundsen, the explorer's nephew, is making his first polar trip. He said he thought the Norge would get a severe test in the flight from Leningrad to Spitzbergen.

Chances of Crew's Survival.

Lieutenant Horgen, who was with Amundsen on his trip last year when he was compelled to land on ice 120 miles from the Pole, said there would be no chance of survival if the Norge were forced down anywhere near the Pole. If she came down several hundred miles away, there was a fighting chance that her crew would get out afoot. The Norge is carrying enough rations, consisting of chocolate, pork and beans, to last thirty days. The only source of heat outside the engines will be hot coffee in vacuum bottles.

The Norge is stripped for action. She is built with little regard for comfort. Inside she carries two light Morris chairs. Besides that she has two stools for the navigator and pilot. There is about as much room in her as in a limousine. However, here and there are a few perilous perches for the members of the crew. These are on top of the ship and in tiny engine rooms resembling cocoons, slung under her body. These engine rooms are reached from the interior of the rigid shell by a narrow and fragile gangplank a foot wide and six or seven feet long. Some of the enginemen were seen standing on the gangways while the Norge was high in the air yesterday. In the interior is a foot-wide passageway from the control car to the rear end. As this passageway is of the slightest construction and able to hold up only one man at a time, there is no chance for exercise on the Norge. The control car is protected from the cold by celluloid.

Amundsen Felicitates Nobile.

Colonel Nobile tonight received this message from Captain Amundsen, who will command the polar venture:

"My heart is full of joy at your accomplishment. I will be very glad to see you again."

The Colonel has also received messages from the King of Italy and Premier Mussolini.

If the Norge leaves Pulham at dusk tomorrow, she ought to be at Oslo the next morning. If she leaves Oslo on Wednesday, as expected, she should accomplish the 700 miles to Leningrad

Definition of a Democrat Picked for Jefferson Day

WASHINGTON, April 12.—What is a Democrat? Senators Robinson of Arkansas, Harrison of Mississippi and Edwards of New Jersey, acting as judges in a contest conducted by the Pathfinder Magazine, have answered the question by giving first prize to the following definition:

"A Democrat is one who believes in the fullest freedom of speech, press and religion, and separation of Church and State; laws that bear equally upon all classes, without special privilege or monopolistic advantage; rights of States guaranteed by the Constitution, and less national paternalism."

The definition was sent in by Dr. M. D. Taylor, County Health Officer at Aztec, N. M., and was one of 30,000 submitted. It will be read at the various Jefferson's birthday dinners tomorrow night.

BROWNINGS FACING A PERJURY INQUIRY

Prosecutor Wants to Know if Bride Swore to Six Months' Residence in County.

COUPLE COME TO THE CITY

'Cinderella' Girl Goes Shopping —Broker Transfers Property and Does Some Dodging.

While the couple were motoring northward bad news came from Carmel, N. Y., county seat of Putnam County, within the confines of which the marriage was performed. Special District Attorney Clayton Ryder announced that an investigation into the validity of the marriage would be made. Mr. Ryder is acting as prosecutor of Putnam during the illness of District Attorney Bailey.

Mr. Ryder said that the law required six months' residence on the part of one applying for a marriage license in Putnam. Reports from Cold Spring were to the effect that Browning's bride became a resident of Putnam three days before the ceremony, and that the license issued to her therefore was invalid.

"We are not very much excited about the matter," said Mr. Ryder, "but I shall have an investigator look into the facts. If Mrs. Browning swore to six months' residence, whereas she had been here only a couple of days, the crime would be perjury. Of course, we do not know yet whether any crime has been committed—we are endeavoring to find just how long she had lived here.

Will Not Question Bride.

"Mrs. Browning will not be questioned in the matter, as she could not give evidence against herself. We shall look over the application for license, and probably question Town Clerk Gilbert Forman of Cold Spring, who issued it."

The broker, 51 years old, known as the "Cinderella Man," because of his vain effort to adopt Mary Louise Spas, a matter that was dropped when Mary Louise was shown to be 21 and not 16 years old, as she pretended, came into town to stamp angrily about his office, arrange his affairs and abandon, temporarily at least, his New York residence.

Browning's bride, accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Catherine Heenan, who consented to her daughter's hasty wedding to Browning at Cold Spring last Saturday, came to visit her physician, Dr. Howard Fox. It was Dr. Fox who attended her when a mysterious, unidentified person was said to have thrown acid on the girl in her mother's Washington Heights apartment just before her marriage. Two eminent physicians were in consultation with Dr. Fox yesterday. Their report was that it would be a matter of weeks before the scars on the girl's neck healed.

FOUR TRUSTEES QUIT CALVARY CHURCH, ATTACKING STRATON

PROTEST BILL FOR PRINTING

SEE SPIRITUAL SIDE LOSING

Four of the nine members of the Board of Trustees of the Calvary Baptist Church, of which the Rev. Dr. John Roach Straton is pastor, tendered their resignations yesterday to Supreme Court Justice William Harmon Black, who is the President of the board, in his office, 51 Chambers Street. The resigning members, who have been hostile to some of the policies of Dr. Straton and have been in litigation with the majority members of the board, are Benjamin J. Miller and A. B. Miller, brothers and business men; W. A. M. Martin, a publisher, and Robert B. Buzbee, a lawyer, of 60 Broadway.

The following statement, detailing the reasons for their resignation, was made public by the resigning trustees:

We, Benjamin J. Miller, W. A. M. Martin, A. B. Miller and Robert B. Buzbee, four of the nine trustees of Calvary Baptist Church Corporation, resign from the board today for the following reasons:

1. About a year ago an attempt was made by Dr. Straton and others to place a heavy mortgage on the church property in connection with a proposal to build a combination hotel and church. After a determined and bitter fight that scheme was defeated. We believe that no further attempt will be made to mortgage the church property, which is now free and clear of any and all encumbrances. We therefore believe that we have fulfilled our duties as trustees in thus preserving the property.

Protest Stenographic Bills.

2. At a recent meeting of the Board of Trustees it was, over our protest, voted to borrow $721 to pay for stenographic and printing bills incurred by the defendants in connection with the present litigation to which W. A. M. Martin and others were plaintiffs and Dr. Straton and others were defendants. The primary purpose of that litigation was to prevent illegal voting at trustees' meetings by Dr. Straton, and which resulted in an injunction against his so voting.

The church was not a party to that action. We protested and voted against using the church funds to pay the expenses incurred by the defendants in that litigation. We feel that the members of the church, the persons who were responsible for the endowments of the church and other contributors to its support will also protest such payments. We cannot conscientiously as members of the Board of Trustees of a religious corporation when a majority of that Board votes to pay from the funds of the church the expenses of litigation in which the church was not even a party. No provision was made for such expenditures in the church budget and the church corporation has never authorized such expenditures.

Say Minister Drew Two Salaries.

3. We also protest and disapprove the action of Dr. Straton in drawing a salary of $1,500 from Calvary Baptist Church for the months of February and March, 1926, while at the same time he occupied a so-called Winter pastorate in the First Baptist Church, West Palm Beach, Fla., and, as we are informed, received a very substantial salary therefor. We protested and voted, without avail, against the recent action of the board in borrowing $3,000, a large portion of which was used to pay

RIOT ACT AND CLUBS ROUT 5,000 STRIKERS

WEISBORD'S BAIL $30,000

Special to The New York Times.

PASSAIC, N. J., April 12.—Seventy Bergen County detectives, Deputy Sheriffs and Garfield police dispersed a crowd of 5,000 strikers at the Garfield gate of the Forstmann & Huffmann mill this evening, after Sheriff George P. Nimmo of Bergen County read the riot act.

Seven arrests were made, including Robert W. Dunn of the American Civil Liberties Union, Esther Lowell, New York representative of the Federated Press, a labor news agency; William Weinstone, a prominent official of the Workers (Communist) Party in New York; Nancy Sandowsky, sometimes known as the "Joan of Arc" of the strikers. Ten other arrests of strike leaders had been made during the day.

The crowd, led by Nancy Sandowsky and a large group of sympathizers from New York, insisted on continuing its picketing demonstration at the Forstmann & Huffmann mill gate, the company having announced that it was to open the mill this week.

Sheriff Uses Strong Hand.

Sheriff Nimmo and his deputies and the entire Garfield police force met the picketers, who had just held a meeting at Belmont Hall, Garfield, and had been addressed by Dunn, Weinstone and others. The speakers had exhorted the strikers to stand firm despite the arrest of Albert Weisbord, leader of the United Front Committee.

Miss Sandowsky refused to obey the instructions of the Sheriff as to the exact manner in which the line of pickets was to continue its march. The Sheriff jumped on an automobile, read the riot act and ordered his men to "go to it." This they did, chasing the crowd with riot guns and clubs. Men and women tumbled over each other in their efforts to escape. Motorcycle patrolmen assisted in clearing the streets, after which the Sheriff announced that regulations amounting to martial law prevailed in Garfield. He sent officers to the saloons, where loungers were ordered to depart. Strike signs were torn out of windows. Citizens who gathered on the streets in the excitement were ordered indoors. The Sheriff closed Belmont Park Hall, the Garfield meeting place of the union, and also padlocked the gate adjoining the hall grounds, where outdoor meetings have been held.

In half an hour Garfield looked like a deserted village. The only signs of life were the persons in their windows and the police in the streets.

Confident Strike Is Broken.

Tonight the Sheriff and his men were confident that the backbone of the strike had been broken by the arrest of nearly all the leaders, and particularly by that of Dunn, who was regarded by them as the successor of Weisbord. Dunn, a college graduate, student of economics and co-author with Sidney Howard of "The Labor Spy," is a director of the American Civil Liberties Union and a well known speaker on labor and industrial affairs.

Strikers were disheartened tonight because earlier in the day Weisbord, Harvard law school graduate and fiery strike leader, was held in $30,000 bail by Judge Davidson and remanded to the county jail in Paterson. There he was lodged in a cell when bail was not furnished.

Another damper on the textile workers, who have been on strike twelve weeks, was the arrest of Jack Rubinstein and Clarence Miller, picket leaders, and eight others who tried to picket the mills this morning. In all, seventeen arrests were made, and tonight nearly all the leaders and their possible successors are in jail, bail in the cases of Dunn and his associates having been fixed at $10,000 each.

Old Scenes Renewed at Mill.

Publication of the Forstmann & Huffmann Co.'s plan to resume work this week stiffened the determination of the strike leaders to prevent the mill from operating. The mill management informed the Garfield authorities of its intention and asked the police that adequate police protection be furnished. Sheriff Nimmo and a large staff of deputies, together with the entire Garfield police force, gathered near the mill. The Sheriff read the

BROOKHART OUSTED BY 45 TO 41 VOTE; STECK IS SWORN IN

PARTY LINES ARE SPLIT

Sixteen Republicans Join 29 Democrats in Unseating the Radical Senator.

LOSER TO SEEK REVENGE

Friends Expect Brookhart to Try to Defeat Cummins in the Coming Primary.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—Smith W. Brookhart of Iowa, insurgent Republican, who deserted President Coolidge in the Presidential campaign of 1924 and supported the candidacy of Robert M. La Follette, was deprived of his seat in the Senate today by a vote of 45 to 41. The Senate decided that Captain Daniel F. Steck, Democrat, was entitled to the place which Brookhart has held since the beginning of the present Congress in March, 1925.

Within two minutes after the vote was announced Captain Steck appeared in the chamber and was sworn in, and within nine minutes more he had taken part in the transaction of Senate business by voting with his Democratic colleagues to take a recess until 12 o'clock Wednesday.

Mr. Brookhart, who had remained away from the Senate since debate on his case was opened early last week, declined to comment on the result. It is generally accepted in political circles here, however, that he will seek to win the nomination as Senator on the Republican ticket in the Iowa primaries, making his fight against Senator Cummins, who will have the backing of the Coolidge Administration.

Both Parties Split in Vote.

Sixteen regular Republicans, led by Senator Butler of Massachusetts, Chairman of the Republican National Committee, joined with twenty-nine Democrats in administering defeat to Mr. Brookhart. It became known several days ago that Mr. Butler, who was reported at one time as favoring the retention of Mr. Brookhart, had turned to Mr. Steck, and the belief was strong that President Coolidge had been responsible for this change, but this was denied by the President.

Thirty-one Republicans, including nine who are classed as more or less "irregular," voted with nine Democrats and Senator Shipstead, the Farmer-Labor member, to keep Mr. Brookhart in the Senate.

The following was the vote on the question:

Messrs Brookhart and Cummins did not vote. The pairs announced were McKinley (for) with Fess (against), Means (for) with Schall (against), du Pont (for) with Shortridge (against), and Underwood (for) with Wadsworth (against).

Senator Steck said in an interview, that it was his purpose to stand by his party on party matters, and by the State of Iowa on others, whenever they arise in the Senate. He referred to himself as "a conservative Democrat," and declared that at the 1924 election the issue was whether this kind of a man should be chosen, or "a radical masquerading as a Republican."

Kissed by Woman Friend.

In the midst of his talk with the newspapermen in the president's room, a woman ran in and kissed the new Senator.

"Oh, Dan," she cried, "I was never so happy in all my life! It was just wonderful!"

The woman was Mrs. Hanford MacNider, wife of the Assistant Secretary of War, who is from Iowa and is a warm friend of Senator Steck.

In his formal statement to the press, explaining his attitude toward party matters the Senator said:

"I believe the Senate has confirmed the will of the Iowa voters. At the last election in Iowa the only real issue was whether old Iowa should be represented by a radical masquerading as a Republican or by a conservative Democrat. Iowa is not a radical State, and it is my belief that she will never again be represented in high office by a man who stands for radical sentiment. We have cleaned house, and we intend to keep our house clean.

"It has been charged that I am not a Democrat. I was elected as a Democrat, I ran as a Democrat, and I am a Democrat. On party questions I shall vote with my party, and on others I will endeavor to represent the State of Iowa."

WOMEN DEMAND STRICT DRY ENFORCEMENT WITH NO MODIFICATION OF PRESENT LAW; 80 TRY TO TESTIFY BUT FEW ARE HEARD

12,000 to 15,000 Needed on Border Patrol, Andrews Tells House Judiciary Committee

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—The House Judiciary Committee, which has jurisdiction over liquor legislation, was stunned today when it was told by General Lincoln C. Andrews, in charge of the Federal dry law enforcement agencies, that an army of from 12,000 to 15,000 men was necessary to patrol the borders of the United States if the efforts of the prohibition units within the country are to be successful. He added that, in the main, successful dry law enforcement was dependent upon preventing illegal shipments from across the borders.

"If our prohibition forces succeed in stopping the diversion of alcohol within the country we think we will have the liquor situation well under control," said General Andrews. "But it will count for little if we cannot protect the borders. If we succeed in stopping the diversion, smuggling will at once increase. We must have an effective patrol to deal with the problem effectively."

The situation along the Detroit River was pictured as presenting a favorable place for smugglers with liquor and also for aliens who cannot pass the prescribed tests at American ports.

Representative Hudson of Michigan, Chairman of the Alcoholic Liquor Traffic Committee, author of the pending patrol bill, said that in Michigan generally "we have a border situation accentuated to the highest degree, especially as to prohibition, labor and customs."

"There are literally thousands of dollars' worth of goods," he added, "smuggled across the Detroit and St. Claire Rivers every year, and we cannot stop it unless we have a border patrol."

'TOO EVIDENT TO OVERLOOK'

General Denies That Toothache Irritated Him Into Action— Other Witnesses Uncertain.

Special to The New York Times.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., April 12.—Charges that Colonel Alexander Williams of the Fourth Regiment, Marine Corps, endeavored to force drinks upon Brig. Gen. Smedley D. Butler at the famous Williams "cocktail party" were made by General Butler at the court-martial of Colonel Williams today.

When General Butler refused to take the drinks, he testified, Colonel Williams drank them, ultimately becoming so intoxicated that it was necessary to assist him out of the public rooms of the Hotel Del Coronado.

General Butler, testifying at the trial of Colonel Williams on charges General Butler had preferred, took the stand early in the afternoon session of the court-martial. He testified first on the incident in the hotel.

"I was standing outside the ballroom," he said, "and chanced to look over my left shoulder and saw standing about fifteen feet from me Colonel Williams. Colonel Williams was apparently about to fall. His face was slightly flushed and had an unusual color. Then I glanced away with a feeling that he was drunk.

"In a few seconds I turned around again and saw him being assisted through the doorway. As he left he was staggering, and his feet were not under his body."

Butler Describes Incidents.

Regarding incidents at Colonel Williams's residence, where a dinner was given in honor of General Butler, prior to adjournment of the party to the hotel, the General said:

"About 7 P. M. I entered Colonel Williams's home at Coronado. I saw the guests holding glasses in their hands, Colonel Williams being one of them.

"I did not see Colonel Williams drink from the glass in his hand. As soon as the hat was taken from my hand, cocktails were passed to me.

"Later Colonel Williams came around to me and asked me if I would have one. I replied, 'No, thank you.' 'Here's one,' he said, 'it is very mild,' and he held the glass in his hand. But when I refused again, Colonel Williams said, 'Well, here—' and drank the cocktail.

"I realized the position was uncomfortable for me, and so moved to another position. I put my plate at the end of the table, near the corner, and sat with Major Ross Rowell. Cocktails were passed to me four or five times, but I did not take them. Colonel Williams came to me several times,

ASKS WOMEN TO HELP POPULARIZE DRY LAW

Andrews Tells Them They Can Make Hostesses Stop Serving Cocktails.

SAYS STATES SHOULD AID

And When They Do, He Promises, Enforcement Will Make More Rapid Progress.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—The members of the Women's National Law Enforcement Conference, assembled here to aid the "drys" in the presentation of their cause before a Senate subcommittee, were told tonight by General Lincoln C. Andrews, head of the Federal Prohibition Agencies, that the great duty of women as individuals and of women's clubs and civic organizations in the wet and dry battle was to bring about a state of mind which would make law observance more popular. He asked them to do what they could to hasten the day when hostesses would feel apologetic for serving cocktails rather than for not serving them.

The women gave General Andrews a hearty demonstration as he assured them of his sympathy with the purpose of their organization and promised that the Federal prohibition forces would make rapid progress in cutting off illicit liquor at the source of supply. If the States would do their share by supplying efficient policing work, the General said, there was every reason to expect a vast improvement in the direction of closer enforcement within a short time.

"To act intelligently and effectively," said General Andrews, "one must always first analyze the problem in hand—in this case the present need is for law enforcement • • • We speak easily of the necessity for law—and that is true. But the mere enunciation of the fact does not secure this respect.

"What is law? When the preponderating majority of public opinion has accepted a rule of living as necessary for community welfare, when it is generally accepted that a certain standard of individual conduct is essential for the well-being of the community, then this rule or standard of conduct is written into a law and penalties affixed for its violation, in order that the recalcitrant minority may be forced to live in accordance with the accepted standard.

Points to Observance Phase.

"Law, therefore, presents two phases which are essential to its success—its observance by the preponderating majority and its enforcement upon the lawless minority. While we are here particularly considering the enforcement phase is it not clear that you women of the country must give prime consideration also to the observance phase?

"Applying these fundamental considerations to the prohibition law, I think it vitally important that both you and all civic organizations interested in

RESENT CROSS QUESTIONS

Women Assert Senator Reed Consumed Their Time Needlessly.

SAY MOTHERS OPPOSE BEER

JERSEY OFFICIALS ASSAILED

Mrs. Lippincott Denounces Wet Governor and Wet Senators —Many Lively Exchanges.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—Led by Mrs. Henry W. Peabody of Boston, Chairman of the Woman's National Committee for Law Enforcement, eighty women representing, they declared, not less than 18,000,000 American women, appeared today before the Senate Committee on Judiciary to plead that the Volstead act shall continue the law and that steps be taken to make its enforcement even more rigid than is now the case.

The women had intended each to speak for a single minute, but Senator Reed of Missouri, the only wet on the committee, insisted on cross-examining the witnesses, the result being that only a few of those who expected to talk were heard by the committee.

The action of Senator Reed in insisting on asking questions was commented on by many of the women, including Mrs. Peabody, who did not hesitate to say that in their opinion he had indulged in unfair tactics. Mrs. Peabody said the questions were irrelevant and that as a result some of her best witnesses were not permitted to read the short statements they had prepared.

"Last week for six days," said Mrs. Peabody, "the wets had their inning and were able to get most of their case into the records. Today, however, when eighty American women, representing some of the greatest civic movements in America appeared and asked to be heard, Senator Reed nullified two-thirds of our program by asking questions that, for the most part, did not relate to the matters which are the subject of the hearings."

Women Greeted With Applause.

Mrs. Peabody marshaled her witnesses on the steps of the Capitol and then, leading the way, she escorted them across the park, and into the Senate Office Building, where they were greeted by the explosions of scores of flashlights and the applause of their sisters, who packed the committee room to the doors, while several hundred others who were anxious to get in, had to remain in the corridor because there was not a foot of space left inside.

It was a picturesque body of women who descended on the committee. For the most part they were women in the middle years, and only a look was needed to confirm the seriousness with which they viewed the investigation being conducted by the Judiciary Committee.

Mrs. Peabody opened the proceedings with a short speech, in which she explained just what she and her associates hoped to accomplish. She did not then know about the cross-examination that was coming at the hands of Senator Reed. The original program called for a speech by every woman, with no speech to last longer than one minute.

One of the first witnesses was Mrs. A. Haines Lippincott of Camden, N. J., a member of the Republican Committee of that State and head of the New Jersey branch of the Law Enforcement Committee. She was the most plain-spoken of all the witnesses and spared neither Democrats nor Republicans in her narrative of conditions in New Jersey. She insisted New Jersey is making a hard fight for enforcement, especially, she added, when it was remembered the State has a wet Governor and two wet United States Senators.

Calls Edge Both Dry and Wet.

Senator Reed asked her if Senator Edge is wet. She replied that Senator Edge is dry in some parts of the State, and wet in others. She admitted, however, that Senator Edwards is wet no matter where he is. Senator Edge, she said was re-elected by swinging on to Mr. Coolidge's coat tails.

Spanish Flight Chief Is Missing in Desert; Disaster Between Cairo and Bagdad Feared

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

CAIRO, April 12.—It is feared that disaster between here and Bagdad has overtaken Captain Estevez, leader of the Spanish flight from Madrid to Manila. No news of him has come today from the Syrian Desert, which he was crossing.

The commander's two companions, Captain Lariga and Captain Gonzales-Gallarza, arrived safely with their planes at Bagdad last night, though one of them was forced to land on the way to repair a fuel tank and was assisted by mechanics in British armored cars following the flight.

It is presumed that Captain Estevez has been forced to land at one of the various landing stages between here and Bagdad, but, not being provided with wireless, has not been able to communicate his whereabouts.

Four planes of the British Royal Air Force have been sent out from Amman in search of the missing aviator.

BEIRUT, April 12 (AP).—The Syrian Desert appears to have swallowed up Captain Estevez, the Spanish aviator on his way to the Philippines. He was last seen about sixty miles from Amman, after passing Jerusalem, with Bagdad as his objective.

Captain Estevez is supplied with water and food for several days, but his situation would soon become precarious. The country east of the Jordan, between Jerusalem and Amman, is desolate, stretching for miles without an oasis.

BAGDAD, Iraq, April 12 (AP).—The two Spanish airmen, Captains Lariga and Gonzales Gallarza, who arrived here from Cairo last night on their flight to Manila, will start for Bushire early tomorrow morning.

Captain Estevez, leader of the expedition, is still missing. After passing landing places "E" on the Cairo-Bagdad route, he differed with his companions respecting the route and altered his course to a more southerly direction. His comrades, believing he was mistaken, did not follow him and they reached Bagdad without seeing him again.

Paris Duelists Fight It Out With Gloves, Wiping Out Insult Under Queensberry Rules

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, April 12.—For the first time in the history of French dueling an affair of honor has been settled with four-ounce gloves for weapons.

The adversaries were H. Tersieff and M. Schapira, the former of Rumanian nationality and the latter a Swiss, both well-known residents of Paris and members of the fashionable Cercle de l'Escrime et des Arts. It also must be added that both were formerly amateur boxers, M. Tersieff having one time held the amateur championship of Rumania.

A recent quarrel between the two having led to words which were considered insulting, a duel became inevitable. When the seconds met a surprise was sprung by the representative of the insulted party, who named gloves for the choice of arms. These weapons so far have not been included in the rules and regulations of the French dueling code; nevertheless, the adversary, after slight hesitation, accepted.

The meeting took place in the club gymnasium. The "duelists" fought two-minute rounds in the presence of their seconds and a few sportsmen. Both were badly out of training and in poor condition, but they exchanged lusty blows.

In the third round the referee stopped the fight, M. Schapira being declared an easy victor, and Tersieff was only saved from a knockout by the intervention of his second.

NEW DRIVE TO FINISH ST. JOHN'S LAUNCHED

$5,000,000 More Is Needed for Cathedral, Bishop Manning Tells Community Divisions.

LABOR'S FULL AID PLEDGED

DONATION FROM ESKIMOS

Hugh Frayne, General Organizer in New York for the American Federation of Labor, aroused the enthusiasm of 1,000 men and women workers of the Committee for Completing the Cathedral of St. John, at a "Cathedral Builders' Dinner" in the Hotel Astor last night, by bringing a "message of good will and success" from organized labor. As he ended his speech the labor delegate turned to Bishop William T. Manning, who presided, and clasped the Bishop's hand warmly, saying:

"May this structure stand for all time, and may you, Bishop Manning, live long, long years to enjoy it."

The Bishop shook his hand warmly, and the entire gathering rose and applauded as the representatives of labor and the Church stood silently in continued handclasp.

Mr. Frayne announced that organized labor had decided to raise funds to build a transeptal porch, the estimated cost of which is $145,000, as its share of the building of the cathedral, and that it was circularizing all members of the American Federation of Labor throughout the country, because it wanted labor's contribution to be on a national scale rather than confined to New York. He also read a letter from William Green, President of the Federation, reciting the Executive Council's endorsement of the plan and urging all labor men to help.

Bishop Expresses His Thanks.

Bishop Manning thanked labor for its help, and assured Mr. Frayne that the cathedral would "forever stand" for love and brotherhood among all men. He also announced that prayers for the safety and protection of the workmen building the cathedral were offered at every service in the cathedral.

Another burst of enthusiasm was aroused when E. F. Albee, the vaudeville manager, pledged himself to underwrite a $150,000 fund with which to build some part of the cathedral as a memorial to the theatrical profession. Mr. Albee has already raised $126,000 in vaudeville for the Business Men's Division, and has made a personal gift of $100,000 to the cathedral, besides giving a $100,000 endowment for the upkeep of the Synod Hall. He said he wished he could have made his personal gift five times what it was and that he might increase it before the cathedral was completed.

Including the $150,000 pledged by Mr. Albee, new gifts and pledges of $270,597.65 were announced at last night's dinner, which marked the beginning of a two weeks' intensive campaign to allow the various divisions of the community organization of the campaign, as distinguished from the church organization, to realize their respective quotas in the form of actual gifts or legal pledges. By the end of the intensive drive it is hoped that the gifts and pledges will total $10,000,000. That figure, which is two-thirds of the $15,000,000 ultimate goal of the cathedral builders, has already been assured, Bishop banning announced last night, but not all of it has been actually given or pledged.

Chairmen Announce Subscriptions

Chairmen of the various community divisions announced last night the totals they had raised to date as compared with the totals they have committed themselves to raise. In each case they hope to get the balance during the coming fortnight. These announcements follow:

Division.	Obligation Assumed.	Amt. Sec. to Date.

A total of about $2,000,000 remains to be raised by the various community organizations during the next two weeks.

Julian S. Myrick, Chairman of the Sports and Games Division, announced that it would try to raise $200,000 instead of $150,000, because it wanted the "sports window" to be "very beautiful." He said that George T. Adee had pledged $25,000 on behalf of the Tennis Committee as a memorial to Bob Wrenn; John McEntee Bowman $25,000 for the United Hunts Horse Shows; General Palmer E. Pierce $5,000 for the National Collegiate Association; the Olympic Games Association $5,000 as a memorial to those games, and Gustavus T. Kirby $1,000 on behalf of the Public Schools Athletic League. Thirty branches of sport, he said, were working to raise money.

Mayor Pledges His Help.

Mayor Walker was to have been a speaker, but was represented by Arthur J. W. Hilly, First Assistant Corporation Counsel, who conveyed the Mayor's assurance that he was at Bishop Manning's command for any task that might help the cathedral. Mr. Hilly said that the Mayor's physicians had forbidden him to attend the dinner and make a speech.

Bishop Manning said:

"Including the sums which the community groups have undertaken to raise to build their bays and other portions of the building, we have considerably over $10,000,000 assured, which means that only about another $5,000,000 is needed to complete the entire building and provide for the carrying on of its work. The superb baptistry is almost complete. The walls of the great nave are rising gloriously day by day. We hope that the fund which the women are raising will enable us now very soon to begin the north transept.

"With the funds raised by the Business Men's Division we have commenced the west front; the foundation is laid and we are now ready for the two majestic towers to be given. The groups that are building bays in the nave are all actively at work and have been joined by a new group representing the press of our country.

Bishop Gives the Watchword.

"The watchword of all of us now must be: 'The building of the cathedral must not stop.' What a splendid undertaking it is in which we are engaged! We are building in this metropolis of the New World one of the noblest cathedrals of all time, one of the three greatest in the world. But, noble as the building is, there is one thing that is still finer, and that is the spirit in which New York has responded to the ideal of the cathedral.

"Nothing, I believe, has ever reflected more honor on our city than the interest which people of every kind are showing in this great monument of religion, of art and of civic fellowship. Never, I believe, has there been a finer sight than the way in which groups representing the different elements in the life of the community are erecting portions of the building to symbolize the relationship between their special interests and religion."

The Bishop announced a gift of $60 for the children's arch which a group of Eskimos at the Episcopal mission at Point Hope, Alaska, had mailed last Thanksgiving Day, which had to travel 1,500 miles by dog sled before reaching a train and which he received two days before Easter.

"No gift that we have had, I believe," he went on, "represents more real sacrifice than this one from our Eskimo brethren at Point Hope, none of whom probably will ever see the cathedral, but who feel the spiritual impulse of it and want to have their share with us in building it."

Ralph Adams Cram, architect of the cathedral, said that the building of the cathedral had become "a great and pregnant gesture of the community, of society as a whole.

"It is a wonderful thing," he went on, "to see this masonry rising in its titantic masses, stone upon stone, to last a thousand years, but it is far more wonderful to see the wide outpouring of contributions. What Bishop Manning and the individuals and committees working with him have done is no less than miraculous. I dare say it has never seen equaled in four centuries, but it is the people that have answered to the appeal, and they are building the cathedral. For them it is being built."

The guests at the speakers' table were:

ITALY TO AID RUMANIA IN BESSARABIA DISPUTE

Minister of the Interior Expects Rome to Ratify the Treaty —Concessions Offered.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BUCHAREST, April 12.—Italy is seen in the rôle of a valuable mediator between Russia and Rumania on the Bessarabian question by Octavian Goga, Minister of the Interior, in an interview given today.

"It is practically certain that Italy will soon recognize our sovereignty over Bessarabia," he said. "She has not previously joined England and France in doing this, because she did not want to antagonize the Soviets—not because Rome was hostile to Rumania, as some declare.

"The relations between the present Government and Italy are of the best, or rather there exist strong ties of personal friendship between Signor Mussolini and both Premier Averescu and myself. I hope this will lead to improving the relations of the two countries."

Asked if Rumania contemplated a treaty similar to the agreement with Yugoslavia Italy recently discussed, he answered:

"Yes, practically. After that, Italy surely will ratify the Bessarabian treaty. In this way Rumania will have gained a new, permanent friend. Italy, being a friend of the Soviets and Rumania, will help us to find a basis of negotiating with the Soviets, with a view to restoring normal relations."

The quid pro quo Italy is to get for ratifying the Bessarabian treaty—its ratification by a third big power is necessary to make it binding—consists, in addition to the above suggested Italo-Rumanian treaty, of oil concessions, the privilege of handling an international Rumanian loan and contracts for hydroplanes, war vessels, electrification and radio projects.

Meanwhile skepticism regarding the "new era in Bessarabia and the end of military government there," promised by Premier Averescu on assuming office, is deepening as a result of a statement given out by General Mirescu, the new Minister of War, on arriving from Bessarabia, where, until now, he has been Military Governor.

He said:

"I don't believe it would be wise to remove the state of siege in Bessarabia before the elections. During the election the minds of the people will be agitated. Considering the exceptional state of things in Bessarabia, I think it is necessary for a more than usually rigorous control, which can be exerted only under the protection of the law.

"This, of course, does not mean that the army will mingle in politics. After the elections, perhaps, military control will be lifted—it depends partly on the result of the vote."

MORRIS ISSUES DENIAL.

Says There Is No Disagreement Over Cooper or Adjournment.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 12.—George K. Morris, Chairman of the Republican State Committee, tonight denied that he had any misunderstanding with Senator Knight, relative to the date of the adjournment of the Legislature.

Chairman Morris also declared that he had not been interested in the appearance of Colonel Cooper, nor had he sought to prevent his coming to Albany to speak on the water power question.

"I have had no misunderstanding with Senator Knight nor any of the Legislative leaders regarding the date of adjournment," said Mr. Morris. "The date of adjournment is one for the Legislative leaders to fix.

"There is nothing to the report that I did not want Mr. Cooper to come to Albany to speak on water power."

METHODIST CHURCH EXPELS MINISTER

Ousts the Rev. G. W. Holmes of New Bedford for Unbecoming Conduct.

HE APPEALS TO BISHOP

"Fight Has Just Begun," He Says, Confident That He Will Be Reinstated.

Special to The New York Times.

HARTFORD, Conn., April 12.—After many hours of secret discussion by a special investigating committee of fifteen, the Rev. Guy Willis Holmes, a Methodist pastor, of New Bedford, Mass., was ousted today by the New England Southern Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, sitting at South Manchester, Conn.

Mr. Holmes was convicted of immorality and of conduct unbecoming a minister. The action of the conference expels Holmes from the ministry and the pulpit as well as unfrocking him and depriving him of membership in the Methodist Church.

The report of the committee's finding, given without any other explanation, was as follows:

"The charges preferred against the Rev. Guy Willis Holmes are sustained. The Rev. Guy Willis Holmes is hereby expelled from the ministry and the pulpit of the Methodist Church."

Upon receipt of the report for which the conference was waiting before concluding its sixty-eighth annual session it adopted a resolution expressing appreciation of the work of the fifteen ministers on the committee.

Mr. Holmes arrived at the church as the closing hymn was being sung and stepped up to the pulpit, where he filed verbal notice of appeal with Bishop Ernest G. Richardson, presiding at the conference. The Bishop informed him that the appeal must be in writing, and since the conference was over the appeal would have to go to the General Conference Board, composed of five members from each of three conferences, who will review the testimony.

Holmes then filed a written notice of appeal, which he had already prepared.

"The fight has just begun," he said, and expressed confidence that he would be reinstated on probation and be back at his former church in New Bedford, as his parishioners have requested, within a month.

After notifying his wife by telephone of the result of the inquiry, he started this afternoon for New Bedford by automobile.

The charges against Mr. Holmes involved a story told before the Suffolk County Grand Jury in Boston last week by a 19-year-old New Bedford waitress, which connected Mr. Holmes with roadhouse parties, drinking bouts and trips to Boston hotels. Other accusations included his sympathy for and work with the Ku Klux Klan and as a vice crusader and dry raider.

Mr. Holmes called the charges a "frame-up." The Rev. Robert Roberts, Superintendent of the New Bedford District, prosecuted the case for the Church. On Saturday the conference dismissed the Rev. Kenneth H. Smith of Concord, Mass., a Holmes supporter, who had been on probation.

In a bare little room in the tower of the South Methodist Church in South Manchester, just under the belfry, the fifteen ministers debated the fate of their brother churchman. The proceedings had been surrounded by the utmost secrecy and guards protected the committee from intruders.

FRENCH SINKING FUND IN GOVERNMENT HANDS

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, April 12.—France's effort at raising funds by voluntary subscriptions to meet some of the amortization charges on her internal debt is being put on a proper basis.

While a committee is being formed, headed by Marshal Joffre, Cardinal DuBois, the Chief Rabbi and a large number of other eminent citizens, to take charge of the administration of the fund, to which the President of the Republic, all the members of the Government and the Presidents of the Senate and Chamber have already subscribed, the Finance Minister has opened a special department of the Ministry to take charge of the subscriptions and see that they are allocated to the use to which they are intended.

It is not expected that there will be any spectacular rush of subscribers. The French people are not like that. Creation of the organization will, however, it is expected, create a gradual inflow of gifts, especially bonds for cancellation. In the Senate this afternoon Senator Milan told the Finance Minister that the country was only waiting for assurance that the fund would be used without possibility of divergence from the stated purpose of it. M. Peret answered that he was taking every precaution to see this would be done. A provision for the creation and functioning of this voluntary sinking fund and specifying the use to which it is to be put will be included in the finance measures now before the Senate for final action.

CITES WIFE'S DEMANDS IN ANNULMENT SUIT

Husband Says Thirteen Ranged From Orders for a Coal Bin to a Ladder to Attic.

Lester J. Stevenson, superintendent of a department of the New York Telephone Company, attached a statement to his application to the Brooklyn Supreme Court yesterday for annulment of his marriage to Elsie M. Stevenson of Farmingdale, L. I., in which he set forth thirteen alleged commands and demands made upon him by his wife, most of which related to work he was ordered to do about their home. These orders, numbered 1 to 13, were:

Make a ladder to reach the attic.
Make screens, and get busy soon.
Buy me a washpole, so that I do not have to be disgraced by the neighborhood.
Attach a bell to the front door and save the expense of a possible broken window.
Make me a closet under the cellar stairs to protect my food from dirt and insects.
Make a trellis to hold the rose vine.
Encase the cellar stairs.
Box the front stoop.
Make flower boxes.
Make coal bin.
Make closet for paints.
Clean desk.
Make storm windows.

At the top of these instructions, Stevenson said, his wife wrote: "Here's my New Year's greeting to you. When the following necessities have been accomplished I shall try to show you the respect you are always looking for. Furthermore, until these things are provided, should any more expense be attached to the radio in any way, shape or form, I shall sell it for any price I can obtain."

They were married on Sept. 27, 1924, and Stevenson said that he received his wife's orders on Jan. 1, 1925. Whether or not these allotted tasks were performed was not disclosed to the Court. Their separation a year later, Stevenson alleged, was due to a shortage in his pay envelope, from which he had retained $1.50 for himself before handing the rest to his wife. She told him to depart, he charged, and aided him to pack his effects so as not to miss the "next train."

Justice William B. Carswell reserved decision on the request of Mrs. Stevenson for $25 weekly alimony and $400 counsel fees. Stevenson opposed these payments on the ground that his wife was a musician and got an income from piano pupils, and lived in the home of her father at Farmingdale.

MRS. WHITTEMORE SET FREE; CHARGES STAND

Lack of Evidence Brings Release, but She Agrees She Will Testify Against Gang.

Mrs. Margaret Whittemore, wife of Richard Reese Whittemore, gang leader now facing trial for murder in Buffalo, was freed yesterday morning on her own recognizance by Judge Francis X. Mancuso in General Sessions. The action was taken on the recommendation of the District Attorney, who said in a memorandum to the Court that "after careful investigation of the facts and circumstances surrounding the commission of the crime" with which she was charged, no evidence of her actual participation therein, could be obtained. The indictment charging her with complicity in the jewel robbery at Fifth Avenue and Forty-eighth Street still stands, however, and in discharging her from custody Judge Mancuso made it clear that she must present herself either for trial or as a witness against other members of the gang whenever the authorities required it. She signed an agreement to this effect.

Mrs. Whittemore was taken from the Jefferson Market Prison yesterday morning about 9 o'clock and was arraigned in General Sessions, Part 1, shortly after 10. She was calm and self-possessed and answered readily the few questions put to her by the Court. With her was her counsel, Harry Schulman.

After a short conference with the District Attorney Mrs. Whittemore left the building hurriedly and took a taxicab. Mr. Schulman said she would remain in New York for a few days and then go to Baltimore. Mr. Schulman added that she had not decided whether she would go to Buffalo to be near her husband.

In an interview yesterday morning Mrs. Whittemore declared that she would stand by her husband. "My love for him is undying," she said, "and there is nothing else and nobody else that counts. I shall never desert him. I never knew of the hold-ups my husband is alleged to have committed. I believed him to be a bootlegger. I always believed that. But I am his wife and it is unthinkable that any woman who loved her husband will desert him when he is in trouble."

Dr. Dorrance Gets Brooklyn Church.

The Rev. Dr. Samuel Martin Dorrance, vicar of the Protestant Episcopal chapel of the Holy Trinity of the parish of St. James, East Eighty-eighth Street, Manhattan, has accepted the rectorship of the Church of St. Ann, Clinton and Livingston Streets, Brooklyn. Dr. Dorrance was born in Providence, R. I., in 1883. He is descended from an old New England family and prepared for college at St. Mark's School. He was graduated from Harvard in 1905 and from the Episcopal Theological Seminary, Cambridge, Mass., in 1908.

LEGISLATURE MAY ADJOURN NEXT WEEK

Work Progressed so Speedily That Final Gavel May Fall Tuesday.

DEFER WET AND DRY FIGHT

But Senate and Assembly Go Through Crowded Calendars—Five Anti-Crime Bills Passed.

ALBANY, April 12.—The Legislature enters on its labors this week with its program so far advanced that many of the leaders are looking for final adjournment somewhat in advance of the date now tentatively fixed, Friday, April 23. George K. Morris, Chairman of the Republican State Committee, after conferences with Senator Knight and Speaker McGinnies, said tonight that there was a possibility that the lawmaking body might be able to complete its work on Tuesday or Wednesday.

The Karle-Phelps prohibition referendum bill was on the third reading calendar in the Senate but was not taken up tonight. It was put down as a special order for tomorrow and will have the right of way over all other bills on order of third reading. In the lower house the Wales-Jenks State enforcement bills will be taken up tomorrow on third reading.

The Assembly unanimously passed the bill sponsored by Assemblyman Davison, Republican, of Nassau, providing for a special crime commission as recommended by Governor Smith. The commission will have eleven members, consisting of two Senators, two members of the Assembly, the Speaker of the Assembly and the Temporary President of the Senate and five to be appointed by the Governor. An appropriation of $50,000 is provided for the expense of the investigation.

The commission will make a thorough State-wide study of crime and report back to the Legislature of 1927.

Closing Battles Pressged.

That the closing moments will see some sharp fighting, however, is an almost certain prospect. Bills on the legislative program of Governor Smith have had hard sledding this year and the Democrats will make another effort to get some of them out of the Rules Committee in the Senate and Assembly, not with any lively hope of succeeding but for the purpose of laying the foundation for their Senate and Assembly campaigns this Fall.

The reapportionment bill also will bring a battle on partisan lines, while undoubtedly there will be more than a skirmish over the proposed constitutional amendment which would authorize the State to cede or sell the barge canal to the Federal Government as a part of a deep waterway from Oswego to the Atlantic.

The Senate passed six bills of the Hughes Reorganization Commission, including the general bill which sets up the proposed new State Administration. This was also passed by the Assembly and now goes to the Governor. The others comprised measures providing for the organization of the Law Department, the Department of Agriculture and Markets and the Education Department. The batch included also a proposed constitutional amendment which was found necessary to establish the Governor as the official head of the Executive Department as well as of the State Department.

Five of the anti-crime bills sponsored by the Baumes Commission were also passed. The number included an Assembly bill which provides for the resentencing of defendants sent to prison as first offenders as a result of false information given to the court upon discovery that they are old offenders This now goes to the Governor.

Another bill adopted provides that appeals in criminal cases must be argued within ninety days after being brought. A third provides that where a decision of the Appellate Division has been made by unanimous vote, it shall require the consent of an Appellate Division Justice or a Judge of the Court of Appeals for an appeal from that decision to the Court of Appeals, except in cases where the conviction has been for murder in the first degree.

An Assembly bill which requires a defendant in a criminal cast whose defense is insanity to enter that plea upon his first arraignment in court was also passed and now goes to the Governor. The Senate also adopted a proposed constitutional amendment which would permit defendants in criminal cases, except where the charge is murder in the first degree, to waive a trial by jury.

Pass City Grade Crossing Bill.

The Senate passed two bills making appropriation for grade crossings elimination, one affecting New York City and carrying $50,000,000, and the other $20,000,000 for the removal of crossings up-State. The Senate also passed without dissent the supplementary appropriation bill which carries something less than $3,000,000.

There was a warm debate in the Senate over a bill which would give to the city of Watertown, which owns a municipal power plant, power to sell surplus energy to private interests.

Senator Straus accused the Republicans of being governed in their attitude by a desire to be helpful to the Northern Securities Company with which former Speaker H. Edmund Machold of th Assembly is prominently affiliated and of ignoring the wishes of the people of the city as expressed by the Watertown Common Council.

This drew a reply from Senator Knight, who attacked Governor Smith "for making misleading statements with regard to water power."

The bill was lost. The Northern Utilities Corporation has brought an injunction to prevent the sale of the surplus current to private interests.

SMITH VETOES FOUR BILLS.

All Provided for Changes in the Election Laws.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 12.—Governor Smith today vetoed four bills amending the election laws. One would have moved the date of primaries and State conventions forward two weeks. This was introduced to make it possible to hold State conventions at Saratoga Springs.

Another provided for a change in the method of counting the vote. A third did away with the double shifts of election officials in New York City polling places where under the present system the election inspectors are relieved when the polls close and a new set of officials are employed to canvass the ballots. The Governor said the present system has worked well and that he could see no good reason for a change.

The fourth bill provided that in primary elections in New York City only one ballot box should be used and this of sufficient capacity to hold the primary ballots of all parties.

SIX MEN ON TRIAL IN RAIL TICKET FRAUD

Conductors and Scalpers Said to Have Made Large Profits by Joining in Theft.

Three ticket scalpers and three conductors, formerly employed on railroads, were placed on trial before Federal Judge Edward J. Henning and a jury yesterday on an indictment charging them with having conspired to defraud various railroad companies out of large sums. Sixteen defendants were named in the indictment, but for ease and speed only six were called to the bar. One of the remaining ten is dead. The defendants on trial are Adolph A. Blum of St. Louis, Ross Frazier of Kansas City, and David Lyons of Chicago, ticket scalpers, and Charles D. Davis, George H. Wertz and William G. Yates, all of Newark, N. J.

Assistant United States Attorneys George H. Leisure and Alvin McK. Sylvester, who are prosecuting the case, said that the alleged conspiracy was one of the broadest and most profitable ever conceived. In 1915 the Interstate Commerce Commission began an inquiry into complaints by railroads of suspected thefts that were said to run into millions of dollars. After this inquiry was ended Captain Charles G. Bakcay of Portland, Ore., Director of the Bureau of Railway Intelligence, began a second inquiry that was diligent and secret.

At the end of his work he reported, it is said, that the thefts from the railroads through the alleged conspiracy would amount to more than $100,000,000. When the indictment was filed, it was asserted that some major defendants had adopted two principal methods of fraud, each of which required the connivance of the conductors. One of the methods was for the conductor, when he received a ticket from a passenger, to withhold it and sell it to a scalper at the end of his trip at from 10 to 40 per cent. of its value. The scalper, it is alleged, would then sell it at a small discount to a passenger. The other plan, it is alleged, was for the conductor to sell the tickets to some ticket seller of a railroad, who would sell it at its full face value.

YALE'S OFFER ON DANCE.

To Let Art School Hold the Event Annually at Christmas.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., April 12.—The Yale Art School's ball, planned for May 7 but abandoned because the Faculty thinks the work of the school would be interfered with at a vital time, may be held annually about Christmas time. The Faculty has made this suggestion and the compromise is being considered by the students.

University officials denied today that the canceling of the event had any relation to the limiting of dances in fraternity houses by the Faculty of Sheffield Scientific School.

BROOKHART OUSTED BY 45 TO 41 VOTE

party matter?" Senator Steck was asked.

"On that I have very definite views," he replied, but he did not tell what they were.

Forty Democratic Senators Now.

With Senator Steck added to their number the Democrats now have forty members of the Senate, the Republicans 55 and Farmer-Labor 1. The Republican line-up includes several irregulars who, by joining with solid Democratic ranks, could control decisions.

Captain Steck is 44 years old and married, with no living children. He was a Captain during the World War in the 109th Signal Corps.

The action of the Senate in unseating Mr. Brookhart is regarded as of considerable political importance and there is a rather general opinion that he will enroll as a candidate for the Republican nomination for Senator in Iowa in opposition to Senator Cummins, whose term will expire next March.

The time within which candidates for the Iowa Senatorial nomination must file notice of candidacy will expire April 27. Some of Mr. Brookhart's friends in the Senate heard that the Committee on Privileges and Elections, which had decided, 10 to 1, that he had not been elected Senator, would delay its report in order to prevent action on the case before the last day for filing notice of candidacy. The committee reported on March 27, however, and the case was taken up for consideration by the Senate the following week.

Rumors of Brookhart Threats.

The Steck-Brookhart contest has been complicated by the reports that Mr. Brookhart had threatened, if defeated, to seek to prevent the renomination of Senator Cummins, one of the oldest Republican members of the Senate and Chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary. Recently there was unconfirmed gossip that Mr. Brookhart had promised to "be good"; that is, to refrain from arousing the radical element in Iowa against Mr. Cummins if Captain Steck was not seated in his place.

What will happen now was a subject which Senators discussed with much interest after Mr. Brookhart had been unseated this afternoon. Captain Steck expressed the opinion that Mr. Cummins would defeat Mr. Brookhart if the latter entered the Senatorial primary. Some Republican Senators are not so confident.

The contest over Mr. Brookhart's seat in the Committee on Privileges and Elections, which set up elaborate vote-counting machinery of its own, turned largely on split ballots. Many votes obviously cast for Captain Steck by Republicans who intended to vote for all Republican candidates except Brookhart were thrown out by Iowa election boards because the voters had drawn on them curved arrows pointing to Steck's name.

The Senate committee decided that these should have been counted for Steck, but it was contended by most of the committee members that, even with the elimination of these ballots and giving Brookhart the benefit of every doubt, the result showed that Steck had been chosen by a small majority.

Republican radical Senators regard the ousting of Mr. Brookhart as a challenge to the radicals of the Middle West, and they predicted this evening that today's action of the Senate would have momentous consequences for the Republican Party in this year's Senatorial and Congressional elections.

Should Mr. Brookhart become a candidate for the Republican nomination for Senator against Senator Cummins, the personality of President Coolidge will play a prominent part in the primary campaign. Mr. Cummins will seek the support of the party electorate partly on the ground that he has been loyal to the Coolidge policies, while it is expected that Mr. Brookhart will criticize the President and appeal for support on the ground that Mr. Coolidge has been weighed and found wanting.

DES MOINES, Iowa, April 12 (AP).—Daniel F. Steck, Iowa's first Democratic United States Senator since the Civil War, is an Ottumwa lawyer who has taken little active part in politics and who was virtually drafted by his party in 1924 to oppose Mr. Brookhart in what most of his Democratic colleagues regarded as a hopeless cause.

The long fight before the Senate, which followed Iowa's closest election to fill a major office, started after a campaign in which many of Mr. Brookhart's followers believed he alone was responsible for his defeat through his open break with President Coolidge and other party leaders.

The Senate's decision promises an unusually hard campaign in this State for the Republican Senatorial nomination in the June primary. It also will result in one of the most active campaigns heretofore made by the Democrats in this State, in the hope they may gain still another Senate seat through the sharp split in Republican ranks that is expected to grow out of the Brookhart-Cumming fight.

WETS SPLIT MACHINE IN PENNSYLVANIA

Pepper Forces, Leaderless, Depend Chiefly on Society Women and Church Workers.

ADMIT VARE'S STRENGTH

But Assert He Will Lose if Half 850,000 Unregistered Citizens Turn Out.

PINCHOT DRAWS FROM BOTH

Governor Poses as Supporter of Coolidge Policies and Is Strong in the Coal Fields.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, April 12.—The wet issue saturates the Republican campaign in Pennsylvania, almost blotting out the hitherto predominant question of the tariff. It has brought demoralization to the party machine. The State Chairman has joined the wet cause and left the Pepper forces leaderless. They have been forced to prepare new machinery for the primary next month and the registration work in the coming days.

Pennsylvania is talking of nothing else. Every hamlet is busy politically, with the opposing forces preparing for the battle on May 18, when Representative W. S. Vare, as a wet, will ask the electorate to name him as the Republican candidate for the United States Senate. Senator Pepper and Governor Pinchot, supporting the dry side and strict enforcement, will be his opponents.

The wet question and the accompanying move to choose the boss of the machine as a Senate candidate have upset all calculations and divided the party into bitter factions. The wets have made so much noise that one gains the impression that Representative Vare will easily win the nomination. That, of course, is not at all certain.

Tactics of Mellon Forces.

The Mellon forces have devoted themselves thus far to getting the 850,000 independent and stay-at-home voters qualified for the November election.

If half of this vote qualifies and votes next month the wets will be defeated. The last two days for registration are next Wednesday in Philadelphia, Scranton and Pittsburgh, and Saturday in the second-class cities.

The wet voter registered last Fall. The wet leaders, controlling registration officers in the thickly populated cities, are planning to influence Democratic voters to change their party designation this week and enter the Republican primaries and help Representative Vare. It is reported here tonight that from 100,000 to 150,000 wet Democrats are counted to enter the Republican primary and help nominate a wet Senator.

The prediction was made today, following a conference of W. L. Mellon and other leaders, that half of the unregistered vote would qualify. This, they asserted, would rout the wet forces and bring success to the ticket headed by Senator Pepper for the Senate and John S. Fisher for Governor.

The Mellon forces face a tangled condition, with the Pennsylvania Railroad faction divided over Mr. Fisher and reported to be giving secret support to Edward E. Beidleman for Governor. In addition to this, the machine created to insure registration and the campaign for Senator Peper has been weakened by the neutrality of State Chairman Baker. He favors Mr. Beidleman for Governor and this is helping his running mate, Representative Vare.

Volunteers Aid Pepper.

As the result of the break-down of the machine, church workers, society women and temperance advocates are working as volunteers. They are pulling door bells and exhorting the dry forces to register. These same volunteer forces, in 1905, with the exposure of the Capitol scandal, succeeded in defeating the Penrose machine, and they are now counted on to repeat their victory.

Until the registration days are over there will be no speechmaking by the Pepper faction. The Vare supporters, on the contrary, are active everywhere in the congested districts and are especially devoting themselves, according to their own advertisement, to getting wet Democrats to become Republicans for the primary election.

Representative Vare is undoubtedly strong and is enlisting support in unexpected quarters. This is admitted by the Mellon forces, but they insist his strength is now at its height and that Senator Pepper is rapidly coming into the ascendancy.

While here today, W. L. Mellon issued a statement, saying in part:

"I came to Philadelphia to confer with those who are actively supporting the Pepper-Fisher-Smith-Woodward ticket. In doing so I am able to bring to the people of the eastern part of Pennsylvania the message that throughout all the western counties there is a rising tide of public approval of those candidacies."

The Fisher ticket, the statement said, stood "for the kind of economy and efficiency exemplified by the Administration of President Coolidge—a policy that could very profitably be applied to Pennsylvania."

Pinchot Poses as Coolidge Man.

Governor Pinchot starts tomorrow on a tour which will take him into the coal regions, and 50,000 miners are planning to greet him at Wilkes-Barré Tuesday night. He will be in the hard coal district for two days and then go into the western part of the State. His candidacy is weakening that of Senator Pepper greatly and at the same time, especially in the coal region, is drawing away votes that otherwise would go to Representative Vare.

In his appeals he is standing behind President Coolidge despite the fact that he has consistently attacked Secretary Mellon. His announcements pledge him to all the Coolidge policies and to the tariff.

In a discussion of the situation Governor Pinchot last night at Harrisburg said that "Vareism" and enforcement of prohibition were the only issues. He still declined to say that he would abide by the primaries. Failing to win in the primaries, it is said he will attempt to form a coalition with the Democrats, with himself as head of the ticket for the Senate and a Democrat for Governor.

THIEF'S ACT REVEALS SHORTAGE OF CLERK

The attempt of a burglar to sell a $1,000 bond which he had stolen from the apartment of Henry J. Mellen at 2,664 Grand Concourse, the Bronx, led to the discovery yesterday afternoon that Mellen was short $5,000 in his accounts at the brokerage firm of R. M. Grant & Co. at 115 Broadway, where he had been employed as a bookkeeper. Mellen was arrested on a charge of grand larceny and, according to Detectives McGann and Sullivan of the Old Slip station, confessed to the robbery. He was locked up at Police Headquarters and will be arraigned in court this morning.

Mellen was discharged from Grant & Co. on Jan. 1, according to the detectives, after a discrepancy had been found in his accounts. It had been his duty to redeem bonds presented to the firm for cancellation, and it was later learned that five bonds of Albemarle County, Va., had been redeemed and then taken by Mellen, without having them marked off on the company's books.

According to the detectives, Mellen said that he was able to manipulate his accounts so that the shortage of the bonds was not discovered. He sold four of the bonds, and the fifth was stolen when his apartment was robbed about a month ago.

The thief, or his agent, presented the bond for redemption at a Harlem bank yesterday afternoon and the bank officials being suspicious of the appearance of the man telephoned to Grant & Co. In the delay that followed the man who had the bond walked out of the bank, but Grant & Co. discovered the shortage in Mellen's accounts.

Mellen was married last September.

TO MAKE LAST FIGHT FOR 48-HOUR BILL

Mastick Will Press for Passage in the Senate—Women Attack Lobby.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 12.—A final effort will be made in the Senate this week to pass the bill sponsored by Senator Mastick, Republican, of Westchester, providing for a 48-hour working week for women and minors in industry. Senator Mastick is expected to move to discharge the Rules Committee from further consideration of his bill and if he can bring it out of committee it is certain to be passed.

During the closing days of last year's session, Senator Mastick succeeded in bringing a similar measure out of committee and having it passed only to have it defeated by one vote in the Assembly.

The Assembly already is on record as defeating an identical bill by Assemblyman Shonk, Republican, of Westchester. A motion by Assemblyman Bloch, Democratic leader of the lower house, to have the Shonk bill reported by the Rules Committee was defeated last week by seven votes.

If the Mastick bill should be passed in the Senate there is every indication that it will meet the same fate in the Assembly as last year. Both houses have adopted a resolution providing for a legislative investigation of the 48-hour proposal, along with many other labor measures.

Underwriters Start Fire Hazard Clean-Up Between 34th and Canal Sts. and Two Rivers

A campaign to clean up fire hazards in the district between Thirty-fourth and Canal Streets and the two rivers, which Chief Kenlon once characterized as "the worst in the city from a fire hazard standpoint," was started yesterday by the New York Board of Fire Underwriters.

Seventy-five inspectors from the various insurance companies met in the board room in the morning and received their final instructions for the drive from H. N. Kelsey, manager in this country of the London and Scottish Assurance Company, and Chairman of the Committee on Origin of Fires for Board, and William B. White, chief inspector. Charles F. Kerrigan, assistant to the Mayor, assured the inspectors of the cooperation of the city.

Presenting statistics of fires in the city during the last year, Mr. Kelsey said that firemen responded to more than 23,000 alarms, and put out 22,849 fires, an increase of 218 over 1924. In 1925 121 lives were lost at fires, a decrease of forty-one from the previous year.

Mr. Kelsey told the inspectors that in the district they were to survey there were 16,746 buildings occupied by mercantile and manufacturing concerns averaging about nine tenants to a building. He asked for special reports when they found establishments containing goods that showed evidence of having been through fires.

The survey is expected to last about two weeks.

WET ISSUE UP TODAY IN ILLINOIS PRIMARY

World Court Also Figures in Senate Contest of Colonel Smith and McKinley.

BRENNAN SILENT TO LAST

Sargent Bars Special Marshals Being Mobilized to Prevent Disorder at the Polls.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, April 12.—Following a campaign of scrambled affiliations and bitterness, particularly among Republican factions, the voters of Illinois, in the primary elections tomorrow, will register their choice of candidates for the national Senate and House of Representatives, as well as for State and county offices.

The campaign of Senator William B. McKinley and Colonel Frank L. Smith for the Republican designation for the Senate has attracted nation-wide attention, inasmuch as Senator McKinley's vote for adherence to the World Court was the chief basis of Colonel Smith's attack upon the Senator's candidacy for renomination. Senator McKinley, however, has declared that his opponent was dealing with a dead issue.

Both Colonel Smith and Senator McKinley claim victory by large pluralities, but observers believe the outcome is very much in doubt, with Mr. McKinley apparently having a slight advantage. Colonel Smith drew the hostility of organized labor while a member of the State Utilities Commission, but has the backing of Governor Small and the entire State Administration.

Prohibition Issue Injected.

For the first time since the advent of national prohibition, the Volstead law is an issue in the Illinois Congressional primaries. George Brennan, in a three-cornered fight for the Democratic Senate nominations, is running on a wet platform, and, in the Ninth District, two candidates for the Republican nomination for Congress, Representative Fred A. Britten and Mrs. Bertha Baur, have appealed to the wet vote.

Neither Brennan nor his opponents, former Representative James T. McDermott and James O. Monroe, have broken the silence which has characterized their campaign.

Mrs. Baur has made a vigorous campaign for beer and wine, accusing Mr. Britten of sidestepping in Washington on the prohibition question.

Mr. Britten countered with the charge that any attack on his wet record was too ridiculous to be taken seriously, and accused Mrs. Baur, a wealthy "gold coast" society woman, of attempting to buy his seat in Congress.

The Illinois Staatz-Zeitung, which in former years has supported Mr. Britten, has endorsed the candidacy of Mrs. Baur.

Chicago Representatives who seem assured of renomination without serious opposition include Madden and Hull, Republicans, and Doyle, Sabath and Kunz, Democrats.

A blanket endorsement is given to all Democratic candidates for Congress and the State Legislature by the Illinois Division of the National Association Opposed to Prohibition, because "without exception they favor modification."

Mobilization of Marshals Stopped.

Attorney General Sargent telegraphed an order today stopping the mobilization of special United States deputy marshals for service at the Chicago polls tomorrow.

Following receipt of the order from Washington, Acting United States Marshal Bert Pinkerton announced that the work of swearing in more than 1,000 special deputies was at an end and indicated that between 300 and 400 men sworn in earlier in the day would be relieved of their duties and authority.

Cancellation of the order for the special deputies was based by the Attorney General on the ground that the Federal Government had no official concern in party primaries even when candidates for United States Senator and Representative were to be chosen.

The wholesale employment of such deputies had been ordered by United States Marshal Palmer E. Anderson on the basis of threats of trouble at the polling places in the river wards of Chicago, in Cicero and in other districts.

The work of swearing in the Federal aids was proceeding at top speed at the Federal Building under the direction of United States Commissioner Henry C. Beitler when the Attorney General telegraphed, asking by what authority the special deputies were being employed.

Chief Deputy Marshal Pinkerton, acting in the absence of Marshal Anderson, replied that they were being employed under a Federal statute making it the duty of the United States Marshal to place guards at the polls in elections involving Congressional or Senatorial candidates, where they are asked for by citizens to prevent disorder.

Word then came back from Washington that the statute in question applied to elections only, not to party primaries, and the mobilization of Federal deputies was ordered to stop.

All Police Pressed Into Service.

Orders pressing every available patrolman into service to help keep the peace of the 2,270 polling places in the city were then issued by Chief of Police Collins.

Tonight the candidates speeded up to whirlwind pace for the finish of their campaigns. Republican factional organizations, which expect the same primary result to decide their long struggle for party control, intend to keep going in their drive for votes until within a few hours of the opening of the polls at 6 A. M.

The conflict for county control between the Crowe-Barrett-Thompson allies on one side and the Deneen and Lundin-Small organizations on the other has developed into a bitter struggle among the Republicans.

Control of the election machinery and the immensely rich patronage offices of the Sanitary District and the county are involved in the result. Both sides are jockeying for favorable positions for the coming big struggle over the Republican nomination for Mayor.

BURTON TUCKERS GET SON.

Start for New York From California With Second Child.

LOS ANGELES, April 12 (AP).—Birth of a second child, a boy, April 3, to Mr. and Mrs. Burton Tucker, whose marriage in 1923, when he was 17 and she 50, caused considerable discussion, was revealed here today with the filing of the birth certificate. The certificate gave the name of the child as "Burton Tucker," his father's name as Burton S. Tucker and age as 30 and his mother Olive S. Barnham, 36.

Servants at the Altadena home of the Tuckers said that the son had been born and that the couple left yesterday for New York carrying the week-old baby. The baby was born not in the Tuckers' expensive home, but in a small room engaged near the office of a doctor, to whom Tucker was known as "Tocker."

The other Tucker child is a girl.

WOMEN TO ENDORSE WADSWORTH TODAY

VISIT LEGISLATIVE SESSION

Hear Senator Knight Extol Achievements of Present "United Majority" at Capitol.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., April 12.—Republican women Vice Chairmen of the Republican State organization began a two days' conference here today, and tomorrow they expect to endorse United States Senator James W. Wadsworth Jr. for re-election. Mrs. Charles H. Sabin of New York, National Committeewomen, will make the speech calling for such action at a luncheon. Mrs. Florence E. S. Knapp, Secretary of State, also will be a speaker.

Women representing thirty-five counties came to Albany. During the afternoon they listened to Senator John Knight, leader of the majority in the upper house, who spoke on accomplishments of the present session of the Legislature.

After dinner tonight the women went to the legislative session and saw the two houses in action.

Senator Knight in his speech declared that "no session in years equals this one in point of major things accomplished. The biggest single act is the reorganization of the State Government along the lines laid down by the Hughes commission. All of these bills, which carry the committee's recommendations into effect substantially as made, have been passed or will be."

It had been possible to accomplish things in the Legislature "because of a united Republican majority," he added.

He referred to the Bouton bill making exemptions the same for State as for Federal income taxes. The executive budget and the four-year term for elective State officers he pointed out as other high spots in the legislative program. Reapportionment, he said, would soon be taken up.

"We declined to follow the Governor in his plan to plunge the State into the expenditure of vast sums of money to develop the water power of the State," continued Senator Knight. "We also declined to follow the Governor in his paternalistic plan for housing conditions. We believe that a better plan can be evolved which will make it possible, for persons with small incomes to live comfortably and decently in New York City."

At another point in his speech, referring to the Forty-eight-Hour Week bill whic hthe women in industry had demanded and which was backed by the Democrats, he declared an investigation is advisable.

"We believe," said Senator Knight, "the subject fully justifies the careful and painstaking investigation we will give it. We have had about 150 bills on this subject, and it is impossible for the Legislature in the short time it has to give proper consideration to such a big subject. It should be studied by a committee and recommendations made."

The Forty-eight-hour Week bill, although pledged by the Republican Party in its convention last year, has been killed in the Assembly. Final action is still to be taken on it in the Senate.

The Senator said the Republican program would be carried out practically as it was announced soon after the opening of the season. He invited a check up by the women Vice Chairmen.

Miss Sarah Schuyler Butler, who presided at the opening meeting this afternoon, told how active Republican women had been in New York City. She gave figures from a study she had made of the number of enrolled Republican women and men. Taking every 100 enrolled as a basis, she found that on an average 71 women were enrolled for every 100 men. On the Democratic side she found only 44 enrolled for every 100 men.

In Richmond County the number of Republican women was 84 to every 100 men, in Manhattan and Queens 70 women, in the Bronx 62½ and in Kings 63.

"This shows what women can do," declared Miss Butler.

The conference decided to ask the Rules Committee to report out the Child Marriage bill and adopt it.

Daily Style Hint For Well-Dressed New Yorkers

NEW YORK, April 13—Belying common belief, good style is rooted in good sense. Fashion is a benefactor, not a drill-master. For example, the single-breasted spring top coat is preferred to the double-breasted, because it does not look so heavy and thicket.

Moreover, the single-breasted top coat brings an agreeable and well-defined change in appearance from burly winter overcoats. The split-sleeve with bold seams down the side bestows a crisply spruce touch.

"Cheerio" blendings of light tan, as well as sprightly tones of gray are the correct effect this spring. Exclusive, but not expensive.

sions several developments about the couple materialized. One was that on Saturday morning, several hours before his marriage, Browning transferred realty valued at $162,000 to a corporation he controls. While associates were pointing out that this was merely in accordance with his real estate practice, other persons remarked that a bride has no dower rights in property held by a corporation.

Court Action Not Dropped.

Another development was that the legal tangle involving the new Mrs. Browning and her mother would not be cleared until Thursday. No moves by the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children are expected until then, but officials showed no disposition to drop the proceedings. The court action was started by the society in an effort to have the girl's mother removed as guardian. Officials would not comment on statements that Browning by his marriage automatically replaced Mrs. Heenan as guardian.

At 8 o'clock yesterday morning the only life about the newly acquired Heenan home in Clear Spring, near Cold Spring, was the sedate patrol of Constable John Lowry as he kept away the curious. The two-story frame dwelling containing fifteen rooms, was wrapped in silence until an hour later when William L. Heenan, automobile salesman of New Hyde Park, L. I., father of the bride, appeared.

After breakfast the red machine again appeared in front of the pillared porch and Browning put in an appearance. Heenan drove him down to the railroad station to await the 10:15 A. M. train for New York. Browning was the target for the attention of a group on the platform and he gave every outward evidence of rather enjoying the stir he created. He paced gravely up and down the platform, bestowing smiles on persons he recognized. A reporter approached him, and the smiles faded away. Browning then delivered himself of a line that he used throughout the day when his personal affairs were broached. It was:

"I have nothing to say, and I will not have anything to say."

High School Girls in Car.

When the Albany local pulled into the station, with the engineer and the firemen craning their necks out of the cab to see the "Cinderella Man," Browning swung spryly aboard the second car and took the third seat from the door. The car was about half full of young high school girls bound to the Peekskill schools from points up the river. Browning was an object of lively interest for the misses and produced no end of giggles.

The real estate man beamed at this. He looked benevolently about the car and chatted with his chauffeur John, who rents the sky-blue Rolls-Royce to Browning for a sum reported to be $800 a month. John occupied the seat with his employer. All the way down to the Grand Central Terminal Browning maintained silence. At Peekskill a reporter got off and purchased an armful of newspapers and a bar of chocolate, which he gave to Browning.

The realty broker read the newspaper stories of his romance and remarked to John, apropos of one story, "That isn't so bad, is it?" He appeared highly pleased also with a photograph of himself, asking John if he didn't think that a pretty good likeness.

Upon the arrival of the train at the Grand Central Terminal at 12:16 P. M., Browning, instead of having to walk through the gates with the other passengers and face a battery of cameras, was escorted to the baggage elevator and taken up a floor and out of the station without stir.

Browning drove down Fifth Avenue in a taxicab to the License Bureau at 230 West Twentieth Street, where he filed an application for the renewal of his pistol permit. He obtained authority to carry a pistol about a year ago when he alleged that a man had tried to blackmail him. From the bureau he drove in the taxicab to his office at 153 West Seventy-second Street.

Runs to His Office.

He paid off the cab just before it turned the corner of Broadway in Seventy-second Street. This was part of a strategem to defeat photographers who were following him in another cab. Browning leaped from his taxi while it stood in midstreet, and sprinted to the entrance to his office. He appeared to be highly excited when he hurried into his office on the second floor. He tore his hat off with a sweeping motion and shouted loudly at his office staff, "Lock the doors! Lock the doors! Don't let them in! Keep them out!"

An amazed secretary paused irresolute. Again the command came in lusty tones. The doors were locked, although nobody was trying to get in. Two reporters were sitting quietly in the office, and at a table were two contractors who were seeking a final decision from Browning on a contract.

Browning recognized the contractors, and said, "be quick about it now, it's only a $1,000 difference; time is money and I have a lot to do. Do you take it?"

The contractors looked dubious and Browning ordered every one out. He then turned to other business matters. A crowd which at times numbered 100 persons remained in front of his office throughout the day. They were largely women and young girls.

Luncheon was brought in to Browning from a near-by restaurant and then the Secretary bought all of the newspapers and piled them on his employer's desk. Browning read them all thoroughly.

Shortly after 4 o'clock four policemen and two detectives from the West Sixty-eighth Street Station appeared and began to clear the sidewalk. Up to that time Browning had made no move to shoo away the curious ones. The reason for the advent of the police was soon explained when the Rolls-Royce, with John at the wheel, drove up.

Drives to His Hotel.

After thirty minutes' wait, during which John carried down from the office to the car a shiny black suitcase and a box of Browning's favorite cigars—"E. W. B. Specials"—the broker himself appeared.

He faced the photographers and then stepped into his car. By his request a uniformed policeman rode with the chauffeur. Browning was alone in the tonneau. The car drove slowly up Amsterdam Avenue to Seventy-fifth Street and stopped at the Emerson Hotel, where Browning has had a suite for several years. A crowd gathered outside and two patrolman were kept busy keeping a lane open for passers-by.

Clothing and various parcels were removed from the hotel and taken down to Browning's office. At 6:05 P. M. the broker made a hasty exit to his car. It sped over to Central Park West and into the park at Seventy-second Street. The route lay south through the park to the Fifty-ninth Street and Fifth Avenue entrance, thence over to the Plaza.

The bride and her mother were waiting on the steps and they were soon in the car, which was headed north. At Yonkers a brief halt was made while John foraged for some sandwiches. When the car again resumed its journey Browning and his bride were munching the sandwiches.

Mrs. Browning after her visit to the office of Dr. Fox, at 114 East Fifty-fourth Street, where new bandages were applied to her neck, indulged in a little shopping tour with her mother. Several bulky parcels were lifted into the car when it stopped at the Plaza.

Transfers Some Properties.

Browning's transfer of property came to light through papers filed on Saturday in the Hall of Records. His marriage to the former Frances Heenan took place at 3:30 P. M. that afternoon at Cold Spring. The papers revealed the transfer by Browning of the five-story brick apartments at 304 and 306 West 146th Street, and the adjoining property at 68 Bradhurst Avenue, to the Edbro Realty Company of 153 West Seventy-second Street.

A four-story brick dwelling in Seventy-second Street, near Central Park West, also was transferred to the same company. The transfers were verified through a clerk in Browning's office, but no explanation for the transfers was given them. Later, an associate said that Browning had made it a rule to transfer property to the corporation when leases expired.

The assessed valuation of 304 West 146th Street is $37,000; the valuation of 306 West 146th Street is $70,000 and the Bradhurst Avenue property is assessed at $55,000. According to the Real Estate Directory, Browning holds title to the following properties in his own name: 31 West Seventy-second Street, 42 West Seventy-second Street, 126 West Seventy-third Street, 221 East Ninety-seventh Street, 25 and 27 West Ninety-ninth Street, 64 West 128th Street, 318 West 134th Street and 280 to 286 St. Nicholas Avenue.

The properties listed thus are apartment houses of the middle class. It is understood that in addition to these properties Browning holds several additional parcels under company names.

He picks a mashie at one shop, a brassie at another—purchasing only when his enthusiasm is aroused.

IN just such fashion have we choosen the woolens for our new Spring golf suits.

Some we found in Scotland, some came from England, others were loomed in this country.

There are grays, light and dark, smart heathers, soft browns, plaids, mixtures,—ideal golf colorings.

As we think of our golf suits we feel as did Sandy Herd when, playing at Coombe Hill near London, he made the twelfth hole in one.

The ball clicked from the club, rose higher and higher, aroused his opponent to grudging praise—"Good shot, Sandy."

THE veteran Herd (who has holed out in one on seventeen different occasions) did not answer until the ball had dropped on the green, rolled up to the flag, disappeared into the cup.

Pridefully he turned to his opponent—"A guid shot? Mon, it was pairfect!"

We feel exactly the same way about our golf suits.

ON BOARD THE S.S. CHANTIER, BOUND FOR SPITZBERGEN, April 12.—We have on board one man not listed by the newspapers when we left New York. He is Malcolm P. Hanson of the Naval Research Laboratory at Bellevue, District of Columbia, who has been helping us while on leave from his naval duties. Mr. Hanson was not entirely satisfied with the state of our radio equipment at the time of our departure and obtained an extension of his leave of absence until he can complete the important adjustments under way.

He will be transferred at sea if possible to a homebound ship, so that he can get back to his important work with the navy. Mr. Hanson is one of the best informed experts in the United States on aircraft radio as well as on recent short wave development, which has proved most effective in overcoming great distances without the use of tremendous power. The expedition is very fortunate to have had his services. The Chantier is not only equipped with the standard ship intermediate wave radio equipment, but has probably the most up-to-date experimental short wave set on any ship in existence. We are getting back regularly to the States now in the daytime as well as at night.

The plane is also being equipped with a short wave set especially designed by Mr. Hanson before our departure. This set was tried out by flight and found to be satisfactory. Our second plane will be equipped with a combined short wave transmitter and receiver especially designed and made and donated to the expedition by Robert D. Russel of Wellesley, Mass. It is a very fine set. Lloyd K. Grenlie and George H. James, former Marine Corps short wave experts, are doing some splendid work and we expect them, with the help of the amateurs throughout the United States, to make radio history this Summer in maintaining communication with the United States while we are in constant daylight.

This morning, about daybreak, the steering gear broke and we wallowed in a rough sea for two hours before it was repaired. At about this time the captain bellowed from the bridge: "All hands on deck; something is loose in the forward hold." That is the hatchway containing the great wing, and if a heavy barrel of gasoline should get loose, the wing would be smashed to pieces and the expedition would end then and there.

With visions of a wrecked wing, we hurriedly got the cover off the hatchway, which had been battened down for heavy seas. By that time nearly the whole ship's crew was gathered around the hatchway. It was opened with a nerve-racking, breathless suspense, so much are the hearts of all the boys wrapped up in the success of the expedition. But we found the wing O. K. and the gear securely lashed. Needless to say, there we had double lashings before on the gear we have quadruple lashings now.

BYRD THANKS WILBUR.

Polar Expedition Leader Answers Message of Good Wishes.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—Commander Richard E. Byrd, leader of the aerial expedition to the North Pole which sailed from New York City on the steamer Chantier last week, has wirelessed the following to Secretary of the Navy Wilbur in reply to a message of good wishes from the latter:

"We are all deeply grateful for your telegram of good wishes and will make every effort to be worthy of your confidence. We wish to thank you, and the Navy Department through you, for the fine cooperation accorded us.

"The personnel, made up largely of men trained in the Navy, Marine Corps and Shipping Board, have done and are doing splendid work and do not hesitate to put up with hardships.

"Cordial good wishes to you and the Navy Department, from the members of our Arctic expedition.

"BYRD."

The official returns from the second section of the election, held yesterday, show that he achieved an overwhelming success. It is believed that he will take the oath of office during the week. He is understood to be preparing a proclamation to the people.

NORGE MAY LEAVE TONIGHT FOR NORWAY

by Thursday morning. From Leningrad she will fly onward to Spitzbergen.

Among the Norge's complement are several hardened polar veterans who have followed Amundsen over sea and ice for years. One of the most interesting is Captain Wisting, who is returning to the Arctic after three weeks' vacation in temperate climates. He does not like publicity and refuses to talk or pose for photographs. He has been the captain of Amundsen's ship Maud, which has been in the Arctic for several years, and went to the South Pole with the explorer. As soon as the Maud reached Seattle he hurried to join the Norge and expects soon to be back among the icebergs. Dumpy and middle aged, with a nutcracker face, he looks harder than nails.

Another veteran is Olonkin, the Russian wireless operator, who has spent seven years in the polar regions on the Maud and other Amundsen ships. Like Wisting, he has been out of the Arctic only three weeks.

Yet another member of the party is Frederick Ramm, historian of the expedition. If the wireless works well he will send messages from the Norge while she is in flight.

Others aboard the airship are Antonio Zuattrini, representative of Mussolini's Popolo d'Italia, an experienced polar traveler, who has been on several expeditions with the Duke of the Abruzzi, and Quecioni, the Italian engineer, who saved the Norge once. She broke away in a storm at Rome in 1923. He happened to be aboard with a few men and steered her back to safety.

Only Fifteen Expected to Make Trip.

How many men will actually make the flight from Spitzbergen has not been determined. It will depend on the weather. If it is in the least threatening, the normal crew of sixteen will be reduced to bare enough to man the ship. How long the men can stick to their posts is being tested during the flight to Spitzbergen. The Norge, with the twenty-one men she brought here, was overcrowded. It is probable that fifteen men will make the polar trip, since sixteen is deemed an unlucky number by Italian, as thirteen is by Anglo-Saxons.

The windows and walls of the airship are of aluminum alloy, but the rest is protected only by canvas. It would seem that most of the men aboard are destined to suffer intense cold. The men are carrying no extra clothing. They are wearing black shirts, not because they are Fascisti, but because they do not expect to change them after the Norge leaves Spitzbergen till they reach civilization again. No shaving materials are being carried.

In the hangar today the Norge presented a much better appearance than she did in the air yesterday. She looked quite graceful in her fresh gray paint with dashes of color here and there. On her nose she wears the Fascist symbol. In the interior she carries above the steering wheel a small painting of Christ enthroned and above Lieutenant Reiser-Larsen's navigation table a four-leaf clover is framed.

Larsen said today he did not care what happened to the Norge once she got near Alaska. He anticipated no difficulty in landing her when her task was done. They would release the gas and let her sink once she got within striking distance of Point Barrow in case the fuel gave out.

The worst section the Norge has to negotiate is from Pulham, or perhaps from Oslo, to Spitzbergen, and both Major Scott, the English expert, and Lieutenant Reiser-Larsen stated they hoped that, once in the Arctic Circle the climatic conditions would be much easier. At Oslo there is only a mooring mast, and in view of possible unfavorable conditions the commander will prefer to loose off from there and seek shelter in the airship shed at Gatchina, near Leningrad.

No doubt is felt that the Norge will be strong enough while in the air. The main risk is that with her comparatively low top speed she may make so little progress in the strong wind currents between here and Spitzbergen that she will have to run perilously short of fuel before reaching the prepared landing base. Once she reaches Spitzberger, she will have in addition to a mast a three-sided hangar without a roof, which has been specially erected to shelter her from strong winds.

"We shall certainly collect data bearing on the use of the Arctic Circle as an airshap route to Far East," said Lieutenant Reliser-Larsen today. "But personally I am doubtful if such a route would be feasible in the Arctic Winter, owing to the low temperatures."

OSLO, Norway, April 12 (AP).—Lincoln Ellsworth, co-director with Roald Amundsen in the proposed North Pole flight in the dirigible Norge, says the airship will sail from Oslo for Spitzbergen at a low rate of speed so as to save gasoline.

Mr. Ellsworth added that no food would be cooked aboard the airship during the two or three days of trans-Polar flight because of the possibility of an explosion of the big gasbags. Hot food, in sufficient quantity for the entire flight, will be taken in large vacuum bottles.

SEES NEW EXPLORATION ERA.

Ellsworth Says Man Will Persist Till Arctic's Last Secret Is Won.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

OSLO, April 12.—At a luncheon given on Saturday at the American Legation in honor of Captain Roald Amundsen and Lincoln Ellsworth, the latter replied to the Minister's speech:

"I am deeply conscious of the significance of this occasion and proud to be an American—prouder today than I have ever been in my life before, because entrusted by my President to carry the flag of my country to the North Pole to be left there, together with those of Norway and Italy, in commemoration of the trans-polar flight participated in by the three nations.

"Through the ages to come may the significance of those three flags lying entwined together in the bleak Arctic waste ever remain a symbol between the nations who left them, because the spirit in which they were planted was one of devotion to the common ideal to seek, find and not yield in an effort to add to man's knowledge concerning the planet on which he lives.

"The significance of this occasion is deep with another meaning also, which cannot be overlooked. We are upon the threshold of a new era in exploration, which will be a milestone in the progress of civilization. For almost 400 years the Arctic zealously guarded her secrets against man's invasion, but man will ever persist until her last secret is won. What they will eventually be worth in dollars and cents no one can foretell, but the nations who paid the price with their manhood to learn them will not have paid in vain, for there is a gain in going exploring.

"The work in hand imperiously and ruthlessly demands many of the best gifts of manhood, both in body and mind. It tempers the will, for the conquest of difficulties is the school of manliness. But beyond that it is driving man forward on the path of evolution. Out of man's passionate curiosity as to the ways of nature has come this civilization we live in, and man is peering into space looking in every direction and striving to understand his Creator and Builder."

A radio letter received yesterday from Oslo by the Norwegian Consul General here gave these further details of the luncheon:

It was given by Minister Swenson for the purpose of handing to Amunson and Ellsworth an American silk flag from President Coolidge. The Minister requested them to plant the flag on the North Pole together with flags from the Norwegian and Italian Kings, expressing the heartiest wishes of the President and the whole American people for the Polar Expedition.

Captain Amundsen answered, visibly moved, with a speech in which he expressed his sense of the great honor the President had shown him and his companions and expressed deeply felt thanks for the great support his enterprise had found in America.

The Norwegian Prime Minister, the Minister of Defense and the Admiral in command attended the luncheon.

WILKINS CACHES ARCTIC SUPPLIES

Returns to Fairbanks After His Second Flight to Base at Point Barrow.

DID NOT SEE SMITH PARTY

Explorer Flew Over Dog-Team Route, but Observed No Overland Travelers.

FAIRBANKS, Alaska, April 12 (AP).—Captain George H. Wilkins, aerial Arctic explorer, and Carl B. Eielson, his pilot, were back in Fairbanks today after a second trip to Point Barrow with a load of supplies for future flights over the Arctic Ocean.

The aviators flew over the route which Alexander Malcolm Smith is following to Point Barrow with a dog team, but failed to see any trace of the Smith party, which was reported short of food.

The flight was made in the Alaskan, the smaller of the two airplanes of the expedition, which is equipped with a single engine. The supplies, mainly gasoline and oil, were cached at Point Barrow, where they will be picked up when the ocean flights begin.

The dazzling white monotony of the country, beneath, unmarred by any forestation or mark which would give a clue to their whereabouts, prevented the air explorers from locating the Smith overland party.

Wilkins and Eielson were in the air eight hours and ten minutes on their return, having wandered off their course.

For the second time Captain George Hubert Wilkins, intrepid Anzac aviator, has flown over the frozen waste between Fairbanks and Point Barrow, the most northerly point of Alaska. This time, however, he used a smaller and lighter airplane than the big Detroiter, on which he made his initial flight and took an airplane further north than any other man had ever flown.

The Wilkins expedition to the Arctic, sponsored by the Detroit Aviation Society, consisted of two airplanes, the Detroiter, a Fokker single-engined monoplane of the latest construction, and the Alaskan, a smaller airplane; tractor driven sledges and dog sledges.

The sledges were to be used to transport fuel and supplies to Point Barrow, and when they failed to function properly dog sledges were substituted.

A. Malcolm Smith, in charge of the dog sledges, by means of a portable wireless set has notified Fairbanks that he is short of provisions for his party and dogs, and Captain Wilkins's last flight was in an attempt to locate Smith, somewhere between Nenana and Point Barrow, and drop provisions from the airplane.

In making the two trips between Fairbanks and Point Barrow Captain Wilkins has demonstrated that airplanes can be used in the polar regions, and explorers and aviators who at first were somewhat skeptical of the outcome of his expedition now feel that he will meet with a considerable measure of success.

MOSLEY BELITTLES ADVICE OF FATHER

Calls Suggestion That He Give Up Part of His Wealth for Poor 'Entirely Farcical.'

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 12.—Oswald Mosley, the Socialist son of Sir Oswald Mosley, Bart., today described the suggestion made by his father that he should give up some of his wealth for his "more unfortunate followers" as "entirely farcical." "To do so," he declared, "would only be to perpetuate the present system, and it is far better to utilize the means we have, as my wife, Lady Cynthia, and I are doing, to advance the cause we have at heart. We have spent and are spending a great deal of money this way.

"When I first joined the Labor Party I was asked if I would give up my title, and I said I would. There may be difficulties about actually relinquishing it, but at any rate I can continue to be known as Mr. Mosley."

Asked whether his wife would care to say anything about her father-in-law's challenge, Mr. Mosley said:

"No, she thinks it is just a similar stunt than usual. It does not interest her, as she is too concerned with serious matters."

CAROL STILL IN PARIS; DIDN'T GO EASTWARD

Rumanian Foreign Office and the Legation Here Show Reported Return to Have Been Untrue.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

VIENNA, April 12.—After fifty hours' delay, apparently due to censorship, THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent in Bucharest, replying to urgent queries from Vienna, says he is unable to verify the Budapest reports that Crown Prince Carol has returned to an outlying province of Rumania.

Minister of the Interior Goga supplements the Foreign Office denial of the return with a denial of reports published in many European papers that the Averescu Government intends reconsidering the Crown Prince's abdication and restoring Carol. Calling this "pure legend," Minister Goga adds:

"This decision, passed with all the legal formalities, is too serious to be influenced by changes of Government."

The following letter was received by THE TIMES yesterday from the Rumanian Chargé d'Affaires in Washington:

The Rumanian Legation,
Washington, D. C., April 12, 1926.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

On Saturday, April 10, there appeared on the front page of your newspaper a long dispatch from your Budapest correspondent under the headline "Carol Speeds in Car to Rumanian Border With Woman and Aid." It was indicated that the former Crown Prince was planning a coup against the King and the present Government, either to seize the Government himself or to become the ruler of a new State composed of Transylvania and Hungary.

I am in a position to deny these rumors categorically. I happen to be in touch with Prince Carol and know that he has not left Paris lately. By a fortunate coincidence, he replied yesterday, from that city, to a cable concerning a private matter which I had sent him a few days ago.

YALE FACULTY AGAINST COMPULSORY CHAPEL

Goes Beyond Committee Report—Corporation Will Decide at Meeting in May.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, April 12.—Yale alumni today was surprised to hear that the general academic faculty has recommended that the corporation abolish compulsory chapel attendance altogether.

The vote rejects the recommendation of the Committee of Five, Professor Clive Day, Chairman, that Sunday chapel be abolished and daily required attendance be continued.

The academic faculty decided that if Sunday chapel is to be abolished daily attendance might as well go also. This was reported on Friday to the freshman faculty, which concurred. The combined report was presented to the corporation on Saturday.

The corporation has decided to make it the order of business for the May meeting. Meantime the corporation will consult with alumni in general and with alumni advisory boards and perhaps the Yale Clubs of New York, Boston and Chicago.

No secret is made of the wish of the corporation that if such an integral part of Yale is abandoned something specific should take its place. Suggestions for a substitute are being sought.

Undergraduate opinion today expressed itself violently in favor of the report. The Yale Daily News said in a leading editorial that it sounds the knell of required chapel attendance.

The Soviet Delegate Withdraws Because the League Meeting Is to Be Held in Geneva.

GENEVA, April 12.—Moscow seems obstinately determined that no official of any kind shall represent her interests on Swiss soil.

Following the refusal to send any one to the preliminary disarmament conference, the Moscow Government apparently has prevented President Kyinchauk of the Central Union of Consumers' Societies coming to the meeting of the preparatory committee of the League economic conference. Today M. Kyinchauk sent a letter to the Secretary General of the League saying that as it was arranged to hold the meeting in Geneva he concluded that it was desired to meet without Soviet cooperation.

PROVINCES RESENT BUCHAREST MASTERY

ALIENATED BY ROYAL SLIGHT

Since King Deposed Composite Government They Face Reign of Intrigue and Corruption.

WELDED INTO OPPOSITION

Peasants and Nationalists Form Again Lines Once Maintained Under Russia and Hungary.

In view of the conflicting reports concerning the troublous political situation in Rumania, and its threatened repercussions in Southeastern Europe, THE NEW YORK TIMES recently sent a staff correspondent to Bucharest to ascertain the exact facts. The second of a series of articles from the correspondent follows.

Special Correspondence THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BUCHAREST, March 31.—The dangerous possibilities of Carol's abdication lie as much in the situation preceding it as in the one it creates for the future in Rumania. The two, indeed, are intimately related. King Ferdinand's acceptance of his son's resignation is but one phase in a policy tending to disintegrate the country and weaken the crown, which he has consistently followed since 1919.

The prestige of the monarchy was high immediately after the war. The King, though a Hohenzollern, had led his country into war against the Central Powers. The result was beyond wild expectation. The union with all the Rumanians living under neighboring States was at last accomplished.

When King Ferdinand first visited the newly acquired territory of Transylvania Rumanians of all classes there flocked to see him, kissing his hand and weeping in a spontaneous outburst of loyalty.

Two years later Ferdinand returned to Transylvania to be crowned King of the new united kingdom, Greater Rumania. Only a few Transylvanians attended the ceremony. The great majority of his new subjects stood aloof in ostentatious protest. What was the cause of this sudden change?

New Provinces Disillusioned.

The Rumanians of Transylvania and Bessaarabia entered the new kingdom with hopes too high. Their view of it was falsely colored by their desire to escape the rule of their Hungarian and Russian masters. When they attained their object the glamour with which they had surrounded Rumania necessarily faded, vanished. They suddenly realized what every one else knew. The Rumania of their dreams did not exist. It had never existed.

Rumania, instead, appeared to them as a backward Oriental State, shot through with corruption. They discovered that the alien rule which they hated was of a higher, more Western type than that under which the old kingdom had developed. Their struggle as minorities had tended to strengthen their individual characters, while their subordinate position had saved them from corrupting influences.

It is doubtful if any people has been more exposed to powerful corrupting influences than the population of the old Kingdom of Rumania. The Turks ruled it first as a principality, with a certain autonomy, under native princes who paid tribute to the Sulton.

This was worse than the direct Turkish rule which other Balkan peoples suffered, for it directly encouraged intrigue and corruption among the Rumanian nobles themselves, instead of among the Turkish Pashas. The Rumanians most adept in these arts got the coveted positions of power there, just as did the Turks elsewhere.

Heritage of Corruption and Intrigue.

Then, for more than a hundred years, the Sultans farmed out Rumania to the highest bidders among the Fanariot Greeks of Constantinople. The Greek rule, says the Oxford "History of the Balkans," was "little else than organized brigandage," "instinct with corruption, luxury and intrigue," "the most calamitous in Rumanian history."

From these Fanariot Greeks descend, either directly or through intermarriage with native nobles, many of the important aristocratic Rumanian families of today.

Freed from the Turks but not from the Rumanian and Fanariot families who had thus gained power under them, Rumania was immediately subject to the same influences of intrigue and corruption from two other sources, Austria and Russia. She owed her very independence to the struggle between them for her strategic territory.

The great empire of the Danube basin could not allow the river's mouth to be held by Russia. Russia, driving toward the Port of Constantinople, could not let the road of her armies be barred by Austria. Rumania thus existed as a field of battle between the two great rivals.

Finally, Rumania's brief period of independence has coincided with the development of a product which has proved a growing source of corruption in States far more mature. That product is oil, and the old Kingdom of Rumania is rich in oil.

The new Rumanians were bound to be disillusioned on contact with a régime developed under such influences. Moreover, they, like peoples in all belligerent countries, were certain to criticize severely any Government faced with the great problems left by the war.

Majority Government Thrown Out.

Simple common sense urged that representatives of the new territories be included in this Government and made to share its enormous responsibilities, so that the inevitable popular criticism should be general and not regional. It was in the King's power thus to lessen or increase the natural forces tending toward disintegration.

Ferdinand began right. In November, 1919, he formed a non-party Cabinet of eight Generals, including men from Transylvania, Bessarabia and Bukowina, to hold elections. These resulted in a majority for the new elements in Rumania, the Nationalists and the Peasants, whose strongholds to this day remain respectively Transylvania and Bessarabia.

The Nationalists were originally organized to represent the Rumanian minority in Hungary. Their leader in the Hungarian Parliament was Alexander Vaida-Voevod. Ferdinand entrusted the Government to him.

Three months later the King forced the resignation of the Cabinet, while Premier Vaida-Voevod was absent in Paris, negotiating with the powers for recognition of the annexation of Bessarabia. As he had a few days previously, telegraphed the King that he had obtained such recognition from England and France, he was the more surprised at his sudden downfall.

M. Vaida-Voevod says that his telegram never reached the King but was intercepted by the Liberal Party, long the ruling power in the old kingdom, who, jealous of the new elements and fearful of the prestige which such success would give them, contrived through palace intrigue to overthrow him.

King Turns to Old Regime Men.

The King's action at this time marks the turning point in his policy. Since then he has governed the country exclusively through the politicians of the old kingdom. He has done this in a manner calculated to split the country between the old and the new, and to accentuate his own responsibility for this state of affairs.

The new Rumanians were shocked to see their Cabinet overthrown. They were indignant when the King replaced it with a Government under General Alexander Averescu, whose People's Party, up to that time, had not enough Deputies in Parliament to fill the Cabinet.

They were amazed when the General, in the elections he immediately held, swelled his tiny following into a parliamentary majority of a hundred. They were outraged when exactly the same process was repeated in 1922, the King replacing General Averescu with Joan Bratiano, leader of the eight Liberal Deputies in Parliament, who had as startling a success in the elections he then held.

The new Rumanians found themselves in the same position they were in before the war. They had merely changed masters. Instead of being governed by the Magyars and the Russians, they were governed by the old kingdom, by the same, if not cruder, methods.

Their local officials were replaced in many places by men from the old kingdom—cogs in the Bratiano machine. They were represented by Deputies, imported from the old kingdom, whose names they hardly knew.

Old Minorities Realigned.

They found these results achieved, first, by palace intrigues, and, second, by wholesale fraud, illegality and corruption in the elections. Responsible leaders of the Transylvanians and Bessarabians told me bitterly that the present Rumanian régime and the Rumanian elections were even worse than those of the Magyars and the Russians.

The result of such a policy was inevitable. Finding themselves minorities still, the new Rumanians fell back upon the very political machinery which they had developed through the centuries against alien rule.

The Transylvanian Nationalist Party, whose raison d'être should have ended when it won its long fight for union with Rumania, represents that region in Bucharest today as it formerly did in Budapest. The Bessarabian Peasants fight their cause in Rumania under the same leader, Professor Stere, who represented them in Russia.

Instead of their merging into the life of Greater Rumania, the Nationalists and the Peasants have become the centres of the Opposition into which the discontented elements of the old kingdom have entered. Instead of the country's political currents divided into a healthy, nation-wide struggle between conservatives and progressives, they have been split artificially along regional lines into a struggle between the old kingdom and the new territories.

SAYS BRITISH BLOCK AN INQUIRY ON SYRIA

Italian Diplomat Asserts They Back France, Fearing a Precedent on Mandates.

HE CALLS CONDITIONS BAD

But Admits That It Is a Difficult Problem for Any One to Govern the Druses.

ROME, April 12.—Marquis Alberto Theodoli, President of the Mandates Commission of the League of Nations, interviewed today at the Circolo della Caccia, denied reports circulated at Damascus and Beirut that the Syrian delegates had not been received when they came to Rome two months ago for the sittings of the Mandates Commission.

On the contrary, the Marquis said that he had talked with them for hours and that they had given him their petitions containing thousands of words describing their grievances against the French administration of the mandate over their country.

The veteran Italian diplomat began his remarks with the admission that the situation in Syria is very bad, but he added that there is little the Mandates Commission could do about it directly, because he says France and Britain hitherto have strenuously opposed the suggestion of sending a commission of inquiry there to investigate conditions on the spot.

The Mandates Commission, he goes on, is therefore "obliged to rest content with drawing up a strongly worded report to the Council at Geneva in which, while the French Government as such is not blamed directly for what has occurred in Syria, the action of some French officials in the administration of the mandate is emphatically condemned.

The report, he adds, also earnestly asks France to take action to restore peace in that part of the world and to do something to ameliorate the conditions of the Syrian people.

Another reason stated by Marquis Theodoli why the Syrians did not receive better treatment from the Mandates Commission is that all their suggestions as to the solution of their difficulties were completely impracticable. Their proposals were so extreme, he says, that the commission could not even take them into consideration; nor is France, he hinted, a little girl one can take by the ear when she does wrong.

"The Syrians," he added, "are nothing but big children. It must be admitted, however, they undoubtedly have just grievances." On the other hand, he knows from his personal experience in that country that the Syrian Druses are not easy people to govern.

"In all that time," he said, referring to his eight years spent in Turkey, "there always was trouble of some sort, either in Syria, the Yemen or Mesopotamia. The inhabitants are a warlike people and making trouble comes as easy to them as falling off a log. But I repeat we cannot close our eyes to the fact that French officials have been gravely lacking in tact and political flair in the administration of their mandate over Syria."

Says Italy Would Not Take Syria.

Marquis Theodoli ridiculed reports current in Cairo and Constantinople that France would be compelled for financial reasons to give up her mandate over Syria and that Italy might take it over.

"No, never," he said, "that would be a confession of impotence which a nation like France could not make and retain its position in the world as a first-class power.

"I very much doubt whether Italy would accept the mandate even if it were offered. Italy needs colonies to absorb some of her population, which is increasing at the alarming rate of half a million yearly; she needs territory where she can send surplus agriculturalists and peasant to till the soil in peace. This is for her a problem of first-rate importance which must not be forgotten by her neighbors. But Syria would not be suitable."

Druse Losses Reported Heavy.

PARIS, April 12 (AP).—Havas dispatches from Beirut, Syria, says the Druses lost 700 men in the recent fighting between the French and tribesmen in the Hermon region, southwest of Damascus. The French losses are placed at eighteen killed, three of them French regulars, and forty-eight wounded.

The movement of submission by the tribal chiefs in the Hermon area is declared to be growing.

Damascus advices say two engagements, at Kadem and in the outskirts of Tarze, between "French partisans and groups of bandits" resulted in the dispersal of the latter, with the loss of seven dead.

In the Aleppo region, squadrons of mobile guards, aided by French aviators, attacked bands about Teilhamad, southwest of Marim.

"The bandits fled after a violent combat, leaving nine dead, including Soubhi Ladkani, the bandit chief," the dispatch adds.

SOVIET PLANS TO HALT COAL PEACE IN BRITAIN

Moscow Seeks General Strike—Draws Up May Day Program —Attacks Unity Here.

RIGA, April 12.—The Executive Bureau of the Soviet Trade Union International in Moscow has held a special meeting for the purpose of deciding in what form it is possible to support the British miners in the event of a conflict with the mine owners, and it decided to do its utmost to prevent a peaceful settlement, it is said.

M. Lozosky was entrusted with the general management of the campaign, and his immediate task consists of agitating among the English trade unions, especially by gaining influence in the General Council of the British Trade Union Congress.

Further efforts are to be made to involve the British transport workers, particularly the railway men.

The prevailing idea in Moscow is supposed to be to promote a general strike.

The appeal by the Trade Union International to workers of the world, in laying down the program for the coming May Day celebrations, lays stress on the necessity for the workers of every country to do their utmost to back up the "miners, metal workers and others of the English proletariat."

War cries accompanied the appeal. One demands war against all kinds of class cooperation, especially the latest American form.

MEXICO CITY, April 12. — Telegrams from the State of Jalisco to El Pais state that a group of Catholics on their way to the shrine at Guadaloupe were assaulted in the railway station, where a number of shots were fired. No report of the number wounded is available, but the train shows the marks of a number of bullets.

Mgr. Orozco, accompanied by some high functionaries of the Catholic Church, were on board the train, but escaped injury.

AIR BOMB IMPERILS ANDREWS IN PEKING

CHANG'S TROOPS ADVANCE

Night Firing Only 15 Miles Away—Wu Pei-fu Appears to Spurn Command of Kuominchun.

PEKING, April 12 (AP).—Dr. Roy Chapman Andrews, American scientict and explorer, had a narrow escape from death here today.

While at the Hsichimen railway station outside the east gate of the city, arranging for the transportation of supplies for his fourth expedition into the Gobi desert, he was caught in an air raid conducted by the Chinese allied forces against the Kuominchun.

As the planes came overhead Dr. Andrews ran under a freight car. The planes dropped several bombs, two of which fell twenty feet from the explorer's refuge, spattering the sheltering car wheels with fragments of steel.

Five Chinese were killed and nine injured in the raid, the object of which apparently was to destroy the Kuominchun (National armies) equipment parked on the railway sidings.

China is without a President and virtually without a Government. Marshal Wu Pei-fu still is hesitating to take over control. Today he sent a representative here to consult with the authorities about it, but he said he must consult with Chang Tso-lin, his ally.

Tsao Kun, former President, released from captivity by the Kuominchun coup on Saturday, is reported to have gone to Tientsin.

Foreigners Flee From Battle.

PEKING, April 12.—Firing east and south of Peking was continuous last night at a distance of fifteen miles.

A party of foreigners proceeding to Tientsin by motor car this morning, and a number of post office cars, were stopped outside of Tungchow and compelled to return.

Fighting was visible for three miles ahead, and shells and spent bullets fell in their immediate vicinity.

Four airplanes bombarded Peking this morning, dropping forty bombs. It is known that the casualties were eight killed and twenty wounded. Chinese reports are that twenty-three were killed and one hundred wounded.

The object of the attack was the Sulyan Railway, which runs from Kalgan northward and along which the Kuominchun hope to make their final retirement.

There was great apprehension this afternoon that invading troops would enter the city, and many Chinese took refuge in the Legation Quarter.

Owing to the disappearance of the Prime Minister, Cabinet meetings have been suspended.

All seems quiet outside the city tonight.

Wu Denies Deal with Kuominchun.

TIENTSIN, April 11 (AP).—General Wu Pei-fu, from 1922 to 1924 the military head of the Peking Government, has refused to heed the call of the Kuominchun to take over the Government once more.

A telegram received here from Hankow Saturday by the Tientsin representatives of General Wu said that Kuominchun generals sent their representatives to Hankow and expressed an earnest wish to surrender to General Wu. The latter's reply demanded the resignation of the National Army generals and ordered them to proceed to Hankow to await instructions.

A second telegram received this afternoon states that no credence is to be attached to reports that the Kuominchun are cooperating with either General Wu or Chang Tso-lin, the Manchuria dictator, erstwhile enemy of General Wu.

The report adds that General Wu has telegraphed Marshal Chang Tso-lin and General Chang Tsung-chang, urging them not to believe rumors that he had effected an alliance with the Kuominchun.

Hitherto the troops of Marshal Chang Tso-lin have not been dispatched beyond Lutai, but it was considered noteworthy that 6,000 passed up to the front on Saturday under General Wan Fu-lin, formerly Frontier Commissioner of Manchuria.

Swedan Grants Loan for New Ship.

WOULD CUT PROJECT FOR COUNTY ROADS

Westchester Commission Wants Seven Miles Omitted Because of Excessive Land Costs.

REPORT DUE ON MONDAY

Mamaroneck River Parkway and Tarrytown-White Plains Highway Are Affected by Proposal.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., April 12.—Terming the prices asked for rights of way on sections of the Mamaroneck River Parkway project and the proposed Tarrytown-White Plains Parkway "unwarranted," the Westchester County Park Commission, in a letter to the Board of Supervisors, recommended today the abandonment of approximately two miles of the Mamaroneck River Parkway and approximately five miles of the cross-county parkway. The letter was referred to the Committee on County Parks, which will meet and report next Monday.

The Tarrytown-White Plains Cross-County Parkway was authorized during the early part of this year, the work to cost approximately $1,600,000. This parkway would have run from the Hudson River, across the Sawmill River Parkway and the Bronx River Parkway and connect with the Mamaroneck River Parkway between Westchester Avenue and Silver Lake Park in White Plains.

Jay Downer, chief engineer of the Westchester County Park Commission, said today that estimates made when the project was first discussed showed that the land necessary to construct a 200-foot-wide parkway, including the elimination of several grade crossings, could have been acquired for the sum named then. Since the money was appropriated, however, the demands for the land necessary have increased to such an extent that approximately $700,000 more than the $1,600,000 appropriated would be needed just to acquire the land.

V. Everit Macy, President of the Park Commission, in his letter recommended that the cross-county parkway be abandoned, with the exception of a section running from the State road at Thompson Avenue across the Bronx River Parkway to Silver Lake Parkway, approximately a half to three-quarters of a mile. This would link up with the Mamaroneck River Parkway.

On the Mamaroneck River Parkway project it was recommended that a section about two miles long, from the Boston Post Road to the pumping station of the Interurban Water Company, at Winfield Avenue, be abandoned. For this project an additional $200,000 had been appropriated in January. Mr. Downer said, however, that land which was needed to run the parkway from the pumping station across to connect with the new cross-county parkway from Yonkers to Rye had formerly been held at 10 cents a foot, but that the owner had raised the price to $1 a foot and had refused to reduce this figure. That abondonment of this section will mean that the Mamaroneck River Parkway will terminate for the present in Saxon Woods Park, a short distance from the cross-county parkway, and an outlet into this parkway will probably be planned at a later date.

FIRE COLLEGE OPENS.

The New York Fire College opened yesterday for its fifteenth year. The college is in the quarters of an abandoned engine house at 153 West Sixty-eighth Street. There will be sessions four days a week until June 15, when the school takes a Summer recess.

The opening session was attended by twenty young lieutenants, recently promoted. Fire Chief John Kenlon, President ex officio of the college, delivered the opening address. He told the student-officers that the courses were not for their personal advancement, but that the knowledge gained at the college was for dissemination among the firemen under them.

The Faculty of the college consists of Deputy Chiefs Thomas F. Dougherty, Edward J. Worth, John Davin, John J. T. Waldron, Richard J. Marshall, Henry B. Helm, Battalion Chief Charles W. Rankin and Inspector Leo Liebermann of the Fire Prevention Bureau.

Stand in Battery Park Burns.

The octagonal shaped refreshment stand in the centre of Battery Park was destroyed by fire of undetermined origin yesterday morning. The loss in equipment amounted to $4,000. The stand was built and owned by the city, which leased it to George and John Villias, in whose family the concession has run for twenty-eight years.

YALE BEGINS SURVEY OF UNDERGRADUATES

Seeks by Questionnaire to Place Students on the Right Road to Life Work.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., April 12.—Yale today started a survey into the history and possible future work of undergraduates in order to avoid waste and duplication in student effort and to assure the placing of the graduate in the life work for which he is best adapted.

It is being directed by Albert Beecher Crawford, head of the Bureau of Appointments. Manufacturing, public utility and industrial corporations have urged the questionnaire to place the college course on the most efficient possible basis.

While the survey has been criticized by some of the undergraduates as indicating a paternalistic tendency, it has the firm support of the Faculty. A time chart has been sent to each student calling for the completion of the questionnaire by April 20.

"The information sought is of obvious value to the university," Mr. Crawford has declared. "As a result of such group studies other than scholastic criteria for admission may possibly be utilized to a greater degree in future than heretofore.

"This survey affords students the opportunity of expressing their views and educational demands in such a way as to assure them of serious and sympathetic reception.

"The time chart is a particularly important part of the whole investigation. It will give students an opportunity of demonstrating the value of extra curricular work and the fact that participation in such activities is not necessarily incompatible with or detrimental to scholastic achievement.

"It is again emphasized that the study involves no prying into individual cases. Group, not personal, conclusions are sought, and the use of numbers will protect the students' personal anonymity."

BIG PHONE MIGRATION NEAR.

20,000 in New York Expected to Move With Owners May 1.

The New York Telephone Company expects that this May 1 will be one of the biggest moving days in the history of the city, and therefore expects to receive about 20,000 notices of telephone removals, 2,000 more than in the moving period of last October. From now until the middle of next month workmen will be busy changing installations, varying from a single instrument to private exchanges with hundreds of lines and extensions.

To round up wandering messages hundreds of special operators will be stationed at strategic positions on the telephonic avenues of speech. They will greet foot-loose messages with a "What number did you call, please?" and try to speed them on their way.

riot act and laid down "martial law" regulations at the same gate where the act was read in 1919 and 1912, on the occasion of other strikes.

Following her arrest, Miss Sandowsky was taken to the Bergen County Jail at Hackensack. She was out on a 90 days suspended sentence, having promised not to return to the picket line.

Police Judge Davidson, who held Weisbord in $30,000 bail in connection with the children's parade which was broken up by the Passaic police last Saturday, was not informed of the charges against him until twenty minutes before he was arraigned. He was arrested last Saturday. Detective Tottospack, under the cross-examination of Sigmund Unger, attorney for Weisbord, admitted in court today that he had no warrant when he arrested Weisbord and did not read the warrant to him until today.

Three Charges Drawn Up.

Judge Davidson held that a prima facie case had been made out against Weisbord for inciting to riot and fixed bail of $10,000 on this charge. Charges of introducing Communist literature and inciting against the Government were then read to Weisbord and bail was fixed at $10,000 in each case. A large crowd of strikers waiting for a glimpse of Weisbord was disappointed when their youthful leader was spirited out of a side door and hurried to the Paterson jail.

The Passaic police stopped all picketing today at the mills and those who attempted to rally the strikers were thrown into patrol wagons and rushed to police cells. Chief of Police Richard O. Zober deprived Ray Doyle and Jack Wallace, respectively reporter and photographer of The New York Mirror, of their police cards and ordered them out of town "never to return." Zober charged that the tabloid paper published a report that he trampled on the American flag during the disturbance last Saturday.

Tonight the police of Garfield lodged warrants for the arrest of Weisbord at the County Jail on charges of inciting to riot, conspiring to prevent the proper administration of law and inciting to injury of property. It is reported that similar warrants are being prepared by the authorities of Clifton and Lodi. If Weisbord is held in $10,000 bail on each charge as he was held in that amount on each accusation today his bail will amount to $120,000.

Unrest in Schools.

A spirit of unrest prevailed today among the school children in the strike zone. Hundreds marched on the streets shouting "No school today!" and picketed the schools to prevent their classmates from entering. In Passaic it was estimated that 1,000 of the 6,000 children were absent. Clifton and Garfield schools also felt the effect of the "strike." School principals said the attendance would be normal in a day or two.

Lodi police appeared on the streets today for the first time with nightsticks. They have hitherto maintained order without the use of clubs, but last week they were cuffed and knocked down in a demonstration of strikers.

STOCKS HIT HERE AS CUBA RECOVERS

CALM RESTORED IN CUBA

Run on Banks Ceases and Deposits Resume as Money From Here and Canada Arrives.

Normal banking conditions have been restored in Cuba following the run of Saturday, according to cable messages received yesterday by large New York banks, but the disturbance was capitalized in Wall Street by heavy selling of stocks, which resulted in a break of from 1 to 12 points in prices on the Stock Exchange and an advance to 5½ per cent. in the rate for call loans, as against a 4 per cent. basis at the close of last week.

At the offices here of the National City Bank and the Royal Bank of Canada, whose branches were subjected to the run last week, it was said that ample funds were at hand or on the way to meet the demands of all depositors.

While there were some further withdrawals yesterday morning, the excitement has subsided and in many cases those who took out their money on Saturday were redepositing it yesterday. Estimates of the amount of money transferred to Cuba ran as high as $100,000,000, but most bankers considered this figure excessive. The Federal Reserve machinery provided about $43,000,000, and further amounts are on the way from several parts of the United States.

While stocks of the Cuban sugar companies and other corporations having large interests on the island ranged lower, the decline was general in the market, extending to stocks on which the Cuban situation could have no apparent bearing. Weakness was general in the motors list, Hudson reaching a new low point for the year at 63¾ and closing at a net loss of 6¼ points, at 65.

United States Steel declined 1¾ points, closing at 118⅝, while du Pont lost 2½, closing at 198¾. The railroad, baking and other industrial issues all were lower on what appeared to be mostly professional selling, which met with little buying support.

In the Cuban issues, declines occurred in Cuba Cane Sugar preferred, which dropped to new low levels, and in Cuban-American Sugar. International Telephone and Telegraph ranged lower, despite the fact that this company's Cuban holdings represent only a small proportion of its total properties. Shares of the Cuba Company, which owns the Cuba Railroad Company, were weak on reports that a railroad strike was about to be called on the island. It was reported late in the day that a strike was likely to be called this week, but that it would be unlikely to affect either the sugar or the banking situation in Cuba.

Cause of the Panic.

Bankers here declared that the run of last week was started by malicious stories, the origin of which authorities in Cuba have been unable to determine. The rumor was that American banks, owing to the depressed condition in the sugar industry, were about to abandon their policy of leniency and call loans and foreclose mortgages, and that all this would lead to the proclamation of a moratorium. Merchants began withdrawing deposits from the banks about Thursday, which led to gossip, and the hysteria reached its height on Saturday. President Machado has announced that there will be no moratorium, and President Charles E. Mitchell of the National City Bank has cabled that even if a moratorium should be declared his bank would not take advantage of it, but would pay all depositors who wanted their money.

The basic situation regarding Cuban industry has not changed, according to New York bankers, who said that depression had existed for months as a result of low prices and difficulties caused by the high American tariff. The bank run, they declared, merely directed public attention to the situation and was seized on by professional operators for a drive against stocks. If anything, bankers believe that a favorable turn has arrived in Cuba. Plans for a reduction in production, Government assistance and banking cooperation are expected to bring substantial relief in the near future.

Intensive activity was reported yesterday in shipping money throughout Cuba to the various branch banks, and the run is regarded as a closed incident.

The Cuban situation was responsible for the calling of about $35,000,000 of loans in the New York money market, which caused the advanced rate. It was explained that the Royal Bank of Canada and other institutions operating in Cuba carry large deposits in New York and were calling on these, which caused banks here to cut down in their advances to brokers. It was apparent that there was no basic change in the credit situation, as time money continued to loan at 4% per cent., with bids as low as 4¼ per cent.

HAVANA, April 12.—With the arrival here today of $43,000,000 aboard the cruiser Cuba, with fifteen members of the Atlanta Federal Reserve Bank and postoffice guards, Havana settled down with little excitement in banking circles. The National City Bank of New York made extensive preparations to combat an expected run, but no effort was made by creditors to withdraw funds. This also was the case with all branches of the Royal Bank of Canada on the island. A discharged employee of the Royal Bank, named Reyes, was arrested, accused of spreading a false alarm that the bank was in bad financial condition. A reporter for El Imparcial, a Spanish language newspaper which published the alarming reports, is being sought.

The Interior Department will prosecute the real estate firm which advertised in the papers yesterday with scare heads, announcing "Banks Are Weakening."

Americans, Cubans and foreigners all rallied to the support of the Royal Bank this morning. A special train left for the interior of the island with more than $10,000,000 to protect bank branches in the interior cities.

The Brotherhood of Railway Men issued an ultimatum tonight that a walkout would be called on Wednesday night at 6 o'clock unless the agreement made with the union many months ago is put into force at once. If the strike is called 20,000 men will be out.

Storm Threat Delays Los Angeles.

Special to The New York Times.

LAKEHURST, N. J., April 12.—Indications of a storm blowing up the coast prevented the naval dirigible Los Angeles being taken from the hangar this afternoon. If the weather forecast is favorable, Captain George W. Steele said, the airship will be moored to the mast some time tomorrow and will make a trial flight late tomorrow afternoon or early Wednesday.

CHURCH WANTS TREATY WITH TURKEY RATIFIED

The Congregational Council Asks Favorable Action by Senate on Lausanne Compact.

Ratification of the Lausanne Treaty with Turkey, now before the United States Senate, was strongly urged by the Commission on International Relations of the Congregational National Council at a meeting held at the council's office, 287 Fourth Avenue, yesterday afternoon.

A copy of the resolution was ordered to be sent to the Secretary of State, the Chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and to President Coolidge, who is the Honorary Moderator of the council.

It was pointed out that the Congregational Church had the largest number of missionary workers in Turkey of any denomination, 114 of the 127 foreign missionaries in that country belonging to the Congregational faith.

PROMISES MORE OF JOSEPHUS

Possessor of Slavonic Text Will Publish It in English.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 12.—Further disclosures concerning the discovery of a Slavonic version of the writings of Josephus which has thrown a new light on the historic character of Christ, are promised in a month's time by Dr. V. Burch, lecturer on theology at the Liverpool Cathedral.

It is understood that the old Slavonic manuscripts are in Dr. Burch's possession, and that it is he himself who is engaged in preparing a full edition of the new text of Josephus in English.

The world of scholarship, according to Dr. Burch, has unaccountably overlooked the importance of the discovery made some years ago. He states that he is not at the moment able to assess the full value of his researches, because the ultimate conclusions must depend upon extensive literary work in several of the ancient languages.

FINDS NIGHT CLUBS LINKED WITH VICE

ASKS SINGLE STANDARD LAW

Report for 1925 Criticizes Enright's Regime, but Calls Conditions Worse Abroad Than Here.

The Committee of Fourteen, which was organized in 1905 to fight commercialized prostitution, made public its annual report for 1925 yesterday, emphasizing that prostitution and liquor selling have become associated under prohibition. It was this connection, the committee pointed out, that caused its organization against the old "Raines law hotels." The connection today is a close one, it said, but not as close as that which existed twenty years ago.

Finding that the present situation is a result of the gradual growth of night clubs and speak-easies under prohibition, the report went on:

"The committee's investigations disclose that prostitutes can be found or obtained at many of the smaller night clubs, or 'speak-easies,' which are open after midnight, by those who secure admission. In many instances these women act as nominal hostesses, while if extra women are wanted to entertain patrons, the management secures them from those employed before midnight as instructresses in dance halls.

Prosecution Difficult.

"The double violation of law—illegal sale of liquor and prostitution—in these places has caused a conflict as to court procedure; there being no State liquor law, the police must act under the Federal Volstead act. If there is to be an adequate search and seizure, the Federal law requires a search warrant. The delay subsequent upon securing it prevents the arrest of women by whom the officers may have been solicited when obtaining evidence of illegal sales of liquor.

The police also find it difficult to get evidence against these places, according to the report, because they lack the funds necessary to spend for "entertainment."

"We are impressed," the report said, "by the incitements furnished by certain dramatic productions and moving pictures; also by the mass of cheap and degenerated printed matter which is within the easy reach of the immature boy and girl. Beyond a question we have to reckon with a trend that is depreciating American culture, good taste and our ideals of civil responsibility."

The report criticized former Police Commissioner Enright for abolishing the district vice squads and replacing them two years ago with the Special Service Division, which Commissioner McLaughlin has now abolished in favor of the old system. It said that the "unreliability" of the men on the Special Service Division "may be attributed in part to the temptations of the prohibition situation."

Cites Arrests of Policemen.

"Certainly," it continued, "never within the knowledge of the observer (the Secretary of the Committee), have there been so many police officers arrested for dereliction of duty, or transferred from plainclothes work to patrol duty because of failure to hold the confidence of their superior officers."

Former Commissioner Enright, according to the report, created a "difficult situation" for the committee by ordering the Police Inspectors not to report to the committee any action taken on its complaints, and not to work with the committee's staff. The report also criticized the investigation of the committee by former Commissioner of Accounts Hirshfield at former Mayor Hylan's direction.

Only one addition to existing laws, according to the report, is necessary to aid its fight against commercialized vice, and that is a law to establish the "single standard," providing penalties for the men as well as women. It urged the adoption c. "the customer amendment" to the criminal code.

The report said that the committee's secretary, on a recent European trip, found there was much more open vice in London, Paris, Berlin and other European cities than in New York.

DENY BIG POULTRY PROFITS.

Witnesses in the Ottinger Inquiry Defend Square Deal Company.

Three witnesses at the inquiry by the Attorney General of alleged combinations of wholesale dealers in poultry to advance prices in the trade, which is being conducted by Referee H. L. Turk at the Brooklyn Bar Association, defended yesterday the business activities of the Square Deal Poultry Corporation. Each of these witnesses, Samuel Lefkowitz, 558 Christopher Avenue; Simon Adler, 138 Watkins Street, and Morris Oswalsky, 111 Thatford Avenue, was formerly an independent retailer who turned his business over to the corporation and had continued as manager at a salary.

They denied there had been any unreasonable profits by the corporation while they were connected with it. Nor had there been any price-fixing or effort to stifle competition, they testified. David Kugal, attorney for the Square Deal Poultry Corporation, told Deputy Attorney General Lerner that the corporation had lost approximately $30,000 since its organization on Jan. 1.

IRISH ISLANDERS IN DISTRESS

DUBLIN, April 12.—Reports continue to reach Dublin of acute distress in the West of Ireland.

The Secretary of the Galway Board of Health has written to the Free State Minister for Local Government informing him that the inhabitants of the islands off Connemara Coast are suffering great hardships.

The fishing industry had a very poor year and many of the islanders are living on a diet of potatoes and water, while tuberculosis is rife throughout the islands.

The Galway County Council requested the Government not to press the islanders for five years for arrears of the rates they owe. Steps are being taken for their immediate relief.

MEXICANS WON'T GO TO YSABEL HEARING

American Opposition Leads Them to Ignore Umpire's Call to Tampico to Hear Decision.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, April 12.—The Mexican Commissioners on the Special Claims Commission have suspended their trip to Tampico, where the Umpire, Dr. Octavio of Brazil, is waiting to call a special session to deliver the decision in the Santa Ysabel case. It is said the suspension is due to the refusal of the United States to accept the right of Dr. Octavio to call a meeting outside Mexico City without special permission from both Governments, as provided in the Warren-Payne agreement.

It is stated that the action of the United States in refusing to accept the new meeting at Tampico will result in the suspension of meetings and probably cause the commission to fail.

It is known that the Mexican Government is not satisfied with the decision of the General Claims Commission in Washington in deciding that Mexico is liable for claims incurred during the Administration of Victoriano Huerta. While satisfied with the decision whereby claims against Mexico for the De la Huerta revolt were denied, it is contended that the Government of Victoriano Huerta was illegal.

Another point that is not received well here is the affirmation that the American Government would protect the rights of its citizens, although such citizens, through renunciation of citizenship in each specific case, declined to request their own Government to take action.

The decision that the American Government has power to take action despite the negative attitude of its own citizens backs up all the claims made here by Ambassador Sheffield, who maintained that the requirements of the Mexican Government that foreigners must renounce citizenship in cases where they were holding property, were illegal and contrary to the rules of international law, and that the United States would not accept such provisions.

TWO DETECTIVES REDUCED.

Were With Patrolman McCarthy When "Radio Burglar" Shot Him.

Detectives Richard Siegert and Henry Mireau of the Richmond Hill Station, who were with Patrolman Charles McCarthy on the night of April 5, when McCarthy was shot by the "radio burglar" who had previously shot three other patrolmen in his burglary career in Richmond Hill, were reduced to patrol duty in uniform yesterday by Police Commissioner McLaughlin.

Siegert and Mireau, it was reported, were seated in an automobile when McCarthy started to question the burglar, who was leisurely walking toward the police car. The assailant got away through an alley, although pursued by the two detectives. Captain Gallagher, head of the Queens Detective Bureau, said last night that an extra patrol of detectives was being continued in quest of the "radio burglar" in Richmond Hill, Woodhaven and Elmhurst, although no robbery that appeared to be his handiwork had been reported from these districts for more than a week.

ASKS FOR A PARDON FOR SON'S SLAYER

Newark Widow Would Take Youth, Who Has Served 7 Years, Into Her Home.

BOYS WERE PALS, SHE SAYS

Writes Governor She Believes the Shooting on Hunting Trip Was Accident.

Mrs. Sophie Niemic, 42 years old, of 192 Springfield Avenue, Newark, whose son John was killed seven years ago when he was 17 years old, pleaded in a letter made public yesterday by Governor A. Harry Moore for the pardon of Boleslaw Dumbeck, the boy sentenced to life imprisonment as her son's murderer. Dumbeck, who has spent nearly seven years in the State Prison at Trenton, was 18 years old at the time of his conviction.

Not only does Mrs. Niemic, who is a widow and without other children, ask for Boleslaw's release but she begs that she be allowed to take him into her home "as my own son" in an effort to make up for the years and the happiness he has lost. Governor Moore indicated that he was favorably disposed toward her petition.

It was on a springlike Saturday afternoon in February, 1919, that the two playmates hiked down to the Kearny meadows, where in the long grass they planned to spend the afternoon shooting birds. Each, according to the police version at the time, had a loaded pistol.

That night neither returned. The next day Niemic's body was found on the border of the swamp with a bullet wound in the back of the head. After a week Dumbeck was picked up by the police. He said that the shooting was accidental and that he had been afraid to return home. Brought to speedy trial, the lawyer assigned by the Court entered a plea of non vult for him. Judge Harry V. Osborne, since retired, sentenced him to life imprisonment.

Mrs. Antoinette Dumbeck, the boy's mother, also a widow, and mother of three other children, broke down and wept at the sentence. So did her son. Shortly after imprisonment he suffered a mental breakdown and for a year was confined in the State Asylum for the Insane, but was later reported cured.

His mother engaged a lawyer, John A. Frye of 116 Market Street, Newark, five months ago to take the case before the New Jersey Court of Pardons. Mr. Frye said he had drawn up the necessary papers and obtained signatures of petitioners.

In the small kitchen of her tenement home at 245 West Kenny Street, Newark, Mrs. Dumbeck when seen yesterday was busy getting dinner for her children, toward whose support she works as a cook and laundress. Though small and dark the room was decorated with lithographs picturing Christ, another one of the Last Supper, one of the Madonna and Child and a large calendar inscribed in gilt letters with "Home, Sweet Home."

The shooting had been an accident, she said—just two boys playing with loaded pistols. "Mrs. Niemic, she is a wonderfully kind woman," she went on. "Her boy and mine, they always played together. She knows my boy never shoot hers on purpose."

But as to her boy going to live with Mrs. Niemic "when he gets out," that was another matter.

"Boleslaw will come home to me. I am his mother. Why should he go to some one else? My little boy will come to me, and I will protect him and see that he goes right," she said vehemently.

Bereaved Widow's Letter.

Mrs. Niemic's letter, as given out by Governor Moore, follows:

His Excellency, A. Harry Moore, Governor of New Jersey, Trenton, N. J.:

Dear Governor—If I am not too persistant I would like your Excellency to have clemency with one Boleslaw Dumbeck, who is confined to the State Prison for the last seven years. He was sentenced by the Hon. Judge Harry V. Osbourne, Judge of the Common Pleas Court of Essex County, N. J.

The mother of the boy who was accidentally shot by the defendant is attempting to urge his release. He is now 25 years of age, so at that time he was not quite 18 years of age. He is an invalid. I, the mother of a deceased son, would like to have him released. I am willing to accept him as my own son and give him a home. He was my son's pal. They went out shooting birds in the meadows when my son was accidentally shot by the above-mentioned prisoner. I think he has suffered enough for the last seven years.

I have filed a petition with the Court of Pardons, with reputable citizens as signers. I do not know what the Court of Pardons did at the last meeting but I have learned the only remedy is to write to your Excellency for clemency. Recently I have received a letter from the defendant requesting me to see the Governor, but being that I am a woman it is a hardship for me to travel, so I am writing and I do sincerely hope your Excellency will give this matter his consideration. In behalf of Boleslaw Dumbeck, 5584 Drawer N, Trenton, N. J.

Hoping my appeal will meet with his Governor's approval, I am most humbly yours, SOPHIE NIEMIC.

Mrs. Niemic, a large motherly woman, who works as cook in a restaurant, admitted she had had aid in writing the letter and displayed a copy of the letter she had received from Dumbeck, requesting her to appeal to the Governor. It was addressed to "Dear Sophie." Friends explained that among Polish people it was customary to address each other by the first name regardless of respective ages.

Dated April 4, Dumbeck's letter read in part: "Only God and myself knows the misery I am going through every day. Oh, my dear Sophie, what I have yet to face? But with the help of God I will try to make the best of it."

"Boleslaw didn't do it on purpose," she said. "It was an accident, and there was no one there to see how it happened."

Both she and Mrs. Dumbeck visited him in prison from time to time. Mrs. Niemec said she sent him "two or three dollars every once in a while."

Detective Sergeant Daniel Rothenberg, who arrested Dumbeck, gave a different version of the shooting. He said that the pistols had been stolen a few days before from a pawnshop, and that Dumbeck had admitted stealing $15 from his companion's pocket after shooting him.

Governor Moore referred the case to the Board of Pardons.

FOUR TRUSTEES QUIT CALVARY CHURCH

Dr. Straton's salary while at the same time he was making money and seeking personal publicity in Florida. We are no longer willing to serve as minority members of a board the actions of the majority of which we continually disapprove, and think that our resignations may more forcibly call the situation to the attention of the members of the church than anything else we can do.

4. We may add that in our opinion the true purpose of the Calvary Baptist Church would be better served if more attention were devoted to its spiritual side and to making it an effective force through real service to its neighborhood and the city at large and less attention were paid to futile challenges to debates and other hippodrome stunts connected with everything on earth except the true work of Calvary Baptist Church.

BENJAMIN J. MILLER,
W. A. M. MARTIN,
A. B. MILLER,
ROBERT B. BUZBEE.

Dr. Straton in Chicago.

At his residence, 62 East Seventy-seventh Street, Dr. Straton was reported last night to be in Chicago. He is expected to return to this city tomorrow, members of his family said.

Walter E. Soderstrom, his Secretary, made a statement which he said was an outline of Dr. Straton's position:

"I feel," he said, "that these men are putting themselves in line for more trouble. Calvary Church by unanimous vote granted Dr. Straton permission to go to Florida for two months, and it is a matter with which the trustees who have resigned have nothing to do. These men have been thoroughly beaten both in church and court and do not now have grace enough to step aside. Calvary Church had more additions in the year 1925 than the five leading downtown churches combined. After obtaining a complete victory in the Supreme Court, Dr. Straton in public meeting freely forgave these men and withdrew all charges against them."

Justice Black said the resignation of the four trustees had been left in his office by a messenger who took a receipt from one of his office attendants. The joint letter of resignation, which the Justice showed and which was signed in common by all the four retiring members of the board, under date of April 12, read:

"We the undersigned, trustees of Calvary Baptist Church, hereby resign as such trustees, to take effect as of today."

Justice Black said: "I regret that the trustees are not remaining on the board to enjoy the new building, the proposition regarding which has just been presented to me with a picture showing a beautiful elevation of a magnificent thirty-story structure.

"They are very estimable gentlemen. I am afraid, however, that the trustees' meeting will lose much of their interest, now that they have resigned."

Justice Black had lying on his desk the drawing to which he referred. It showed the façade of the proposed combined church and apartment house as planned by the architects, Warren & Wetmore. The plans have been approved by the Building Committee, Justice Black said.

He added that he had just received details of the financing plan formulated by Robert Caitlin in behalf of a syndicate headed by Otto Kahn of the banking house of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., and other financiers. Under that plan, the Justice declared, the church would be encumbered neither by mortgage nor taxes, nor by maintenance cost of the apartment house portion of the building, and the church would derive for twenty years a net income from the syndicate of $41,000 a year. At the end of the twenty-year period, he said, new terms were to be arranged under a new appraisal, provision for which is made.

Representatives of the majority of the Board of Trustees said that in the recent litigation the dissenting members had been successful only in their action brought to enjoin Justice Black from permitting Dr. Straton to vote as an ex-officio member of the board. In the actions brought by the minority members to enjoin the church from erecting a new building on its present lot and to place the property in the hands of a receiver, it was declared, Justice Tierney had ruled against them, holding that the church was competent to manage its own affairs without intervention by the court.

In still a third action, it was declared, it was sought to enjoin the church from trying certain members upon charges preferred by Dr. Straton. Justice Tierney again ruled against them, it was declared, when they applied to the court to have this action dismissed without costs against them, the church authorities assented, and, later, when, Dr. Straton, as the mover of the charges, suggested that the church dismiss the allegations, the organization adopted that course.

FOUR AMERICAN WOMEN LOSE JEWELS IN PARIS

'Cat Burglar' in Hotel Gets $15,000 Loot; Man Flees Over Roof From Room.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, April 12.—Four American women were the victims of a "cat burglar" in a $15,000 jewelry robbery in a Paris hotel last night. The man escaped.

The women were Mrs. Edith Frenk, Lucie Somwell, Albret Banquel and Regina Gashire.

All had apartments on the same floor of the Hotel Place de la Concorde. At 3 o'clock in the morning Mrs. Frenk was aroused by a noise in the room. She found a man standing beside the dressing table. She rang a bell and shouted an alarm, but the burglar leaped from the window to the balcony and scrambled up the water pipes to the roof.

Hotel employes and the police made a thorough search of the building without finding any trace of the burglar except fingerprints in some rooms which he had visited.

Mrs. Frenk was the principal victim.

TWO CONVENIENTLY LOCATED STORES

BOAT IN SLIP BLOCKS COAL FOR BELLEVUE

Dealer Refuses to Move Barge, So Hospital Appeals to Two City Departments.

FUEL IS FINALLY UNLOADED

Bellevue Hospital's coal supply again became a subject of concern yesterday for the hospital authorities when the Cullen Fuel Company, at 410 East Thirtieth Street, refused to move one of its coal barges to make way for coal consigned to the hospital bins.

It was only after hospital stevedores, under orders from the Department of Docks and the Corporation Counsel's office, moved the Cullen barge that another barge containing 1,000 tons could be eased beneath the giant crane of the hospital power house, after standing in the slip since Saturday. Dr. Mark L. Fleming, Medical Superintendent, had requested the aid of the marine police to clear a right of way in the long, narrow slip between the terminal piers of East Thirtieth and East Twenty-ninth Streets, but James H. Cullen, President of the Cullen Fuel Company, which owns the land between the piers and claims title to land under water extending fifty feet or more into the East River, warned the police that they were trespassing, and they refused to act. Dr. Fleming then communicated with the Corporation Counsel's office. A city lawyer said that Mr. Cullen might own the land under the water, but his title did not include the water over the land.

"Go ahead and move in your barge," he counseled.

Refuses to Move Barge.

The Medical Superintendent then called on the Dock Department and Dockmaster William R. Eisele responded. In a conference in Mr. Cullen's office, it was reported, Mr. Eisele ordered the coal dealer to move his barge. Mr. Cullen refused and suggested that if the hospital wanted it moved its employes, not his, would have to do the job.

"I refused to vacate my own premises," Cullen said later, "and they will have to take the consequences of trespassing and interfering with the conduct of my business."

The controversy over who should use the southwest corner of the slip started some time ago and reached a climax last Friday, when Commissioner of Purchase Peter J. Dooling announced that the Cambria Coal Company, as low bidder, had received the contract to provide the hospital with 29,000 tons of coal for the coming year. According to the Corporation Counsel's office, Burns Brothers and the Cullen Company were the unsuccessful bidders. The Cambria Company offered the coal for $3.54 a ton. Cullens' bid was $3.64 and Burns Brothers $3.66.

Mr. Cullen, who last Winter and on other occasions also, he said, provided the hospital with an emergency supply when the contractor was unable to deliver coal, asked that the city accept his bid for several reasons, among which was the contention that he owned the land of the slip where the barges for Bellevue must tie up and needed the space for his own business. Representatives of the city, however, felt bound to accpt the low bid.

Offered to Cut Price, He Says.

"I offered them coal at less than cost to me," Mr. Cullen said yesterday, "and when I found that another company was 10 cents a ton under my price I offered to meet the figure and take a further loss of $2,900. It is worth that to me to have control of the slip. Last Winter I had to move twenty-five barges to make room on my own property for a boatload of coal for the hospital.

"I knew that the hospital bins contained five or six hundred tons, enough for a few days at least, and so I thought now was a good time to make an issue of this matter of the slip."

HELD FOR KILLING OSTRICH.

Man in Boston Court Recalls Fight, but Is Dim on Opponent.

BOSTON, April 12 (AP).—William C. McIntyre, who is accused of killing an ostrich in the Franklin Park Zoo, was held in $1,000 bail in Municipal Court today. The charges were breaking and entering, cruelty to animals and trespassing.

Governor, an aged, mean-tempered but vigorous male ostrich, was found dead last Friday morning, evidently killed in a terrific combat during the night. The bird was known to be a dangerous fighter and accordingly had been caged alone. Why any one should have bearded the creature alone and how he could have killed the bird barehanded mystified the police.

McIntyre was said to have identified a bloodstained handkerchief and an overcoat found within the high fence as his own. He admitted that he had been drinking last Thursday. He said he had dim recollections of a fight, but could not recall that an ostrich was his opponent. His case was put over until April 15.

Bank Sues Alleged Bond Thief.

The Bankers Trust Company, through its attorneys, White & Case, began an action in the Supreme Court yesterday against Ray Anderson for the recovery of $4,400, the total of cancelled bond coupons which Anderson was alleged to have altered and disposed of after he had stolen them at various times in the last year from the offices of the Long Island Lighting Company in the Hudson Terminal Building. Anderson was arrested last week after an attempt had been made to dispose of $300 of the altered coupons in a Brooklyn bank. He was arraigned yesterday before Magistrate Moses R. Ryttenberg in the Tombs Court and pleaded not guilty.

TRADE BOARD RULES IN 'RADIO TRUST' SUIT

Denies Its Counsel's Appeal to Name Stockholders in Alleged $2,000,000,000 Monopoly.

WITNESS TELLS OF PATENTS

S. M. Kintner Traces Consolidations of Manufacturing Companies—Describes Fessenden's Work.

The Federal Trade Commission has ruled that the names of the dominant individual stockholders in the alleged $2,000,000,000 radio trust need not be disclosed. This was announced yesterday afternoon at the reopening of the investigation of charges that a monopoly controls the field of radio manufacturing. The hearings are being held in the commission's offices at 45 Broadway.

The decision sustained the ruling of the commission's examiner, William C. Reeves, made April 1, when he upheld the protest of Darien E. Peck, counsel for the General Electric Company, against making public the names. Edward L. Smith, counsel for the commission, announced an appeal at the time and asked for an adjournment until the ruling was made.

Samuel M. Kintner, in charge of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company's research department, was on the stand during the entire session yesterday, under direct examination by the commission's counsel.

He gave a detailed description of pioneer work in radio telephony and wireless telegraphy under the direction of Professor Reginald A. Fessenden, who has obtained many basic radio patents. Professor Fessenden recently instituted a suit for $60,000,000 in Boston against several companies concerned in the present investigation, alleging that their pool control of patents did away with a market for his inventions. The suit was brought under the Sherman act.

Mr. Kintner testified that the National Electric Signaling Company was organized in 1902 to develop Professor Fessenden's patents, and was later absorbed by the Radio Corporation of America. He said it was Professor Fessenden's invention that was first used for wireless telegraphic communication both ways across the Atlantic Ocean. This was in 1906, he said, a year after Marconi had transmitted messages across the Atlantic one way.

Mr. Kintner told of the activity and experiments under the direction of nine leading radio engineers who were employed at one time by the National Electric Signaling Company. He described how under the Fessenden patents it was possible in 1901 to transmit words without wires a mile or two at a demonstration at Roanoke, Va. The Fessenden system, he said, was superior to the Marconi wireless, and the Marconi people adopted a similar type later.

Mr. Kintner told how the National Electric Signal Company went into the hands of a receiver, how its assets were sold to the International Signal Company of Delaware and how the International Radio Telephone Company grew out of the various absorptions and consolidations.

The witness identified more than twenty-five contracts which will be the basis of further questions by Government counsel when the hearing is resumed at 10 o'clock this morning.

The direct examination of the witness may take another day or two. He will then be questioned by counsel for the companies represented at the hearing. They include Frank H. Woods and John J. McCloy, appearing for the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company; Thurlow M. Gordon, for the Radio Corporation of America, and Harold G. Hathaway, for the American Telephone and Telegraph Company and the Western Electric Company.

Here is a Colossus among Giants

General Motors' Contribution to American Industry

BORN of the combined engineering genius of 1,000 of the world's foremost engineers and fostered by the gigantic General Motors Corporation, with operations covering some 144 countries, resources running in the hundreds of millions of dollars and sales approximating One Billion Dollars yearly, comes Big Brute—a truck such as the industrial world has never seen before.

Brute in name, power, in size. Brute in terrific stamina and tremendous endurance. Big Brute is built to stand impregnable against the most brutal requirements of man and industry.

Beautiful in its brutal ugliness, Big Brute looks what it is . . . . a Colossus among the Giants of modern transportation. With the operating ease of a lithe passenger vehicle, a Fisher-Built Cab to furnish driver's comfort unknown before, and mehanical improvements years beyond the ordinary conceptions of today, it stands to change the industrial motor transportation of the world.

Big Brute is a Truck Like Men Have Never Seen Before

From its vast engineering experience, covering the production of over 4,849,485 passenger and commercial cars, during the last 25 years, General Motors Corporation has eliminated, in Big Brute, the vital weaknesses, the engineering mistakes, the structural flaws previously common among heavy duty trucks. Big Brute is a truck without "bugs." More than 71% of all motor vehicles made and sold by General Motors are now in active service.

The motor trucks of the entire world were studied by General Motors engineers in developing Big Brute. Service records, covering the past ten years—actually the experimental development years in truck transportation—were gathered from all possible sources, throughout the world. The strength and weaknesses of all trucks became an open book to General Motors experts.

It was learned why some trucks rendered but limited service. Why others surpassed them. Why some operated under nominal upkeep, while others were economic failures. Some of those factors related to engineering, others to material and workmanship; some to operating simplicity, others to minor mistakes in design or manufacture. One by one, these factors were met, analyzed and weighed. The mistakes of these ten experimental years were corrected. A new standard in heavy transportation thus was set.

Years from now another truck like Big Brute may be built. Today it cannot be fairly weighed against any other known. There is no other that's comparable . . . . In presenting it, General Motors Corporation feels that it is making an important outstanding contribution to American Industry.

Sold Under GMAC Plan

Big Brute, like all other products of the General Motors Corporation, is offered under the liberal General Motors Acceptance Corporation Plan of deferred payments—the lowest cost under which any motor car or truck can be financed on time payments.

THIS IS THE FIRST CHAPTER IN "THE STORY OF A NEWSPAPER"

"... entitled to be ranked among the great newspapers of the country"

Herbert S. Hadley
CHANCELLOR WASHINGTON UNIVERSITY

Eads Bridge, St. Louis • • Drawn for the Post-Dispatch by Joseph Pennell

Herbert S. Hadley—former Republican Governor of Missouri, Chancellor of Washington University, a national political and educational figure, who has known the Post-Dispatch throughout his public career, says:

"I have known and have read the St. Louis Post-Dispatch for over twenty years, and I have always felt that it was entitled to be ranked among the great newpapers of the country.

"True to the ideal of its great founder, it is concerned in something more than 'merely publishing news.' It has been and is an effective agency for the expression and moulding of public opinion. I have particularly admired its courageous aggressiveness in protecting public interests. I have not always agreed and do not agree now with all its editorial positions on public questions, but the force and definiteness of its advocacy and its fairness in being willing to give the other side command approval.

"Can we not feel something of renewed confidence in American democracy that the Post-Dispatch by such a policy has won its success and power?"

Herbert S. Hadley

THE true greatness of a newspaper lies not in fortune, but in usefulness. The press is the greatest instrument of public service, and publicity is our surest safeguard.

A newspaper should be respected in all walks of life for courage. It should be esteemed by all parties for fairness. This was the conception of newspaper making projected by Joseph Pulitzer, who in 1878 founded the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, and it is by adherence to these principles the Post-Dispatch has become great.

There are many kinds of newspapers in the United States, but this kind alone enjoys the acclaim of thinking men. That the Post-Dispatch is such a newspaper is less credible out of our own mouth than the mouths of others.

In the series to follow, eminent Americans—men who know the press and its function—who know that eternal vigilance is indeed the price of liberty—tell what they think of this newspaper. The Post-Dispatch is independently Democratic; there appears on this page what an eminent Republican thinks of it.

Women Tell Senators Prohibition Has Benefited Nation, Morally and Economically

sisted that in New York City conditions had improved as a result of prohibition.

The admission of persons to Salvation Army refuges because of intoxication had decreased, she added, to 1 per cent. what it was before prohibition became the law of the land. In answer to one of Senator Reed's questions, she said she had heard one can still buy liquor in New York City, but she insisted, conditions were better regardless of that fact.

Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney, one of the New England witnesses, said she preferred that, if liquor must be sold, it be sold in "speak-easies" rather than in saloons. Speak-easies, being illegal, makes it easier, she argued, to enforce the law against them.

On one thing every woman delegate was agreed, and that was there must not be any modification of the existing law. Stricter enforcement, they all said, is one of the keys to the whole situation. A great organized movement to sustain and continue prohibition is now under way, it was declared, and there will never be any let-up so long as a single "wet" shows his head above water.

However, the wets managed to get some evidence into the record today despite the fact that the "drys" were supposed to have the stage. Representative Clarence McGregor of Buffalo submitted a statement in which he denounced prohibition as a colossal failure, while Representative James J. Gallivan of Boston put in a statement in which he scored the whole prohibition movement.

EIGHTY WOMEN SWORN.

Senator Harreld, who acted as Chairman until Senator Walsh arrived, asked the eighty women to stand up and be sworn. They were in all parts of the packed room. MRS. PEABODY'S STATEMENT.

"We are a voluntary organization of women, simply an affiliation of the great boards and organizations of women organized three and a half years ago, thinking alike on great fundamental questions of national and international importance, organized to be ready at any emergency to speak for the great body of from twelve to eighteen million of women of the Protestant churches and the General Federation of the Women's Clubs," said Mrs. Peabody.

"The women have been appointed by their own organizations to serve on this body. They are here at the call of this convention. They have come at their own expense. There are no salaried officers. We are not affiliated with any temperance organizations, except the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, which is one of the nine great national organizations with us.

"We have a strong feeling the women ought to be represented by the men who stand for the great objectives of women. We represent here today not only organizations of women, but the whole we represent the home, school, church, and stand firmly for no amendment to the Eighteenth Amendment. We hold the Constitution inviolate. We stand for no modification of the Volstead act, but rather a strengthening. We stand for strict law enforcement, with removal of all men who do not strictly enforce.

"We are opposed to any amendment of the Eighteenth Amendment, which came as a result of the liquor traffic, which resulted in the very dangerous conditions throughout by the saloon.

"We believe that to amend the Constitution and change the laws based thereon would bring back old conditions. We heartily approve the one-half of 1 per cent. alcoholic content, which became the internal revenue law as the result of strong pressure of the brewers, who feared cutting in on their trade by the soft-drink manufacturers.

Points to Court Ruling.

"Since it was the brewers' standard, adopted by the Government and declared by the Supreme Court enforceable, we see no reason for raising the question.

"The objections to the changes suggested would be that if liquor were sold under license, by whatever name called, the place where it was sold, without question, would result in the old conditions of the saloon. If it were sold without license—2.75 per cent. beer or 4 per cent. beer—we should have a much more serious condition than under license.

"We feel that in the greater part of this country the law is observed as well as any law. Having traveled in various parts of this country, we did not observe more drinking than ever. We find conditions vastly improved. Health, as testified to by insurance companies; morals, as shown by statements which will be produced, and certainly economic conditions, on the

"We women, we know the old saloon, the wreckage in homes and lives of boys, men and women. While the vote for the Eighteenth Amendment was the vote of men, it was also the vote of the women who prayed and worked for protection from this ancient evil. We thought it settled, and perhaps for that reason, and believing in the Constitution, we have not done as much as we should have done to see to enforcement. Perhaps we as women, not being in the position to select men to administer these laws, trusted too much and needed the awakening which has come.

"We are convinced we have a good law—a righteous law—written into the Constitution. That it in no way affects the personal liberty of well-doers—those loyal to the highest interests of the country and the great majority.

"We are not satisfied the law is being enforced in all places. We are sure it will be when the nation has had time to adjust itself. In a well-regulated home it is the policy of a mother to work faithfully and patiently, knowing perfect obedience requires law and discipline. It is never the policy of a good mother or teacher to say: 'The children are disobedient, therefore, let us give in to them and let them do as they like.'

Questioned by Senator Reed.

"And now if I may call witnesses, their statements will be very brief if there are no questions. And may I say, we wish to thank first the gentlemen who so courteously allowed us to have this time while we are here in convention. We are appearing out of order, for they have not finished their side, but they allowed us to come on, and we appreciate it very much."

Senator Reed—You say you stand for no modification of the Volstead act, and then you said you stood for strengthening it, which would be modification. Now tell us about that. A.—I am in a hurry to get through with this large number of witnesses we have here in a short space of time this morning, and do not know that I could give it to you in the short time we have.

Q.—I am not trying to tie you down to any definite phraseology, but do want to get just what your position is. A.—We stand for no lessening of the strength of the National Prohibition law, but rather a strengthening of the law where it might be weak.

Q.—How do you propose to have the law strengthened? A.—We would strengthen it in the two States, New York and Maryland, where there is no State enforcement act, and where the laws, it is quite evident, are very seriously broken, and where the great body of law-breakers are going on more freely because in those States the Legislatures have not complied with the Eighteenth Amendment, which provides for concurrent State and Federal action.

Q.—You would strengthen the Volstead act in those two States, do you mean? A.—I would have State law enforcement acts framed and enacted by the Legislatures of the States.

Q.—Then you do not propose that the Congress shall amend the Volstead act, but your proposition is that the Legislatures of New York and Maryland shall be induced to pass State acts? A.—Yes.

Q.—Otherwise you like the Volstead act as it is? A.—We like it, Mr. Reed, not because the one-half of 1 per cent. represents any temperance organizations but represents the Association of Brewers who a generation ago, in defending themselves against the soft drink manufacturers, established one-half of 1 per cent. as not alcoholic, and that was accepted by the Internal Revenue Bureau as standard, has held for generations, now has been taken up by the Congress and has been affirmed by the Supreme Court as enforceable.

Favors a Stronger Measure.

"That was not quite my question," said Mr. Reed. "I just wanted your view, Mrs. Peabody, because there are propositions pending before this subcommittee to change the Volstead act in many respects along the line of presumptively making it have more strength. If I understand you, you are content with the Volstead act as it stands, but want the legislators of New York and Maryland to pass State acts which would commit those States to similar legislation for enforcement as that of the Federal Volstead act."

"Yes, or even stronger, if possible," Mrs. Peabody replied.

"Now that is the point. Do you want any change in the Volstead act?"

"Not unless you can make it stronger. The difficulty is not with the law, not with the Eighteenth Amendment, but in adjusting the great new body of legislation, Federal and State. We believe that in time that will be done. We are not in the least discouraged, but feel the people have not fully understood."

Senator Reed—Exactly, but I wish you would please stick to the question, because I do not wish to take your time. Are you content with the Volstead act as it is, or do you desire amendments made to it, making it have more strength? A.—We will accept it as passed, and gladly, if it may be enforced by proper officials in sympathy with it.

Q.—Are you satisfied with Section 29 of the act? A.—I have not the document with me.

Senator Harreld—That is the section that applies to ciders and home brews. A.—And I think I might say we have been satisfied, and we have gone over it very carefully in our organization, and while I cannot carry in my mind the provisions to which you refer, if you will read it I will attempt to tell you.

Senator Harreld—It particularly applies to ciders and home brews. A.—We will leave it to the judgment of your legislative body, Congress, as to details, if it may not be made weaker than now. We are not in position to vote in Congress. We are only in position to say the strongest thing you can give us in enforcement, and the weakest thing in liquor.

Senator Reed—I still want to know, and I am very serious about it—and am trying, Mrs. Peabody, to extend to you the courtesy you are entitled to, and you are entitled to every courtesy. You say you are not in position to vote in Congress. That is true, but it is true that it was all great bodies that not only had to vote in Congress, but not to any great degree. The man who makes $2 or $3 a day is not better able to send his children to school if he spends part of that for liquor.

MRS. EMERICH LAUDS DRY LAW

The next witness, Mrs. Jeannette W. Emerich of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, said her organization represented twenty-two cooperating denominations and approximately 25,000,000 members.

"It is our strong conviction," she said, "that the policy of prohibition is the deliberately and permanently established policy of this nation, that this policy has not failed, but, on the contrary, has yielded results which fully justify its adoption that the liquor traffic and saloon must not come back, and the churches must set themselves with new purpose to see that prohibition is enforced by law and sustained by national conscience.

"The present duty of the moral citizenship of the nation," said Mrs. Emerich, "we believe to be:

"To magnify the value of the principle of total abstinence and the obligation upon the law-abiding citizens to practice the same.

"To make unmistakably clear to both the lawless seller and the lawless buyers of intoxicants that the liquor traffic has been permanently outlawed in the United States as the enemy of society.

"To urge local, State and Federal governments to cooperate with increased vigor against the present organized resistance to the prohibition law until as adequate an enforcement of that law has been secured as of any other social legislation.

"The report on the prohibition situation by the Research Department of the Federal Council of Churches was an attempt to secure an objective pic-are here only today to represent the bodies that named.

Q.—Have they taken action with reference to any proposal to allow light wines and beer? A.—They have taken action. Indeed this action was taken on a like occasion three years ago. They have the recorded votes of all these organizations. They did not know this hearing was coming on when the convention date was set. In fact, we did not know of this attempt, but we have the recorded votes showing that they represent the General Federation of Women's Clubs, which was taken in their biennial session two years ago, seconded by every State, and passed by 2,000 accredited delegates without a dissenting voice.

Mrs. Silverthorn Testifies.

Mrs. Peabody called as first witness for the drys Mrs. E. H. Silverthorn, 156 Fifth Avenue, New York City, President of the Federation of Women's Boards of Foreign Missions of North America.

"I represent all the Federation of Women's Boards of Foreign Missions of North America," said Mrs. Silverthorn. "It comprises fifty-six national women's organizations, representing 5,000,000 women. The missionaries from these boards are working in all countries except Beluchistan and Turkestan. We are receiving from our missionaries, who, in these lands are striving to set up Christian homes, Christian schools and a truly Christian civilization and where we are working among the children, youth and mothers of thes lands—we are receiving requests from all the world to see that America stands firm in this great experiment, because the world is looking to us to see what we may do.

"This whole question of prohibition is of world-wide interest and being considered in many countries of the world.

"It is significant every civilized country, Spain and Greece excepted, has made legislative temperance progress since the Eighteenth Amendment went into the Constitution.

"I cite two examples only. There are temperance movements in many Latin-American countries. These have been largely due to the example set by the United States. Our Government and people can render no greater service to Latin America than to so respect and enforce existing laws as to put their benefits beyond doubt. Should the laws of the United States be repealed or their enforcement become a dead-letter such example would be exceedingly detrimental to Latin America and signally a loss in those lands as well as in our own.

Temperance Gains in India.

"Tremendous progress is being made in India in the temperance movement. A great gathering was held in Delhi Jan 29 to 31, 1926, in the interest of Indian temperance. Twenty-two general temperance and missionary organizations, Christian and non-Christian, participated. The result was most interesting. One of our outstanding Indian missionaries, Stanley Jones, says:

"'The whole world is bending over in expectancy to see what we in the United States are going to do with the matter of prohibition. If we should fail it would set back the clock of moral progress fifty or one hundred years. We must not fail.'

"There are something like 14,000 foreign students in America representing the Orient, Africa, Europe and Latin America. These have been sent here because they are representatives of groups from their bodies and going back to be leaders in their own lands.

"They are weighing and judging America in these days and some of them are rather unhappy. What we do in this respect is going to affect not only the present but future of the world."

Senator Reed—As to the people of India, are they Europeans, Americans or natives? A—They were largely groups of natives, although the missionary movement was represented. It was a representative body. There is a great temperance movement on in India today.

Q—What are they doing over there about the use of opium among themselves? A—There is also an anti-opium movement on.

Q—Among these same people? A—Yes, sir. They have succeeded in suppressing opium? A—They have not, but are working at it as we in America are working on this matter. The opium habit is long-entrenched. It takes a long time to break up such habits.

Q—They raise large quantities of opium there and ship all over the world, do they not? A—I believe so.

Q—And some of it comes to America? A—That is largely controlled by the British Government.

MRS. WILCOX NEXT HEARD.

Mrs. F. W. Wilcox, who represented the Council of Women for Home Missions, representing twenty-two church denominations, was called next. She said:

"Knowing by actual experience the great importance of the prohibition movement, and the great improvement that has come in the condition of the people who are better able to send their children to school, the council is very certainly in favor of no change in the Volstead act, no amendments whatever, in the interest of good citizenship."

Senator Reed—You say the people are better able to send their children to school? A—Undoubtedly so, if they do not purchase these drinks.

Q.—Do you attribute any of that to the great rise of wages and improved economic conditions generally? A—There has been no great rise in wages in certain portions of the country, or at least among certain persons of the population.

Q.—Where do you refer to? A—All over these United States, Hawaii and in the islands Porto Rico, for instance.

Q.—Do you think there has been no rise in wages in the United States? A.—I know it is true that there is a wage all over the country, but not to any great degree. The man who makes $2 or $3 a day is not better able to send his children to school if he spends part of that for liquor.

MRS. HARREGAN OPPOSES CHANGE

Mrs. Nellie G. Burger of St. Louis, who in 1922 was one of the leaders of the unsuccessful movement to defeat Senator Reed for re-election, was the next witness.

"I wish to explain," Mrs. Burger began, "this is not the formal presentation of the appeal of the National W. C. T. U., which will be made after conclusion of the testimony of opponents to prohibition. I simply want to show our affiliation to this great organization of church women. We are not only members of the W. C. T. U., but church women, so we are deeply interested in this sort of demonstration here this morning.

"The National W. C. T. U. is mobilizing half a million women for law observance and enforcement.

"This organization laid the foundation for passage of the Eighteenth Amendment by teaching in the schools the fact that alcohol is a racial poison, and educated the present generation, which gave us the Eighteenth Amendment. We continue to affirm this truth and will continue this education of our youth.

"The workingmen may demand return of light wine and beer, but wives and children of workingmen, who for the first time have sufficient food and clothing and own their homes, will never join in the appeal for return of wine and beer. The material benefits of prohibition are easy to enumerate: Peace, prosperity and plenty, as compared with sorrow, adversity and want of saloon days; but the spiritual blessing to our nation cannot be estimated.

"We have always had the follies of youth to combat. Today this folly, supplemented by unusual freedom following unconventional war conditions, is being exaggerated and frequently misrepresented.

"A striking instance of that just occurred in this city of Washington. Several hundred high school students have been here for Easter vacation. The proprietor of one leading hotel was questioned concerning the hip-pocket flask which we have heard is possessed by all young people today. He replied there had been absolutely no drinking and no flasks found in the rooms.

Questioned on St. Louis Arrests.

"Prohibition has been of immeasurable benefit to Missouri. St. Louis has been held up as a wide-open city, yet I beg to submit the fact, as reported in The Globe-Democrat and other papers, that in the twenty-four-hour period from April 7 to April 8 not an arrest was made in that city for any crime.

Senator Reed—What was that period?

A—The period between April 7 and April 8, from 6 o'clock one day to 6 o'clock the next. This was a newspaper report. The W. C. T. U. has a constituency pledged to enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment. We urge no change in the Volstead law except to strengthen its provisions. We loyally support the Constitution. We loyally defend our flag. We loyally declare that we will obey the law.

Q.—Mrs. Burger, the fact that there would be no arrests for twenty-four hours in St. Louis was such a startling thing that it became matter of news? A.—Yes, it was.

Q.—That was the first time you have heard of its occurring since the prohibition law went into effect, I take it? A.—Or at any other time.

Q.—I think that is a fact, too. A.—Then I think we agree on that.

Q.—Do you know whether that was because the policemen of St. Louis were off on a moral awakening? A.—I am hoping it is a moral wave.

Q.—You do not mean to say this is a general condition in St. Louis? A.—I am simply quoting from a newspaper statement worthy of consideration.

Q.—You have seen in the newspapers the fact frequently chronicled that crime is so prevalent in St. Louis as to shock the moral conscience of the better element of the city, have you not? A.—Yes; that is true.

Q.—And there has been a great increase of crime since the war? A.—Yes; here as in every nation.

Q.—Well, I do not know whether that is true of any other nation, but it has been true of St. Louis and is true throughout this country. A.—I think that is true.

Witness Asks a Question.

Continuing his interrogation of Mrs. Burger, Senator Reed asked:

"These crimes, generally speaking, or on the average, have been of more heinous character, more desperate character than in years before the war."

"That is true, to some degree at least. But you would not lay that to prohibition, the heinousness of the crime—would you?" Mrs. Burger replied.

Q.—Well, I am not discussing that question at all. You have heard it charged there is a good deal of drinking among the school children of St. Louis? A.—But I do not know; it has been proven.

Q.—That has been proved in some newspapers—in fact, in the same newspaper that produced the article to which you referred? A.—Yes, sir; but I do not always swear by The St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Q.—But when it reports your way you then take it as a verity? A.—I simply brought that here as a matter of interest reported in St. Louis, and for twenty-four hours no arrest was made.

Q.—There must have been better automobile drivers than customary there during that period? A.—Not that many.

Q.—Do you know how many people were arrested the day before? A.—No.

Q.—The day after? A.—No. But I shall try to get a record of that when I return home.

Q.—You do know, without you and I joking much about it, that on the average there are a great many people arrested in St. Louis every day? A.—That is true.

Q.—On the average? A.—Yes.

Q.—And yet St. Louis is not worse than other American cities? No; I do not think it is worse.

Q.—You know, or have read, and I do not want to personally know, but you have read and understand that there are a large number of places in St. Louis selling liquor? A.—There are.

Q.—Indeed it is charged there are several hundred saloons or speakeasies in St. Louis? A.—I am not prepared to say the number, but know it is reported there are a number of places where liquor is sold.

Q.—A great number? A.—Yes.

Q.—And that goes on right under the nose of the police, does it not? A.—And of the Q.—How many here do you think you should have to effectively dry up that town? A.—I have not given that sufficient study to give affirmative answer. We would have to have a large increase. We have about thirty-two men in St. Louis now.

Q.—For a city of approximately 900,000 people? A.—I do not know.

Q.—You know the population of St. Louis? A.—Yes.

Q.—It has 750,000 or 800,000 people, yet there are only thirty-two prohibition officers? A.—Yes.

Q.—It would take several hundred Federal prohibition officers to effectively enforce the law? A.—It might, if left entirely to Federal prohibition officers, but, under our State law, the municipality, county and State peace officers are supposed to help enforce.

Q.—At the present time they do not seem to be doing it? A.—Perhaps not, but St. Louis is not all of Missouri.

Q.—We are talking of St. Louis. Let us stick to that town. That is a big enough problem for the short time I want to take from these ladies. The hip flask trade in St. Louis is rather prosperous, too, is it not? A.—Well, I cannot tell, for I do not know.

Problem of Hip Flasks.

"Have you not heard," Senator Reed asked, "or read in the newspapers that hip flasks are sold and carried to parties by numerous boys? Have you not understood that to be a fact, and is it not one of the things your organization is protesting against, and trying to stop?"

"I have heard of it, yes, sir, and I dare say it is true, to some degree," Mrs. Burger answered.

"Is it not true to such a degree that your organization has seriously discussed it?"

"Not any more so than the other problems confronting the youth of the land."

"I did not ask you about the other problems. You have seriously discussed this particular problem, have you not?"

"We have discussed it, yes."

Senator Reed—And you have painted it in pretty black colors, that is, taking it according to what you understood the facts to be. A.—We have not painted it nearly so black as some other people.

Q.—What do you say about it? Do you not think it a matter of such serious importance as to demand the attention of your organization, and every other organization devoted to conservation of morals? A.—It is a serious matter, but I am not inclined to believe from the reports that I hear concerning this by a large measure.

Q.—Certainly not; none of us believe all we hear, but there is a problem there, is there not? A.—Yes, there is a problem connected with it, I admit that.

Q.—And the man who is now Mayor of your city was elected after having been in charge of terrible immorality among school children, was he not? A.—I beg your pardon, Senator Reed; but I am from Springfield, Mo. St. Louis is not my city.

Q.—Oh, I thought you lived there. A.—No.

MRS. WAID FOR STRICT LAW.

Mrs. D. E. Waid, representing the National Board of Presbyterian Churches, New York City, next testified.

"I find these women back of me, as well as the speaker who introduced us, represent the great things that for two or three generations in America we have been working for," she said. "We have been working for the citizenship of America, particularly among the unprivileged groups, or groups that by circumstances either of birth or environment have not been able to come into the full duties of citizenship.

"I did not understand that. What groups do you mean?" Senator Reed asked.

"Such groups," Mrs. Waid replied, "as these isolated geographically in mountains, Alaska, and groups coming new into citizenship, or into a new relationship, the Porto Rican groups and those coming into this country. These are the groups that I speak of in the main, though our field is coextensive with America and all the territory over which the flag flies.

"These chairmen of organizations report in their frequent visitations conditions all over America on groups that most need protection of the flag and training in citizenship. Viewing it from that aspect we, as citizens, feel that, as a matter of policy, of cultivation in citizenship for the future, the influence connected with continuation of prohibition is one of the largest assets to the United States Government. We stand in those regions most, because it is even now improved by the enforcement of prohibition. They are entitled to it, and must have it. In Porto Rico and Alaska we see enormous changes since prohibition. On behalf of future Christian citizenship we ask attention of the violator of prohibition and enforcement by properly pledged officers."

Reed Asks About Porto Rico.

Senator Reed asked: "Have you ever visited Alaska?"

"I have visited Porto Rico but not Alaska," was the reply.

Q.—How long did you stay there? A.—I spent one Winter in Porto Rico, ten years ago, and I was there again two years ago.

Q.—Plenty of liquor can be obtained in Porto Rico now, I am told, there? A.—Quite a good deal goes in with Congressional parties and other ways, but it is not freely found there.

Q.—Well, inasmuch as I have never been there, and as the prohibition element of Congress has been there frequently, I will let them settle the question of what they may have found in. But do you mean to say seriously to this committee that liquor consumed in Porto Rico, or any considerable part of it, has been carried in by Congressional parties? A.—I do not mean to say that.

Q.—Then why did you say it, may I ask? A.—Because I mean to say that that special difficulty has presented enormous difficulties in the enforcement of prohibition ever since. That is why it is mentioned.

Q.—You mean the example set? A.—Yes, sir; because of the example set.

Q.—Do you know that great quantities of liquor are consumed in Porto Rico right along by the natives and that it is made by the natives down there? A.—I must say that Porto Rico that I had, after passage of its own prohibition legislation, diminished enormously the amount of liquor made on the island.

Q.—Are not vast quantities of liquor there? A.—No, I would not say there are.

Q.—Have you any statistics of the situation? A.—I have such figures and statistics. However, the decrease is a public matter.

Q.—Have you figures to show a lessening of crime in Porto Rico since prohibition? A.—No; I do not think we can give figures.

Q.—Any decrease in the inmates of insane asylums of Porto Rico? A.—There are not a few such institutions. Save as they rest under private philanthropies in Porto Rico, no public record of the distribution.

Q.—Are there any statistics to show increase or decrease of insanity in Porto Rico under prohibition? A.—There are no records of increase of insanity. There are records of larger provision in recent years for those which would give larger statistics—but not show any increase.

Q.—But they have enlarged their insane establishments, have they not? A.—I think you realize, Porto Rico had virtually no such institutions until the United States went in, so there was not much such work undertaken.

Q.—There was no record kept before? A.—No record before. Have such as was kept by Catholic organizations and not matters of public record.

Q.—You do not know whether there has been an increase? A.—I know from the hospital and other records kept down there. There is no record of increase in insane.

Q.—Do you mean to say that the prohibition is effectively enforced in Alaska? A.—Not entirely, but in certain sections of Southeast Alaska, where public sentiment is strong, it has been enforced in such towns as Juneau, the capital, they have a larger enforcement.

Q.—Do you mean to say you cannot get liquor, and plenty of it, in Juneau? A.—Almost anybody who wants it probably can get it. But I have been told by those who have been recently in Juneau that there are at least fifty places in and around Juneau where liquor can be obtained, but liquor is not openly sold.

Q.—Do you think it better to sell liquor in the open or secretly where there is no police surveillance? A.—Of course, you cannot expect me to answer that question yes or no, because that is an intolerable American situation.

Q.—How many here do you think there was absolute prohibition any more than I would say it of any State of the union.

Q.—In law, I mean. A.—Yes, in law. I do not know the content was the same as the Volstead act; but they had a law.

SPEAKS FOR THE NEGROES.

Mrs. Peabody introduced Mrs. Marie Madre-Marshall, a teacher in the District of Columbia, representing the Federation of Colored Women's Clubs, and Vice President of the National Benefit of the Colored Baptists' Association of America.

"She represents," said Mrs. Peabody, "the 15,000,000 colored people who have suffered from lack of enforcement as they suffered before from the saloon."

"We do not want liquor back for we have better homes, better children in schools, and the morals of the people in general have been raised," said Mrs. Madre-Marshall. "We further believe in law enforcement. It is the negro's duty to uphold the law. Anarchy affords him nothing.

"We stand against any proposed amendment. We do not want wine and beer. I plead for prohibition, for enforcement of prohibition, not only for my race as such but that we may be of benefit and help to the people that we must work with side by side."

Church Leaders State Stand.

Mrs. H. E. Goodman of Chicago, representing the Woman Baptist Foreign Missions, said:

"The Northern Baptists, now numbering 1,413,039, had in their annual convention, made up of delegates both men and women from all Northern States, passed resolutions favoring strict and impartial enforcement of the Volstead act, and demanding all public officials use their power in enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment."

Mrs. William Fraser McDowell, Vice President of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society, Methodist Episcopal Church, Washington, D. C., was called next.

"I speak," she said, "for at least half a million women and young women interested in and working for the welfare of the whole world.

"We stand squarely for our Constitution, with its Eighteenth Amendment, and Volstead act included. We plead for absolute law observance by every citizen, whether his station be high or low, for strict law enforcement by our Government, for swift and sure punishment of all law-breakers."

Mrs. J. N. Copeland of the Council of Women of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, said the council has a membership of 30,000 and stands for enforcement of the Volstead law as it is. The council, she added, is unalterably opposed to any modification and approves the plan to put enforcement officers under civil service instead of continuing them subject to the "present demoralizing plan of political patronage."

The next witness was Mrs. William E. Chamberlain, representing the Congregationalist women of Washington, D. C. Amending of the law, she argued, would bring intolerable conditions.

After Mrs. Chamberlain came Mrs. J. M. Stearns of St. Louis, who spoke for the Christian Women Disciples of Christ. She opposed any proopsition to legalize light wines and beer and said the society she represents will "work and fight" to continue the law as it stands.

Mrs. William Bancroft Hill of Poughkeepsie, representing the women of the Reformed Church of America; Mrs. Alice W. Heagy of Steelton, Pa., representing the United Brethren of Christ; Mrs. J. D. Sands, President of the Women's Home and Foreign Missions boards of the Presbyterian Church, and Mrs. Katherine Condon Foster of the Northern Baptist Education Board, all were a unit in opposing any modification or amendment of the law.

Students for Enforcement.

Mrs. Foster said she was convinced the women students in thirty universities and colleges she had recently visited were favorable to the enforcement of the Volstead law. The drinkers in colleges, in her opinion, were the minority groups. She admitted drinking may now be more prevalent than when she was a college girl twelve years ago.

Q.—Senator Walsh: That is twelve years ago you heard occasionally of girls drinking? A.—Very rare. Almost none. I can remember only two cases when I went through college.

Q.—You think it is more prevalent now than then? A.—Not among women students. Perhaps in other institutions.

Q.—You hear more about it, at least now? A.—You hear guarantees are attempts to destroy the American system of representative government organized and established by the Constitution."

"I find it necessary," she added, "to ally myself with groups of Democratic men and women who stand consistently and faithfully for the principle of law enforcement and for a State enforcement law which will make it possible to secure the concurrent action which the Eighteenth Amendment to the Constitution especially provides."

Mrs. A. Haines Lippincott, Chairman of the New Jersey Committee for Law Enforcement and Republican committeewoman, next appeared. She bore in her arms a rolled-up paper fully two feet in diameter, which she later described as being a protest against the Edge beer and light wines bills.

Tilts with Senator Reed.

During Mrs. Lippincott's appearance, a peppery political dialogue occurred between herself and Senator Reed. She spared no words in denouncing Senators Edge and Edwards and Governor Moore.

"I am a member of the Republican State Committee of New Jersey, elected on a dry platform with a great deal of wet opposition," she announced, "also Chairman of the New Jersey Committee for Law Enforcement.

"We affirm," continued Mrs. Lippincott, "that there is no solution in the return of light wines and beer. The only solution is to press forward, make enforcement a success, strengthen the law where needed and support officials who do their duty. To this end we pledge our hearty cooperation, not only for enforcement, but for building intelligent public sentiment for law observance.

"I present this petition carrying 16,000 names," she declared, depositing the big bundle on the table before the subcommittee, while spectators applauded.

Senator Reed began at once: "You have had several recent elections in your State?" he suggested. "Let's see, Senator Edge ran on a wet platform, did he not?"

"No," answered Mrs. Lippincott. "In some counties he did and in some counties he was dry."

"There are some counties, then, where it was popular to be a wet, and in those counties Senator Edge was wet?" Senator Reed asked.

"Yes, he was wet. I heard him make wet speeches one week and dry ones the next," was the answer.

Senator Reed—Well, did the people of New Jersey know about that? A.—Oh, yes; a great many of them. We are civically lazy; that is our trouble.

Q.—Well, Senator Edge was elected? A.—Yes, in the Presidential campaign.

Q.—Governor Edwards ran on that sort of platform? A.—Yes.

Q.—You do not say Edwards was very dry, do you? A.—No, indeed.

Q.—Edwards was elected? A.—Yes, some years before Senator Edge, however.

The room roared at the next questions and answers.

Senator Reed—Well, but Senator Edge was elected not very long ago, was he not? A.—He was elected the Presidential year, and a great many of us think he went in on Mr. Coolidge's coattails.

Q.—Edge went in on Coolidge's coattails? A.—He got over 100,000 less votes than Mr. Coolidge, and the names on this petition represent a great many people who voted for Mr. Edge, but who have found him out.

Q.—Edwards. I am talking about Edwards. A.—Edwards? I am a Republican. I do not know much about Mr. Edwards.

"Well, he was elected, was he not? On a wet platform?" Senator Reed demanded.

"Yes, he was elected on a wet platform, with the help of Mr. Hague of Jersey City," Mrs. Lippincott said.

"Haig & Haig or just Hague?" asked Senator Reed.

"Just Hague," was the reply.

Senator Reed asked if Governor A. Harry Moore was not elected on a wet platform.

Mrs. Thompson's Letter.

Mrs. Lippincott read in answer a letter from the Republican National Committeewoman, Mrs. Lewis S. Thompson, who wrote as follows:

Red Bank, N. J., April 10, 1926.

Dear Mrs. Lippincott:

Owing to illness I cannot be present at the hearing Monday.

May I say, as Republican National Committeewoman from New Jersey, that I do not agree with the statement of our two United States Senators that New Jersey is wet?

If the vote is their test, then Mr. Runyon's vote in 1922 and Mr. Whitney's vote in 1925 show only about a 10 per cent. difference between wet and dry, or less than 16 votes in each voting district. Mr. Runyon as a dry, and Mr. Whitney representing strict law enforcement, were conceded by the Republican wets to be equally antagonistic to their cause and yet this wet Republican vote thrown into the Democratic column, while sufficient to win the election on this issue, surely does not represent a margin impossible to overcome.

I would also state that under the wet political leadership enforcement becomes impossible, and in New Jersey many an effort on the part of the respectable element to uphold the law has met with organized political opposition.

Of the present wet leaders who now say that they would never concede the return of the saloon, I venture to say that not one of their names can be found on the rolls of any group who made the fight against this now avowedly dangerous social institution.

If the intent of the present Civil Service law is carried out, and if General Andrews's recommendations are put into effect, and if loyal cooperation and personal integrity and self-control are thrown into the balance, I am sure that the United States will succeed in the greatest moral adventure ever undertaken by a free country.

With real respect and admiration,

Most cordially yours,

GERALDINE L. THOMPSON.

Assails Officials as Wets.

"Now is it true, as stated in that letter, that the State is wet, I mean wet in fact?" Senator Reed asked.

"Do you mean that liquor is sold?" the witness inquired.

"Well, there is a statement in here that under wet political leadership enforcement becomes impossible,' said Senator Reed. "You have had wet political leadership, so you have not had enforcement, is that true?"

"Well," retorted Mrs. Lippincott, "we have not had enforcement as it ought to be, of course; what could you expect with a wet Governor and two wet United States Senators?"

Senator Reed—I am just trying to get at the fact whether it is wet there? A.—Well, of course, that breaks down the morale of enforcement.

Q.—Is it broken now, the morale of enforcement in New Jersey? A.—Well, it is being helped to be broken down by our highest officials, yes, but I would say—

Q.—Just one moment. And your people have elected these officials? A.—Not my people.

Q.—The people of New Jersey? A.—Yes, the people of New Jersey that are controlled by the political bosses.

Q.—Very well. Are the people not free to vote in your State? Do the political bosses run New Jersey? A.—If the people would all vote, we could overcome them.

Q.—Yes, but at the present time the bosses run it, the vote runs it, and the State is wet, that is the sum of it? A.—I believe the sentiment in the State is dry.

Q.—I am not talking about the sentiment, but conditions in the State. A.—Well, you mean that the wet people have been elected?

Q.—Yes.

Q.—And the wet people do not enforce the law, and the morale of the people is being broken down, and your State is actually wet? A.—I would say that it is wetter than it should be, with a fine law like we have.

Q.—Now you not only say that—let us treat this seriously. A.—I am very serious, Senator Reed, about it.

Q.—I do not know if you have been sworn. Senator Harreld—I swore all these witnesses.

Senator Reed—Now, as a matter of fact, there are vast quantities of liquor sold in a vast number of places in New Jersey. You know that to be a fact? A.—Yes, of course, but—

Q.—Now is that not true? A.—It is true, of course, it is true.

Q.—Very well. Now, I am not getting at the causes of it. I just want to know the facts. It is your opinion that if you could get the full sentiment of the people out at the polls and there were not any political bosses, that probably a majority of them are dry? A.—I think the majority of the people in New Jersey are dry, yes.

Q.—Would vote dry? A.—Would vote dry if they went to the polls, yes. But unfortunately they do not go.

CAY STATE LEADER HEARD.

Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney testified next as Chairman of the New England division of the Women's National Committee for Law Enforcement, also the Massachusetts division. She explained that these divisions include the State Federations of Women's Clubs, Parent-Teacher Associations and the college women's organizations from the churches.

"We support the Eighteenth Amendment and urge its complete enforcement," she said. "In 1870 Massachusetts exempted beer from its then prohibition law. Drunkenness increased, crime increased.

"The police reported that in Boston not over 5 per cent. of the beer shops sold beer only. They sold distilled liquor under cover of beer. The result was so bad that after three years' trial the law was repealed. In view of this experience the Massachusetts division stands unanimously for no modification of the Volstead act.

"And I present with this report the 'Massachusetts experience with exempting beer from prohibition,' the sources of evidence drawn from alcohol in the State, written a decade after the beer experience by Judge Robert C. Pitman, Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of Massachusetts, and the report of the Commissioners appointed by the Governor General of Canada in 1874 to visit States of the United States in which the prohibitory laws were then or had been in force."

Senator Reed—You say in 1870 there was a law for licensing beer? It was exempted from a former prohibitory law, as I understand you? A.—Yes.

Q.—Then you say that in course of time there were quite large quantities of hard liquor sold there, and for that reason the beer law was repealed? A.—Yes, and then it after they repealed the beer law and went back to prohibition until they reopened the saloons? A.—That is a matter that I have tried in vain to find out. I do not know. I know the beer law was repealed in three years, but you see I was not voting then. I suppose my father could tell.

Q.—But as a matter of fact you know that Massachusetts for many, many years before the National Prohibition act licensed saloons, all kinds of liquor? A.—Yes.

Q.—So that it did go back from prohibition to a full-license law, and lived under that kind of a law until national prohibition? A.—Yes.

Q.—I do not know, then, just why you brought your figures up to the question of repeal of the beer law and then did not tell us anything about the re-enactment of the law. A.—We have no time to do it. I was speaking particularly on modification and that is why I brought that matter up. It was "No modification of the Volstead law."

Her Views on Regulation.

"I tried," said Senator Reed, "to get one of the ladies to express an opinion and failed. I want to see if I can get you to. Do you believe it is better, if liquor is going to be drunk anyway, to have it where it is sold and regulated, or to have it sold in 'speakeasies' and out of the way places, by violators of the law? Which is the better of the two bad alternatives?"

"I live in a city," Mrs. Gurney answered, "that has always been a no-license city, at least for many years under local option, and so have had an opportunity of seeing the effect of a city that is dry. I do not find that the sale of liquor illicitly affected conditions in that city. It was dry, practically dry. I do find one thing more. I find that the late trains from the large cities were not proper places for the women to be on in the evenings, when we had sale of liquor, and we do not get the drunks on those trains now."

"If liquor is going to be sold anyway," Senator Reed insisted, "is it better to have it sold under the law, where it is regulated and watched by the officers, or is it better to have it sold in 'speak-easies'? Which would be preferable between the two?"

"I should prefer to have it sold in the 'speak-easies,' because if they are against the law of the United States, I think we can cope with them," Mrs. Gurney said.

Such a demonstration of approval greeted this statement that Senator Reed said, "I think the committee can get along without applause," whereupon Senator Walsh, the Chairman, cautioned against further outbreaks.

Senator Reed—Do you think Massachusetts officers arrest men for being drunk now under circumstances where they would not have arrested them before prohibition? A.—Why, yes, we can see that. We used to have crowds of them and officers could not do it, and now they stand alone. You can see the individual drunken man in Massachusetts.

Q.—You say they used to congregate in great crowds in Massachusetts, so many that the officers could not arrest them? That there was so much drunkenness in that State? A.—They used to stand so outside the gates when you went through to take the train. I can only speak from my personal knowledge.

Q.—You think there were so many the officers could not arrest them before? A.—I think they became accustomed to it. It was difficult.

"I did not know Massachusetts was that bad a State," Senator Reed commented.

"It has been pretty bad, but we are trying to make it better," Mrs. Gurney answered.

MRS. ABRAMS'S STATEMENT.

Mrs. Kate Trenbeim Abrams, Vice Chairman of the legislative department of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, appeared for the President, Mrs. John D. Sherman, and read a resolution passed at the seventeenth biennial convention of the federation in Los Angeles two years ago, following similar resolutions passed in the four years previous.

"This resolution was passed by the biennial, which represents about 2,000 delegates of a membership of the General Federation of 3,000,000 women, 16,000 clubs," she explained. "I think I should state that when it was offered that like one woman the delegation of every State rose and seconded it, and when that was done the full convention rose and it was passed unanimously."

The general federation in this resolution reaffirmed its position favoring strict enforcement by State and nation and opposed any change in the "standard of alcoholic content of liquor fixed by Congress at one-half of 1 per cent."

Mrs. Tilson Opposes Beer.

Mrs. William Tilson, legislative Chairman of the Congress of Parents and Teachers, the next witness, said she represented "over a million."

"The Congress of Parents and Teachers exists to further child welfare," she concluded. "This being so our association has included in its program for five years the following statement passed by unanimous consent at our annual convention: 'No change in the Volstead act that would re-admit wine or beer or otherwise weaken enforcement.'"

Mrs. Tilson submitted to the committee Gabreilsohn's table on "Drink Consumption of the Nations—1906-1910," which, she asserted, showed "conclusively that we should not be better off if he did it as they do it" in France or Germany.

"It shows that both these countries," she said, "held up to us as models, drink more wine or more beer, respectively, than does the United States, and what is more to the point, more distilled liquor. If you never saw a drunken man when you went to France or Germany it was not because there was not one there."

The Gabrielsohn table gave this data on "what the nations drink" in average yearly per capita consumption of alcoholic beverages 1906-10, the measure used being liters (a full quart):

Sees Significant Silence.

"If the Government is yielding to this call of the wet East for wet agents, wet attorneys, because it really thinks the country wet, I desire to call attention to the silences in the wet hearings last week. It seems to me practically true to say that silent was the South, silent was the far West, silent were the farmers, silent were the churches, silent were the women.

"I think, noting these silences, the time has come when the Republicans can afford to say 'no' to the demands—if such there be—of wet Senators and to man the enforcement machinery with honest-to-goodness drys who ardently desire to see this great child welfare measure a success. This is a consummation 'devoutly' only to be hoped but, I believe, wise for the Government to adopt as a policy."

Mrs. Tilton submitted a letter from Mrs. G. N. Mathes, former President of the Women's Church Federation of Chicago, who as such conducted an investigation of Chicago dance halls in 1917 to ascertain whether the 1 o'clock closing order was being obeyed by liquor dealers. The letter said, in part:

"We discovered drinking in all the dance halls, and with sworn affidavits went to the Council Chamber to plead with the Aldermen to pass an ordinance to prohibit the sale of liquor in dance halls.

"Anton Cermack now President of the County Board of Cook County, who, with George Brennen, recently appeared before this body to plead for liquor in order to preserve the morals of our youth, conducted the hearings for the wets. Mr. Cermack had no official position in the Council at that time, but was for years the leader of the organized liquor interests of Illinois, and in that capacity appeared as an advocate of their interest at this hearing."

In conclusion, Mrs. Tilton advised the subcommittee to look at things in a far broader view than that a few great un-American cities in this country are breaking the law.

Saying it took eighty years to make nationalism a success, she added:

"Why go into what New York and Chicago are doing today, two great un-American cities? Why go to what is happening in six years? Let us go back to what has happened in a hundred years. That is the lesson of history, and my organization is going to see prohibition through even if it takes a hundred years."

New York Woman Heard.

The President of the New York State Law Enforcement Committee, Mrs. Samuel J. Bens, declared:

"Conditions are far better now in New York State, as poorly as the law is being enforced, than in pre-prohibition days."

"Much has been said before this committee about the appalling conditions in New York State," she asserted. "They have seemed to try to make it apear graft and corruption are rampant. I have no doubt these evils do exist. Habits do not change overnight, and surely no one here can have forgotten what is reported to have transpired in the old days.

"Then, too, I would like to call your attention to the fact that New York has not a State enforcement code. Conditions were much better when such an act was in force.

"In the name of the New York committee I protest against all the bills being considered here. We feel they are just an opening wedge to repeal the Eighteenth Amendment."

ERIE COUNTY PROTEST.

Mrs. Chauncey Hamlin of Buffalo, representing the Erie County League of Women Voters, said she represented a class of citizens "who resent the present condition in New York State, who resent the use that is made of the lawlessness and crime now prevalent, as a sweeping arraignment against the Eighteenth Amendment—which lawlessness and crime is largely due to our old-fashioned and out-worn criminal code, which is now being revived in the Legislature, and also to the overcrowding of our Federal courts, which have become police courts during the last four years.

"We know that every political and other power in the State is trying to defeat the Republican Party in upholding this platform.

"We have never had a show in the State of New York. Nicholas Murray Butler does not represent all the respectable people of the State of New York. He represents a class of financiers and socially famous people, who are always on the front page of the press, who do not represent the real citizens of New York. As I see it, there are just two classes, the real opponents of law enforcement, they are that class, and then those unfortunates at the other end of the scale from whom our criminals come, and those two opposite poles meet as the one big deterrent to law enforcement in the State of New York."

Mrs. Helm Bruce, Chairman of the Law Enforcement Committee for Kentucky, testified that her State, once "the home of good whisky," was formerly controlled by the liquor interests, but now "things are so different" and the State was "prosperous, happy and sober, there being no drinking, no drunkenness."

The last witness was Mrs. Harvey J. Flint of the Executive Committee for the Women's Rhode Island Committee for Law Enforcement, who presented signatures showing that 50,000 organized women in that State "had taken their stand unreservedly to support the Eighteenth Amendment, to admit of no repeal and no modification of the Volstead act."

MacGregor Hits Dry Law.

Representative Clarence MacGregor of New York submitted to the committee a statement in which he declared the hearings so far had shown that "prohibition has been a colossal failure, is destroying our Government and civilization, breeding dangerous discontent, has destroyed awe and respect for the Federal Government, destroying respect for all law, brought on an era of crime and immorality undermining the morality of our youth."

"It has created," he said, "a huge ineffective department of Government for enforcement, added millions to Government expense, filled the land with Government agents and spies, hectored and annoyed legitimate business, the department is honey-combed with graft and corruption, it has made a police court out of honored United States Courts, clogged the judicial machinery.

"The whole situation is a stench in the nostrils of decent citizens. Unless this fanaticism is curbed and checked soon, grave results will follow. The situation is getting worse. Congress should take immediate steps to rectify the error of the century. The best plan suggested is to let each State fix its own definition of what is intoxicating. This is an emergency measure: then follow that by repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment.

Statement by Sullivan.

Representative James A. Gallivan of Massachusetts also submitted a statement.

"I am a member of the subcommittee of the House Appropriations Committee, which prepares the Treasury Appropriation bill in which is included the item for the prohibition unit." He said in part, "I have been on that subcommittee ever since the Volstead act has been in operation. I have seen requests for increased appropriations grow year by year as the applications from good prohibitionists for employment in the Government service increase. It makes my blood boil when I think of the audacity of some of these hypocrites who oppose any modification, but are simply trying to fasten themselves on to the pay roll of our Federal Government.

"By the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead act, the Congress cut off $444,000,000 of revenue from willing payers and already it has substituted close to $100,000,000 of appropriations for hungry tax-meaters who are willing to engage in the work of spying on their fellows to discover violations of the law.

"You recall the gic ious word pictures of conditions soon to be in America when nation-wide prohibition entered into our daily life and activities?

"Do you remember the romantic prophesies that crime would vanish?

"Has the evidence before your committee last week given you the slightest hint anything of the kind has happened?

"On the contrary, you know now that blind tigers are surrounded by romance, if not respectability, and bootleggers have a clientele that formerly belonged only to national banks or trust companies. Moonshiners are no longer among the outcasts of society, for the practice has become just as common among the cliff-dwellers of big cities as it always was in old days in the mountains of North Carolina or Tennessee."

The wets will return to the stand when the hearing is resumed tomorrow morning. They still have nine hours to their credit. Stanley Shirk of New York will be the first witness, it is understood. Because the Steck-Brookhart debate in the Senate has prevented any but morning sessions of the special subcommittee, it is now predicted that the hearings will run well into next week.

PRESBYTERY FROWNS ON DECEIT BY DRYS

PUSSYFOOT IS UNDER FIRE

Two Pastors Insist That Rebuke for Him Be Left in Resolution, but Paragraph Is Altered.

A heated discussion regarding whether "Pussyfoot" Johnson, prohibition advocate, was right or wrong in "lying, bribing and drinking liquor" in behalf of prohibition legislation, as that reformer in a published article admitted he had done, resulted yesterday at the annual meeting of the New York Presbytery at the First Presbyterian Church in the changing of a prohibition resolution which was taken as a criticism of Mr. Johnson's methods.

The discussion, in which several ministers condoned what was termed Mr. Johnson's deceit as justified while two others, father and son, protested against it as "foreign to the spirit of Christ," came with the introduction of the resolution by the Rev. John A. Erickson of Faith Church, Chairman of the Presbytery's Social Service Committee, which framed it.

The resolution began by urging pastors and sessions to "proclaim to their congregations that the Presbyterian Church stands by the letter and spirit of the prohibition law," to urge its observance as "plain duty of Christian citizenship" and recommending that the teaching of temperance be restored to the instructions in the Church on Sunday as a "personal duty and a social obligation." Then it added: "But the Presbytery discountenances as foreign to the spirit of Christ every method of deceit or trickery used to promote any purpose, however good or noble that purpose may be in itself."

Instantly the Rev. Dr. David G. Wylie asked that the sentence referring to deceit or trickery be struck out lest it be misinterpreted or place the Presbytery in an "embarrassing position." He was seconded by the Rev. Dr. Daniel Russell of Rutgers Church, who said he believed the "wets would simply make capital out of it."

Assail "Pussyfoot's" Methods.

But the Rev. Mebane Ramsay of Calvary Church, Staten Island, and his father, the Rev. F. P. Ramsay, insisted upon the retention of the sentence. The younger Mr. Ramsay condemned the methods of Mr. Johnson.

"While we stand unqualifiedly back of prohibition," he said, "we don't countenance trickery of any sort."

The elder Mr. Ramsay was more emphatic.

"Rather than this Assembly should countenance, directly or indirectly, a man who says he lies and commits fraud to carry out what he believes in," he said, "I will vote against the resolution if it is changed to lessen the charge against such practices."

Mr. Erickson, who presented the resolution, got into the discussion here with a statement in which he asserted he opposed the insertion of the reference to deceit or trickery.

"There is no more damnable group to deal with than these fellows behind the wets," he said. "I had rather tackle the deadliest snake than these fellows. Because of the great problem in fighting these underhanded men I believe Mr. Johnson knew what he was talking about when he said he had to use deceptive means to gain his ends."

The Rev. Oscar H. L. Mason of Van Nest Church supported Mr. Erickson. He said he was "scared" of the sentence, fearing it might be misunderstood. He said fighting the wets was in many respects "like detective work" and that whether the fighting was done by "Pussyfoot" Johnson or any other "pussyfoot" there were cases "where evil might be fought with a certain amount of deception."

Resolution Again Referred.

Here the Rev. Dr. Edgar Work proposed that the resolution be referred back to the committee. The proposal was passed, and then Moderator Howard Duffield, apparently trying to forestall further discussion along this line, said it must be understood that the Presbytery does not approve of the way prohibition is being enforced or that it is involving itself in politics, whereupon Dr. Tertius Van Dyke, one of the committee which drew the resolution, sought to "guard against misinterpretation of the resolution and its reference to 'Pussyfoot.'"

"We can't argue the prohibition question from the viewpoint that there are angels on one hand and devils on the other," he said. "I think we ought to examine very carefully the methods used in enforcing the law. I think we ought to fight the matter out as a Church issue, not concerned with the politics of it. That is, it should be regarded as a moral rather than a political issue. It must be understood that there are many for prohibition because they profit from it, namely, the bootleggers and soft drink interests. I object to any presumption that those in charge of enforcement are not trying honestly, to enforce the law."

When the resolution came out amended the final sentence read as follows: "The Presbytery hereby puts itself on record as approving the use of every fair and honorable means combating the restoration of legalized liquor traffic."

Every minister present save the elder Mr. Ramsay voted for its adoption, and then the Presbytery voted to send Dr. Wylie, Mr. Erickson and the Rev. Lee W. Beattie of the Madison Square Church House to carry it to Washington on Friday and present it to the Senate committee which is conducting the prohibition inquiry.

Take Up Merrill Controversy.

The Presbytery also voted to send to the Special Commission of Fifteen of the General Assembly, whose aim is to promote peace in the church, the protest of Dr. William P. Merrill, pastor of the Brick Presbyterian Church, against an editorial in The Presbyterian on March 25 attacking his orthodoxy.

Dr. Merrill was unable to attend the meeting because of illness, and he was represented by the Rev. Mr. James Farr, who presented a letter from Dr. Merrill in which the latter quoted statements from The Presbyterian and statements from his sermons and published matter to show The Presbyterian had printed "false and injurious" statements concerning him. The Presbyterian said Dr. Merrill did not believe Christ was God and that he "is not an atheist but is certainly in a position which looks very serious."

"If all this affected only myself," wrote Dr. Merrill, "I would meet it with the contempt it deserves. But it affects also the church of which I am a minister, and the Presbytery of which I am a member. If these charges are true, I ought to be driven from the pulpit. If they are false, the writer of them, if he will not offer a complete and honorable retraction, ought to be driven from his position on the paper."

Dr. Walter Duncan Buchanan, pastor of the Broadway Presbyterian Church, opposed having Dr. Merrill's protest carried to the Special Commission on the ground that he "could not see why the Presbytery should take up the cudgels in behalf of Dr. Merrill," who, he said, if he felt he had been libeled should take the matter to a civil court for redress.

The Rev. Dr. Howard Duffield, who presided, was re-elected Moderator for the ensuing year and the Rev. Mr. Harold S. Rambo was re-elected Temporary Clerk. Sixteen delegates to the next General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, to be held May 27 at Baltimore, were chosen as follows:

The Eight Minister Delegates—Dr. Howard Duffield, Moderator; the Rev. Dr. Henry Sloane Coffin, Madison Avenue Church; the Rev. L. R. Hartley, Fort George Church; the Rev. A. E. Keigwin, West End Church; the Rev. James Palmer, Biblical Seminary; the Rev. Howard Yergin, Church of the Covenant; the Rev. W. Y. Duncan, City Mission, and the Rev. George J. Russell of Second Church.

The Eight Elder Delegates—E. C. Marling, Brick Church; W. W. Hall, Madison Avenue Church; J. B. Overton, First Church; Robert McKennon, Good Shepherd; H. T. Kerr, West End Church; Charles F. Darlington, Fifth Avenue Church; L. J. Sorg, Fort George Church; H. L. Crawford, Central Church.

The Rev. John R. Mackay, pastor of the North Presbyterian Church, handed in his resignation, which was accepted. After eighteen years of service in the church, Dr. Mackay said he desired to rest.

The only candidate examined on his faith preparatory to entering the ministry was Frank Moletta, boy leader at the Church of the Ascension (Italian congregation), who is now studying at the Biblical Seminary. He was passed unanimously.

TRY GERMAN BOOTLEGGERS.

Government Charges That They Dealt in Denatured Alcohol.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, April 12.—Though Germany has no prohibition law, the Government has bootlegging problems, as shown by a trial, starting today, involving internal revenue collectors, high police officials and illicit liquor manufacturers and sellers.

In this case alone it is believed that at least 2,500,000 liters of denatured alcohol was withdrawn from Government bond, purified and sold.

Hermann Weber, who engineered the entire business, was able to purchase alcohol for one-fifth its regular sale price, because he obtained certificates that it was for industrial purposes. The profits of the bootleggers has run into many millions of marks.

Seven lawyers will take turns defending the accused in the trial, which will last at least two months with the examination of 150 witnesses.

AXEL VOLSTEAD ARRESTED.

Arraigned as Drunk in Chicago—Says He Is Andrew's Nephew.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, April 12.—Axel Volstead of 1,642 North La Salle Street, who said he was a nephew of the author of the Volstead act, was arraigned in the Chicago Avenue Court today for drunkenness.

"And I want a jury trial," he said. "I'm afraid my name might get me into trouble."

Judge Max Luster assured him that Smiths, Browns, Robinsons and Volsteads all look alike in the Chicago Avenue Court. With that assurance Volstead left his case to the Court and the Judge let him go with a reprimand.

The police found Volstead drunk, they testified. Volstead did not deny the charge.

"But I thought Chicago was wide open," he said. "That's why I sold the dry goods store I had in Minneapolis three weeks ago and moved here."

WILLIAMS WAS FULL, BUTLER ASSERTS

and I realized he was becoming intoxicated. I realized this by the conversation and by the look in his eyes.

He talked loquaciously of the civilizing influence of radio in the home. Then he turned his attention to a pistol and talked about that, too. I saw he was getting full, so I went out on the porch with Major Rowell, so that I wouldn't see anything.

"Later the guests brought my coat and hat and we went to the Hotel del Coronado, but before we drove away I glanced over my shoulder and saw Colonel Williams come out from his home and stagger across the lawn, and I hoped some one would put him to bed so he wouldn't come to the hotel.

"From the hotel I returned to the base at 10:30, and thought all night on the matter."

Captain Charles E. Rice, one of the guests at Colonel Williams's, testified this afternoon that drinks had been served at the Williams home.

"Was there liquor in the drinks?" asked the Court.

"I think there was a small amount. I drank four," he replied.

"At the hotel the Colonel appeared unsteady on his feet and like a man under the influence of liquor," he testified. On further questioning he said he had not seen Colonel Williams take a drink at any time during the evening.

One Witness Says Colonel Was Ill.

Conflicting testimony regarding Colonel Williams's actions at the Hotel del Coronado on the night of March 6 was given during the opening morning session by Major Ross Rowell and Captain Clifton B. Cates. Captain Cates took the stand as the first witness, after Colonel Williams, speaking in a low firm voice, answered "Not guilty" to the Court's question concerning the charge.

Major Ross Rowell, commander of the Observation Squadron here, said that Colonel Williams "appeared to be intoxicated" at the hotel.

Captain Cates, the first witness, said Colonel Williams was sick and not drunk. Captain Cates later assisted Colonel Williams's counsel in the conduct of the trial.

When asked his opinion as to Colonel Williams's condition, Captain Cates stated:

"The accused acted as a man who had been drinking, was doped or sick, or had something else the matter with him. Really, after hearing him say he was sick, I knew him to be sick. He did not act as most drunken men do. He was pale, and his speech was low but plain."

"Could he command troops?"

"No."

"Was he incapacitated for proper performance of duty?"

"He was."

Captain Cates then testified he did not smell alcohol on the breath of Colonel Williams, but was close enough to have the opportunity.

Colonel Williams, with his counsel, remained in the trial room. The Colonel wore service uniform with a wound stripe on the right sleeve.

In addition to Attorney Kirby and Major Putnam, Colonel Williams's counsel includes Lieut. Commander H. A. Garrison and Captain C. B. Cates.

Butler Emphatic in His Replies.

MARINE BASE, San Diego, Cal., April 12 (AP).—Working gradually up to a climax through the hesitant testimony of three preliminary witnesses, the prosecution in the court-martial of Colonel Alexander S. Williams rested its case late today after calling to the witness stand Brig. Gen. Smedley D. Butler, the Colonel's accuser, and telling him "tell it to the marines."

The General told in no uncertain terms why he ordered Colonel Williams's arrest for alleged intoxication in the public rooms of a Coronado hotel just after a dinner in the General's honor at the Williams home.

"I tried to see just as little as I could and get away with it," Philadelphia's former Director of Public Safety explained after describing the serving of cocktails at the Colonel's home and the Colonel's behavior at the hotel later.

"But I could not ignore what I saw at the hotel. Colonel Williams was incoherent. He was loquacious. His gigglied. His eyes were bloodshot; they had a queer, vacant stare. He was drunk."

Under cross-examination General Butler was asked if Colonel Williams might not have been ill, rather than drunk.

"Yes, he might have been ill; he probably was. They usually get that way when they're drunk."

But defense counsel did not let it go at that.

"Did you call a physician to determine whether Colonel Williams was sick or intoxicated?"

"No, I didn't," replied the witness. "A doctor might have helped the intoxication some, but he could not have cured the situation Colonel Williams created."

"But why did you not call a board of inquiry to determine whether the Colonel actually was intoxicated before moving to court-martial him?"

"Because," retorted General Butler with asperity, "in the ordinary procedure of the Marine Corps we do not call boards of inquiry to investigate the condition of people we know are drunk."

The General admitted that he was nervous and suffering from an infected tooth on the night of the Coronado party. He denied, however, that the toothache had irritated him into incapacity for duty, thus answering the defense suggestion that Colonel Williams might have escaped court-martial had General Butler's teeth not been bothering him.

He said he went to Rear Admiral Ashley Robertson, Commandant of the Eleventh Naval District, his immediate superior, thinking that possibly his own law enforcement career in Philadelphia might have made him too sensitive to drinking.

"But Admiral Robertson said, 'Butler, you might have overlooked what happened at Williams's home, but you can't overlook what happened at the hotel,' so I went ahead."

During the interview there was also talk of what people might think of a man who in Philadelphia was the terror of flask-toters, but who in Coronado was incapable of noticing offenses involving liquor.

"I told Admiral Robertson," he said, "that I knew several Easterners registered at the Coronado Hotel. I asked him what was to become of me if, after I had spent two years as a cop in Philadelphia, hammering people's heads off for liquor violations, I let a thing like this get by me."

With the conclusion of General Butler's testimony the prosecution rested its case, and the defense being unprepared to proceed, the court adjourned until tomorrow at 10 A. M.

Frogs Protected by Law in Thuringia

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, April 12.—At last the lowly frog has found recognition in law and afforded the same protection as fish. Thuringia has passed an act that the game laws prohibit the wanto catching of frogs, which are guarded against extermination by a law forbidding their being caught at all during the spring season. Bavaria is considering similar measures.

the successful consummation of this national ideal should immediately and earnestly give your most intelligent and purposeful effort to the establishment throughout the communities of this country of a state of mind which will make law observance much more popular. You can hasten the day when the hostess will feel apologetic for serving cocktails rather than feel apologetic for not serving them.

"You may even bring about such public sentiment that every officer of government, in all its branches, sworn to support the Constitution and the laws of his country, will shrink from being personally a violator of the law. This is no small task imposed upon you, but I honestly believe that it is an essential element in the solution of our problem.

"Let us now turn to the enforcement phase. Law enforcement, the function of government, is accomplished through the courts appointed to punish the willful law violators. It is a too common error of public opinion to hold the policeman responsible for law enforcement. Any thoughtful person must see that enforcement is successful only when the criminal knows that if caught in his crime his punishment is certain, prompt and final. And this punishment must always result from court action. The policeman and the prohibition agent can only discover the evidence of crime, arrest the criminals and turn them over to the judicial machine. The next step is invariably the release on bail of the accused criminal awaiting the time of his trial.

Speedy Trials Prevented.

"Our Constitution guarantees to each of these accused the right to a speedy trial. The complicated conditions of modern living and the multiplicity of laws have far outstripped the developments of judicial procedure and machinery to meet them; and we see, in many jurisdictions, a condition which renders this constitutional right abortive and the administration of justice frequently so delayed as practically to defeat its purpose.

"I have given this matter most earnest consideration and am asking you to do the same. We recognize clearly that law enforcement is dependent upon intelligent, loyal teamwork between the prohibition unit, which makes the cases against the accused, and the judicial machine, which prosecutes these cases in court and pronounces the sentence upon the guilty. My whole organization in the field has been set up to make this practicable. Our unit of organization is the Federal judicial district, and in this the chief enforcement officer is instructed to team up with the Federal Attorney and, working in collaboration with him, under the guidance of the best legal counsel we can obtain, make such cases as will be most conducive to law enforcement in the district.

"When the people wrote the Eighteenth Amendment, in its provision for concurrent jurisdiction the people signed a joint note for nation and for States. They made both responsible for the enforcement of the law. But one cannot consider the history of the evolution of this national prohibition law, nor even read the Eighteenth Amendment, without realizing that it was, and is, the part of the Federal Government to stop the commercial traffic in liquor, while it is equally the duty of the States and communities to exercise the local police power so far as regards the small operators and distributors.

"The Federal function of eliminating the sources of supply and of eliminating the commercial traffic in liquor is so difficult a problem as to command all our best energies. We actually accomplish very much less when we divert any particular energies to the local police problem. The States and communities have ample judicial machinery and hundreds of thousands of policemen already in existence, and are easily able to carry their end of the work. The Federal Government stands by to be helpful, to point the way, and to encourage in every way local law enforcement.

"To this phase of our work we have been giving marked attention recently, and with gratifying results. More and more, throughout the country, local officials are assuming their responsibilities, and more and more the Federal forces thus released are finding means for eliminating sources of supply, and wiping out, through arrest and punishment, the large operators in the liquor traffic. In the development of this essential phase of law enforcement, in making sure that local officials, both police and court, are performing their functions faithfully, you citizens of the Republic will do most for the ultimate success of your national ideal."

Conference Fights Move to Make "Uncle Sam a Bartender"—List of Local Appointments.

The placing of an independent candidate, one acceptable to the drys, in the field against United States Senator James W. Wadsworth Jr. was advocated in a report on prohibition, read yesterday by Dr. L. P. Tucker and approved by the New York Annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, which met in the Washington Square Church.

The report scored both political parties in this State, declaring that the wets in the Democratic Party were in control of the Executive Mansion, and that the Republican wets were in command of the Legislature. It opposed "any attempt to have the Government control liquor, which would make of Uncle Sam a bartender," and advised Methodists not to vote on a referendum that was "needless, expensive, deceitful and in the interests of the brewers."

The annual appointments to charges in the four districts were made public. They involved seventy-three changes in pastorates and the appointment of the Rev. W. H. Lofthouse as successor to the Rev. George A. McDonald as Superintendent of the Poughkeepsie District. Dr. McDonald is assigned to the Tremont Church here.

Bishop Francis J. McConnell in announcing the appointments said they had been made after the most careful consideration. The Rev. Lewis F. Christian of the Washington Square Church is transferred to the New York East Conference and will be pastor of the Fourth Avenue Church, Brooklyn. His place will be taken by the Rev. C. R. Ross of the Central Church of Yonkers.

Reading his report on prohibition, Dr. Tucker declared that the prohibition movement had shown enough vitality to live through the present attack and grow stronger on account of the attack.

Expect More From Congress.

"A wet minority in Congress has made a lot of noise, but the Volstead act has not been weakened and is not going to be," the report said. "After a week of debate a measure designed to cripple the work of the Federal agents was allowed to come to a vote in the House and polled seventeen votes. Congress has given the wets nothing and has given the drys a lot, and it is going to give them a lot more before it adjourns.

"Prohibition has gained in Congress, and from judicial decisions and from administration efficiency, and has demonstrated its usefulness as a hygienic and economic force. • • •

"A systematic campaign of villification has been carried on. This has been participated in by unauthorized research committees of religious bodies, by high ecclesiastics who have hidden behind sacredotal robes, and by officials of so-called church temperance societies. The antidote for the poison is a campaign of education carried on under the auspices of the militant Christian churches and through the agencies created by them.

"We recommend that our members, both lay and clerical, use all diligence to prevent any letting down in the teaching in the public schools of the effects of alcohol upon the human system; that temperance day in Sunday schools shall not be omitted, but rather shall be made more prominent than heretofore; that all diligence be used to counteract the lying propaganda of the organized wet interests, and that literature be distributed systematically and generously.

Against Federal Control.

"We object to any form of Government control, as it has always proven a failure and is proving worse than a failure in the Canadian Provinces. We would rather have the report of the unbiased Congressional Committee than the recommendation of the distinguished President of Columbia University as to America's best policy for the control of the drink evil.

"The New York Legislature defaulted on the passage of a State enforcement code. The trouble with New York is that the wet end of both political parties is in control. • • •

"We insist that this year a candidate for the governorship shall be nominated who can be trusted by the dry voters. We are unalterably opposed to the attitude taken by United States Senator James W. Wadsworth Jr. toward the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead act.

"If neither political party presents a candidate for United States Senator for whom believers in prohibition can vote, we recommend that an acceptable independent candidate should be nominated for United States Senator. • • •

"We urge the immediate passage of an administration bill to reorganize the prohibition unit, and establish a Prohibition Bureau with a head so that responsibility can be located when things go wrong. We call upon Congress to give the prohibition enforcement force all possible and needed assistance."

John E. Andrus, Treasurer of the Conference Board of Trustees, in his report, said that ease of conscience and Christian living were to be preferred to great wealth. He has been Treasurer of the board for twenty-six years.

WILL ROGERS GIVES $2,500.

His Donation to Jewish Campaign Equals Proceeds of Concert.

The proceeds of the concert in which Will Rogers appeared as the star on Sunday night at Carnegie Hall, amounted to $2,500. Mr. Rogers sent a check for this amount yesterday as his contribution to the United Jewish Campaign of New York, of which William Fox is Chairman.

Rogers was asked about his contribution as he was rushing for a train to do "one-night stands in the sticks," as he expressed it.

"Yes, sir," he said a little modestly, "that was my contribution to the fund, but the funny thing was, they thought I was kidding and wouldn't take the check. They couldn't seem to see a comedian giving money away. But I assure them it was a perfectly good check, and they took it, so it looks like a joke on them. But I'm mighty glad to do what I can for the Jewish fund, and some night I'm going to play for the Irish. I make it a rule to play every Sunday night for charity, and that's what I did last night."

At the headquarters of the United Jewish Campaign at the Hotel Biltmore it was said that the contribution from Rogers was particularly gratifying and in "keeping with the big heart of the comedian," also that it set an example others might follow.

The campaign here is raising $6,000,000 as part of a nation-wide drive for a $15,000,000 chest to aid the Jews of Eastern Europe.

PRAISES AMERICAN STAGE.

Roland Holt Speaks at the Book and Craft Luncheon.

A comparison of the American and English theatrical situations was made by Roland Holt at the Book and Craft luncheon at the Hotel Claridge yesterday. He spoke optimistically of the accomplishments of the American stage this season and named more than a dozen plays seen here during the last year to disprove the contention that the type of play now produced is of poor quality. He also told anecdotes of his experiences in playhunting in England and of English humor.

The guests of honor were Fanny Heaslip Lea, the writer; Crichton Clark, attorney; Walter Pulitzer, Howard B. Spencer, Grant Mitchell, Kenneth Webb, Mrs. Marshall Darrach, Constance D'Arcy Mackay, Orcella Rexford, Peirce R. Benton and George Mead.

Third Kastel Trial Starts Today.

The third trial of Philip Kastel, known as "Dandy Phil," will begin this morning before Federal Judge Nesbett, who presided at the other two trials which resulted in disagreements. United States Attorney Buckner announced that he would personally conduct this trial. Kastel was head of Dillon & Co., a brokerage concern which became bankrupt in September, 1921, with assets of $1,300 and liabilities of $574,861.35. It is alleged that Kastel took more than $150,000 out of the firm and spent it along Broadway.

UPHOLDS JAMAICA BAY PLAN

Dock Department for Completing $2,000,000 Hylan Program.

The immediate completion of the entire Jamaica Bay development program, involving the expenditure of more than $3,000,000, as authorized in the Hylan administration, and new construction to cost the city $2,650,000 was recommended in the report submitted to the Board of Estimate yesterday by the Department of Docks.

The board will hold a public hearing on this report on Monday, April 26, when civic and industrial organizations will attend to urge the adoption of the program.

P.A. is pippin pipe
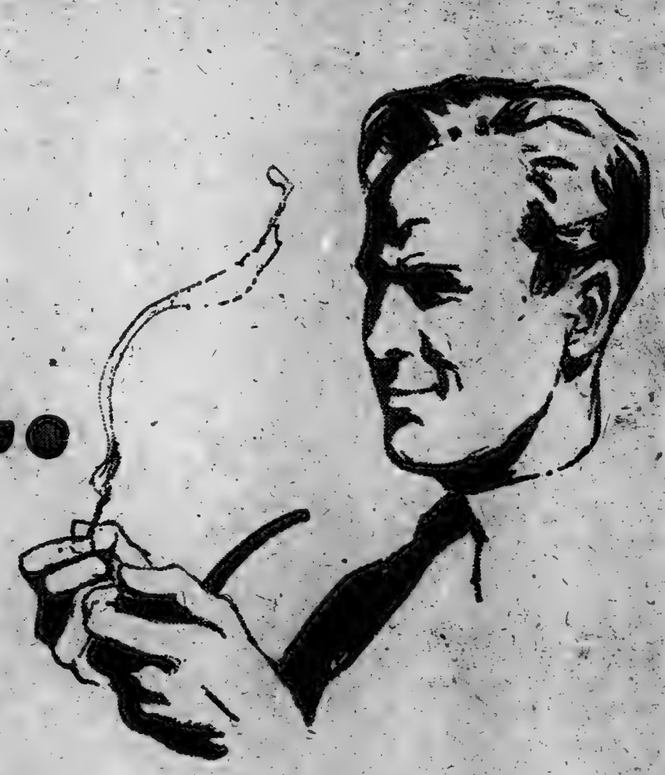
tobacco



THOSE fellows who get so much fun out of a pipe—don't envy them . . . emulate them! Get yourself a jimmy-pipe and a tidy red tin of Prince Albert. That's what they did, and look at them. Wearing smiles a mile wide. Puffing away on good old P. A. and happy as ducklings in their first rain-storm.

There's no trick about it . . . no deep, dark secret. P. A. is pippin pipe tobacco, made for pleasure and lots of it. Prince Albert is mellow as moonlight on a silent summer sea. Fragrant as a breeze that filters through apple-blossoms. Cool and sweet in a way that spells comfort to a pipe-smoker.

Not the least of P. A.'s virtues is the kindly way it treats a fellow's tongue. The Prince Albert process cut out bite and parch years ago, thereby opening the gates to smoke-peace for millions of men. No matter how hard you smoke P. A., there is no protest from your tongue or throat.

To make sure that you are not missing the full enjoyment of your pipe, go to the nearest tobacco shop and tell the man you want a tidy red tin of Prince Albert. He knows of hundreds of men that have found the enjoyment that's waiting for you. There's a revelation coming to you with a pipe—and P. A.

P. A. is sold everywhere in tidy red tins, pound and half-pound tin humidors, and pound crystal-glass humidors with sponge-moistener top. And always with every bit of bite and parch removed by the Prince Albert process.

RIFF PEACE TERMS DRAFTED AT PARIS

Abd-el-Krim Will Be Offered Refuge in France and His Tribes Must Disarm.

SPANISH ENVOYS IN ACCORD

Briand and Painleve Instruct the Delegates Who Leave Today for Parley in Morocco.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, April 12.—General Simon, head of the French peace delegation for the discussion of terms with the Riffians, left Paris this evening for Oudja and will be followed tomorrow by the rest of the mission and the Spanish delegates, who are going by way of Madrid.

Before General Simon's departure, a final consultation was held by Premier Briand and Governor Steeg at the Quai d'Orsay, after which it was announced that there was full agreement between the Spaniards and the French.

At this meeting the Spanish delegates insisted strongly that the best assurance of peace would be in the complete disarmament of the Riffians, though it is a well-known feature of the situation that the main supply of arms for Abd-el-Krim's followers have in the past been obtained by purchase and capture from the Spaniards and by purchase from the French before the latter entered the Moroccan war.

Further insistence was laid today on the fact that these negotiations were not with the Riff as a political entity nor with Abd-el-Krim as its leader, but with the tribes and Caids of the Riff district separately, who will receive certain compensation for their abandonment of arms by having their depleted flocks and herds made up to them.

An agreement was also reached on the extent of measures of precaution which must be taken before any cessation of hostilities will be observed by the French, their 'de belng fully determined not to halt in any way the preparation for a new offensive in case of the rupture of these negotiations.

Peace Terms of the Two Powers.

PARIS, April 12 (AP).—What is practically an armistice along the Riff front, according to the latest news from Morocco, gives strength to the hope of peace as the delegates representing France, Spain and the tribesmen are moving toward Oudjda to open negotiations.

Premier Briand, M. Painlevé, the War Minister, and M. Steeg, President General of Morocco, had another conference on the subject this morning and decided upon final instructions to the French delegation, which may be summarized as follows:

Abd-el-Krim must leave the Riff, at least for a certain time. The rebellious tribes must be disarmed, and prisoners must be exchanged at once.

On these terms the French and Spanish will offer the tribes separately such economic and financial advantages as will make peace far more attractive than any possibilities of booty from continuation of the war.

The question of autonomy for the Riff has dropped out of sight. In its place is a proposal to guarantee each tribe its autonomy under the authority of the Sultan and under the control of Spain.

Apprehension was expressed in political circles when the conditions were announced, however, on the theory that Abd-el-Krim would accept only if absolutely down and out.

The powers are ready to provide a comfortable residence for him, and a villa in France, with sufficient capital for its upkeep, may be offered to him. The Matin reports that he may also be offered a handsome indemnity to leave the Riff.

It is thought that when those tribes who constituted the bulk of his force are treating separately with the French and Spanish, he will conclude that it is far better to follow the example of the former Sultan Mulai Hafid and accept an easy life outside the Riff rather than take the chance of being crushed.

TRIPOLITAN TOWNS CHEER MUSSOLINI

He Visits Excavation of Roman City of Sabratha—Sees Wild Dervish Dance.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

TRIPOLI, April 12.—Retracing the route the Roman conquerors' chariots passed 2,000 years ago, Premier Mussolini today inspected the ruins of the ancient Roman city of Sabratha, seventy-five kilometers up the coast from Tripoli.

Once one of the most beautiful cities of antiquity and built by Septimus Africanus in the first century of the Christian era, Sabratha lay for hundreds of years covered by shifting sands.

Its excavation, begun two years ago, is part of the Government's plan to redeem as far as possible all the landmarks of old Rome.

Escorted by a rapidly galloping detachment of red-robed Arabian cavalry, the Premier's automobile caravan reached Sabratha at noon and found a large part of the city uncovered. Followed by detectives, photographers and newspaper men, Mussolini strode vigorously through a forum of paved mosaic filled with white marble pillars to a statue of Jupiter, almost perfectly preserved.

He stood long, seemingly impressed by the face of the god who to the Romans typified power and supremacy. Clicks of the movie cameras mingled with the soft sound of the waves of the Mediterranean just down the incline. The Premier inspected the theatre whose arena is almost as large as that of the Coliseum at Rome.

All day long the trip through the possessions continued the standard of the spectacular set by Sunday's ceremonies in Tripoli. Relays of Arab cavalry mounted on the swiftest horses raced alongside the car a large part of the way. Every town gave a conqueror's welcome, the streets were lined with white-robed figures, arms raised in the Fascist salute, voices rose and fell in cadence, "rai, rai, rai, Mussolini."

Although here and there the chiefs could be seen ordering more cheers it was evident that a certain amount of the demonstration was genuine. However, I saw no signs of suppressed ill will.

He proceeded westward among the more demonstrative Bedouins many faces openly showed pleasure and enthusiasm.

The Premier was treated to some of the desert's most savage rites. The air was filled with the throbs of tom-toms as he entered Zavia. In the square in the centre of the town a mass of dervishes was swaying in a wild "Maddance," their long, black hair tossing, their bodies swinging from side to side, while an old Arab hammered an instrument resembling an ice pick into the abdomen of one dancer after another. The instrument penetrated nearly to the hilt, the dancer yielding and continuing his gyrations with the dagger dancing in the hole in his flesh.

At Zarud the objective of the jorney, a thousand mounted Bedouins, craching their rifles and streaming robes behind them, charged across the field before the Premier presenting a stirring spectacle of wild beauty. Thereupon, the chief presented to Mussolini an Arabian horse. Mussolini thanked him briefly for both his loyalty and the horse. The latter he will take to Rome.

On the return trip of the train all the station platforms were lined with natives. Tripoli is bright tonight with multicolored electric lights and the streets are thronged. Mussolini is cheered everywhere. Tonight's program includes more Arab "phantasies" and probably fireworks.

OFFERS TO DROP CASE AGAINST PHYSICIAN, 93

Broome County District Attorney, However, Wants Those Involved in Arrest Not Held Liable.

Special to The New York Times.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., April 12.—Charles E. Cook, attorney for Dr. Edwin Pye Turner Onslow Osbaldeston, nonogenarian Crimean war veteran charged by the Binghamton, N. Y., authorities with horse stealing and jail breaking in 1881, announced today that District Attorney U. C. Lyons of Broome County, N. Y., had telephoned him making an offer to quash the indictments if the aged physician would sign papers releasing Deputy Sheriff Foster Black and all other Binghamton and Broome County law officers involved in the arrest of liability.

Mr. Cook and Dr. Osbaldeston conferred today on the advisability of entering suit against the nine-one-year-old Deputy Sheriff who arrested the doctor here. Mr. Cook said that an announcement regarding the suit and the offer of District Attorney Lyons would be made tomorrow.

Dr. Osbaldeston denied today a story from Mount Carmel, Pa., that he might be the "John Klinger of Klingersburg, Pa." who twelve years ago rented a horse from a liveryman there and disappeared. The horse was found at Shamokin three days later.

"I've never been in Mount Carmel or Shamokin or Binghamton," Dr. Osbaldeston said when told of the story.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., April 12 (AP).—District Attorney Urbane C. Lyons of Broome County admitted today that he had made overtures to Charles E. Cook of Asbury Park, N. J., to drop all charges against the latter's client, Dr. Edwin P. T. Osbaldeston, upon the condition that Broome County should not be held liable for the arrest.

Mr. Lyons said he had investigated the case and was satisfied that Dr. Osbaldeston was the man wanted here, but doubted if Broome County would be successful in getting Osbaldeston out of New Jersey. "It would cost more than it is worth to prosecute and would not particularly satisfy the ends of justice owing to the age of the crime."

Mr. Hallanan, who was one of the largest property owners in the Sheridan Square section, died after a long illness on April 4. The value of his estate was not disclosed. Specific bequests in the will amount to about $100,000.

Mrs. Annie Hamilton, a daughter, of 4 Sheridan Square, inherits bequests valued at $50,000, while another daughter, Mrs. Mary Brady of 43 Barrow Street, gets $20,000. Mrs. Alice Koch, a daughter, of 149 West Tenth Street, receives a similar bequest, and George H. Hallanan, a son, of 72 Grove Street, is named the residuary legatee. A bequest of $1,000 is made to the Ladies' Auxiliary of St. Joseph's Catholic Church at Sixth Avenue and Washington Place.

The will directs the executors and trustees to pay 75 per cent. of the net annual income from the Hallanan Building, and Nos. 3, 4, 5 and 6 Sheridan Square and No. 4 Barrow Street, to reduce the mortgage now held by the Greenwich Bank and the Title Guarantee and Trust Company. These properties are owned by the Rumson Realty Corporation, which was owned by Mr. Hallanan.

ROCKEFELLER FUND $199,031,338 IN 1924

Foundation Reports $7,288,822 Expended in That Year and $8,191,008 Income.

$1,146,297 WENT TO CHINA

$1,676,495 Used to Fight Three Diseases, Hookworm, Malaria and Yellow Fever.

The annual report of the Rockefeller Foundation for the year ended December 31, 1924, released for publication yesterday, shows little changes in the volume and value of its investments, compared with 1923. Several individual items, however, show interesting changes, due to conditions in the petroleum industry. The aggregate value of all investments shows a slight loss compared with 1923.

Total assets of the Foundation, which are chiefly the gifts of John D. Rockefeller, were valued at $199,031,338 at the close of 1924. Total income for 1924 aggregated $8,191,008, and expenditures $7,288,822. The Foundation reported a balance of $7,607,187 on hand as of December 31, 1924, against $6,704,503 reported at the close of 1923.

The report shows that $1,676,495 was spent in 1924 for checking hookworm, malaria and yellow fever. The sum of $42,862 was spent for checking tuberculosis in France; $405,876 was spent for public health education; $189,468 for miscellaneous purposes, and $221,631 for administration purposes.

A total of $1,146,297 was spent in China to construct new buildings and to carry on the work of the Foundation there. The report also shows that $2,045,298 was spent for medical education, $910,730 to carry on various studies and to further the welfare of the public, and $425,000 for hygiene and public health.

The financial statements show that the total investments at the close of 1924 were carried at $162,423,343 on the books of the Foundation, of which $49,051,020 was in bonds and $113,372,323 in Standard Oil, railroad and miscellaneous securities. Latex, the milky-white liquid that flows from the bark of a rubber tree, when it is tapped, is the source of all rubber. The United States Rubber Company ships latex from its rubber plantations in the Far East to its tire factories. Special machinery treats tire cords in a latex bath and lays them side by side, producing Web Cord. See below.

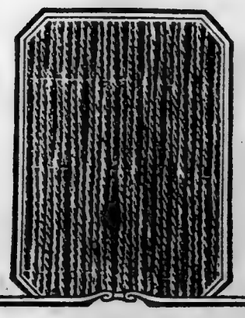
A—Latex-treated Web Cord. Note how each cord lies smooth and parallel and absence of cross tie-threads.



B—The old-style cord structure with cross tie-threads and uneven position of cords. Compare with above.

Here are the Answers to Your Questions About Latex-treated Web Cord

Q—What is Latex-treated Web Cord?

A—Web Cord is the special cord structure developed by this Company for Royal Cords and other United States Tires.

Q—How does Latex-treated Web Cord differ from the cord structure used in other makes of tires?

A—Each individual cord from which Web Cord is made is latex-treated by immersing the cords in a latex bath. The cords are then laid side by side and when the liquid dries they become webbed together by pure, natural rubber.

Q—Don't other manufacturers treat their cords?

A—Some do, but not in latex.

A—1. By a process called frictioning. The cords are passed between heated rollers and the rubber is squeezed down into and around the cords. 2. By treating cords in a chemical solution of rubber.

Q—What is the object of treating cords with latex?

A—All tire cords must be impregnated with rubber. Using latex impregnates the cords with rubber, without using chemicals.

Q—Why don't other manufacturers use the Latex Process?

A—The Latex Process was developed, patented and is owned by the United States Rubber Company.

Q—What are the advantages of Latex-treated Web Cord?

A—Greater flexibility, strength and longer life in cord fabric. The Latex Process surrounds and protects each cord with rubber and webs it to its neighboring cords with a flexible rubber coating. This does away with the necessity for cross tie-threads.

LONDON, April 12 (AP).—Hugh Tevis, son of the late Hugh Tevis of San Francisco, and Miss Prudence Ponsonby, daughter of the late Captain William Ponsonby of a distinguished English family, were married today in St. Peter's Church in Euston Square.

By HARRY CROSS.

The baseball season of 1926 will snap into action today when sixteen major league clubs in the National and American Leagues start the long April-to-October chase for diamond supremacy. Hope will spring eternal, as hope has sprung before, in the hearts of millions of fans in the various big league cities, as they assemble to cheer their favorites on their way to pennant glory.

The season gets under way most auspiciously for New York fans, for in the strength of the Giants they see another possible banner for Harlem, and in the sheer batting power of the Yankees they see great possibilities for another streamer at the Stadium.

Everything is set for the opening here in Manhattan. The Giants will start the national diversion rolling at the Polo Grounds with their neighbors, the Brooklyn Robins. Everybody will be there, that is, if the weather predictions are correct and it is fair and warmer as promised. Reports from various baseball centres, however, are none too encouraging, and it is feared that it may be a bit chilly for the country-wide baseball inaugural, unless the sun comes forth with some extravagant heat this morning.

Gates to Open at 12:30.

Mayor James J. Walker will toss the first ball at the Polo Grounds and Conway's brass band will do its part. The gates will open at 12:30 and the game will start at 3:30. Shortly after 3 o'clock, the players of the New York and Brooklyn clubs will have their annual parade to the flagstaff, where the Stars and Stripes will be unfuried to the Harlem breezes. The Giants, for the first time in several years, have no pennant to hoist this season, but they will see what they can do about getting another one to raise next Spring.

The pennant races in both leagues this year promise close competition and interesting baseball. With the world's champion Pirates endeavoring to retain their high honors, they have the Giants, Cardinals and Cincinnati Reds all challenging for their exalted perch. The Pirates, not in the best of shape for the start, will clash with the Cardinals in St. Louis while the Reds hope to get away fast against the weak Cubs in Chicago. The Boston Braves will open in Philadelphia.

In the American League, Washington's right to the pennant will be seriously questioned by not only the Yankees but by the ever dangerous Athletics who open with the American League champions at Washington. Another contender is Detroit, which opens at home with Cleveland. Then also there are the St. Louis Browns who will start on their way against the White Six in Chicago.

While the Giants and Robins are churning up baseball interests here, the Yankees will be in Boston, where they start the season with the reconstructed Red Sox and hope to live up to the reputation they have made as clouters during the early Spring playfulness. American League fans here have just as high hopes for the Yanks this season as the National League followers have for the Giants. Similar sentiments are entertained by the baseball fans in Pittsburgh, St. Louis, Philadelphia, Detroit and way stations.

Ceremony Will Not Be Lacking.

There will be oodles of fuss and ceremony at the Polo Grounds. In addition to Mayor James J. Walker a box has been reserved for Governor Smith, although last night it was doubtful if he would attend. Prominent personages in the city's political and judicial life will be among the boxholders. In the grand-stand seats will be every Tom, Dick and Jerry who can talk the boss into letting him off for the afternoon.

This opening game should be easy picking for the Giants, because Manager Wilbert Robinson's club this Spring has been below the standard of his teams in past years. The Robins lost a dozen straight exhibition games with the Yankees, while the Giants took the series with Washington by the margin of a single game.

The spectacle, which has been on view for so mainy seasons in the past of Brooklyn spoiling the Giant's coming-out party, is not likely to happen today for the depressing news came out of Flatbush last night that the great Dazzy Vance is suffering with a boil and may not be able to pitch for the Robins. These night-before-the-game rumors, however, may be taken with a grain of salt, and unless the Vance boil is one of alarming proportions, the chances are that Dazzy will be in there burning them over so fast that the Giants will be blinking.

In the event of Vance being unable to go to the mound, it is likely that Manager Robbie will call on Jess Barnes, who may be calculated upon to give the Giants plenty of trouble.

Robins Still Unsettled.

The Brooklyn club is still in the process of experimentation. The infield is not at all up to the Brooklyn's manager's liking and he has lately acquired Dowd, a rookie second baseman, who will probably get into the game today before it is over. Stock is likely to start at second. Later in the season the Brooklyn infield should be stronger when Chic Fewster and Johnny Butler are available for second and third. Marriott, a former Boston Brave, will start at third today. In its present disorganized state, too much should not be expected of the Robins for their tender feelings have been harrassed this Spring.

As for the Giants, they seem ready to start right off at top speed. It is likely that Manager McGraw will call on Virgil Barnes to start the game, and with the two Barnes boys battling against each other, a bang-up family row is sure to ensue. If Virgil doesn't appear up to the job, Jack Scott is likely to get the assignement. Pitchers are tempermental individuals in the Spring time. One minute they are right and the next they are flirting with an ailment of some sort or another.

With George Kelly back at first as a fixture, Frisch at second, Jackson at short and Lindstrom at third, the Giants have an infield which already has established itself as being as capable as the best. In the outfield Al Tyson has added strength in centre, while Young and Meusel appear better in right and left than they did last season. With a rejuvenated Manager McGraw on the bench to direct things, the Giants appear to be formidable enough to warrant the confidence their followers have in them this Spring.

Many Notables to Attend.

In making their season's bow, the Giants will be admired by numerous fans of all degrees. Among those who will look on from the boxes will be Judge James S. Foley, Judge Robert F. Wagner, Judge James M. Barrett, Governor Moore of New Jersey, Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City, Sheriff Charles W. Culkin, President John M. Heydler of the National League, City Chamberlain Edward Flynn, Chief John Kenlon of the Fire Department and Commissioner Thomas Drennan, General M. B. Stewart, Major W. A. Copthorne, Colonel H. J. Koehler of West Point and ever so many other notables.

Passing on to the wintry blasts which are sure to blow in Boston, Manager Miller Huggins will parade his team of sluggers for the edification of the Bostonians. With such clubbers as Ruth, Gehrig, Lazzeri and Koenig, the Yankees expect to start the season off on the right foot by trouncing the Red Sox. The Yanks, from the pitchers to the substitutes, are in fine shape for the season's ordeal, and Pennock, Shocker or Shawkey are primed to go in to pitch.

The Red Sox have gathered a number of young players under their banner this season and they have shown up well enough in their preliminary games to give the impression that they are going to make a much better showing this year than last.

The probable line-up in Boston will be:

SENATE TO RECESS FOR BALL OPENING

Agrees to Adjourn Early so Dawes Can Toss First Ball in Washington Game.

COOLIDGE GETS 1926 PASS

WASHINGTON, April 12 (AP).—United States Senators will take time out tomorrow to see the Senators inaugurate the American League baseball season in Washington. An agreement to recess at 2 P. M. was reached late today so that Vice President Dawes, the Senate's presiding officer, may throw out the first ball in the contest between the American League champions and the 1925 runners-up, the Philadelphia Athletics.

Senator Harrison, Democrat, Mississippi, one of the most ardent of the Senate fans, sought to have the Senate take a complete holiday for the opening game, but Senator Smoot, Republican, Utah, in charge of the Italian debt settlement, objected.

To Meet and Adjourn Earlier.

A compromise was effected by which the Senate will meet one hour earlier than usual and quit three hours before the customary adjournment hour.

There was no mention of baseball in connection with the agreement. In proposing a Senate holiday, Senator Harrison referred to the tension under which the Senate had been the past week because of the Steck-Brookhart Iowa Senatorial contest.

The question came to a roll-call and Senator Harrison lost on his demand, but obtained consent for a recess in time to enable Senators to pass judgment upon the pitching ability of the Vice President.

President Is Honored.

An engraved season pass, in an initialed morocco folder, to the American League baseball games here was given President Coolidge today by Clark Griffith, President of the Washington Baseball Club. A similar pass has been mailed to Mrs. Coolidge from Ban Johnson, President of the league.

Griffith told the President that Washington was going to win the pennant again this year, and Mr. Coolidge said he was looking forward to attending some games.

The President will not attend the opening game with Philadelphia tomorrow, because of the recent death of his father.

SWARTHMORE'S BATS WIN.

Beat Philadelphia Osteopathy Nine, 12-6, in Slugging Bee.

Special to The New York Times.

SWARTHMORE, Pa., April 12.—The Swarthmore College baseball team engaged in a slugging fest with the Philadelphia College of Osteopathy nine, scoring a dozen runs to the visitors' six in the first three innings to win 12—6, here this afternoon. Both teams were unable to score in the last six innings, although they hit the pitchers for a total of twenty-one hits.

Pete Richards of Swarthmore was the outstanding player, scoring three runs and two hits besides performing well behind the plate.

ASSOCIATION OPENER TODAY

CHICAGO, April 12 (AP).—The twenty-fifth annual race for the American Association pennant gets under way today in the three Western cities of the circuit. Toledo opens at St. Paul, Columbus at Minneapolis and Indianapolis at Kansas City.

The scheduled inaugural game of Louisville at Milwaukee has been postponed because of the condition of the Milwaukee park as a result of the recent cold and heavy snows.

Milwaukee, Toledo, Columbus, Kansas City and Louisville will open the season with new managers.

President Hickey conferred with the officials here today, going over the rules and sending four new umpires out for the start of what he predicts will be the biggest year in the quarter-century history of the association.

Giants Are 8 to 5 Favorites in Wall Street To Win Flag; Senators and Athletics, 2 to 1

Wagering in Wall Street yesterday on the outcome of the major league pennant races established the Giants as slight National League favorites over the Pirates, with the Senators and Athletics equal choices in the American League.

Betting commissioners reported that they had placed wagers on the chances of the Giants at 8 to 5 and on the Pirates at 2 to 1, the latter odds prevailing for both the Athletics and Senators.

Financial opinion rated the other contenders in this order: National League—Cardinals, Reds, Braves, Robins, Phillies and Cubs. American League—Yankees, Tigers, Browns, White Sox, Indians and Red Sox.

FORDHAM SUBDUES VERMONT BY 8 TO 2

Dwyer Limits Visitors to Five Hits and Maroon Gains Fourth Consecutive Victory.

FEASTER AND DELANEY OUT

Home Team Starts Scoring in the Second Inning and Is Never Headed—Zev Graham Excels.

Johnny Dwyer, Fordham's pitching ace, settled a two-year-old score with the University of Vermont nine and particularly with Fogg, veteran hurler, who faced him in 1924, by turning back the New Englanders at Fordham Field yesterday by the score of 8 to 2. Vermont succeeded in winning in its last visit to Fordham by 7-0, knocking Dwyer out of the box in the late innings.

The Maroon twirler was on edge yesterday, however, and limited the visitors to five hits, while his team-mates were clouting Fogg for ten. It was the fourth straight victory for Fordham.

Although the Maroon hit well, played cleanly in the field and acted smartly in general, it was minus two of its regulars. Feaster will not be back in the game for at least six weeks as a result of an injured thumb on his throwing hand, which received a complicated fracture from a foul tip in the first game with the Quantico Marines last week. Jim Delaney, right fielder, will be away for two weeks, being ill with pneumonia at his home in Howard, Pa.

George Sheflott, Feaster's catching understudy, did well, driving in a run with a single in the second inning and allowing but one stolen base. Zev Graham, with two hits and three runs to his credit, was the batting star. Captain Tex Landry also collected two hits out of four times at bat. Howard Carter was the star afield, handling five chances perfectly and also getting a base hit.

Fordham started fast, picking off one run in the second and third frames. The Maroon's big inning was the fourth, when four Maroon runners trod over the plate. In the eighth two more runs were added to the total. Vermont squeezed in a run in the sixth on a walk and a two-bagger by Bradley and another in the ninth on a two-base hit by Winchenback, pinch-hitting for Fogg. He scored on a hit by Conway, At no time was Dwyer in a bad way.

The Maroons ran wild on the bases, stealing ten on Thompson and Erickson, Vermont catchers. The four Fordham runs in the fourth were garnered on a base on balls, an error, a two-base blow by Dwyer, two singles and a pair of stolen bases.

After the fourth Fogg settled down somewhat, holding the Maroon scoreless for the next three innings, but the attack was resumed in the eighth.

NEW HAVEN DOWNS YALE NINE, 7 TO 5

Nine Passes by 3 Eli Pitchers Help Eastern Leaguers Win First of Series.

GRIFFITH LIFTS A HOMER

Sends Gleason In Ahead of Him for Victors—Lindley of Collegians Garners Three Hits.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., April 12.—Yale's three pitchers, Shoop, Holabird and Scott, allowed the New Haven Eastern League nine only a total of six hits today, but passed nine batsmen, allowing the professionals to capture a 7 to 5 victory in the opening game of the annual series for the city title.

Captain Lindley was the batting star of the game with three hits, but Griffin of the Eastern Leaguers lifted the ball into the right field stands in the third, driving Gleason over the plate ahead of him for a homer that practically decided the outcome. Franzen's clean-cut work at short featured the fielding, which was unusually clean considering the low temperature.

BRITISH LACROSSE TEAM LOSES, 7 TO 1

TURNBULL GETS FOUR GOALS

Scores Three in Opening Half—Meiland Tallies for Oxford-Cambridge in Final Minutes.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, April 12.—The Oxford-Cambridge lacrosse twelve put up a fine game against the Mount Washington stickmen here today, but were defeated, 7 to 1. Less than a thousand witnessed the game.

The British team seemed to be about 25 per cent. stronger than when it played Johns Hopkins last Saturday. The players made frequent thrusts at the Mount Washington goal, and only fast work on the part of Sleasman prevented their scoring. Gordon Bowker and Jack Meland were sources of worry to the Mount Washington defense.

Oxford-Cambridge also formed a strong line of protection for its netting. Borden, Ogilvie and Brown formed a barrier around the goal which the Mounts pierced only four times during the first half. Turnbull scored three goals of the quartet and Baker one.

During the second half Allen, Turnbull and Paul Norris each shot goals for the locals, bringing their total to seven. About five minutes before the game ended the invaders were saved from a shutout, when Meiland shot a pretty goal after receiving a pass from Ashead.

Gordon Bowker sprained his ankle in a scrimmage and was forced to retire. The line-up:

COLUMBIA CHANGES ITS BATTING ORDER

Lautenbacher, Pitcher, Is Out for Week—Track Men for Penn Relays Named.

Columbia's varsity nine, defeated for the first time this season by New York University Saturday, will take the field against Upsala tomorrow with a rearranged batting order, the shift being announced by Coach Andy Coakley at yesterday's Baker Field workout.

Another development is the loss for at least a week of Ed Lautenbacher, sophomore speed ball pitcher, who has been ill since Friday with a fever and whi not be available for the Upsala, Syracuse and Penn games this week.

The new batting order has Furey remaining as lead-off man, but Captain Ferdie Zegri has been moved up from third to second place and Trentacosti is batting third instead of fifth. Art Smith will occupy the clean-up position.

Coach Carl Merner of the track team announced several of his entries for the Penn Relays April 23 and 24 during the workout on South Field yesterday afternoon. Lockwood in the pole vault, Wright in the high jump, Kracht in the javelin throw and Potter in the running broad jump are veterans who will compete, with Archambeau also listed for the broad jump. Individual entries in the track events will be named later.

Merner timed his sprint medley relay quartet, consisting of Deck and Starkey on the two 220-yard laps, Jaeger in the 440 and Captain Campbell in the half, in 3:34, and since the world's record set by Georgetown last year is 3:28 and the Lion runners still have ten days to practice before the relay carnival, the veteran four is expected to make a strong bid for a title. The Blue and White also will enter teams in the quarter-mile, half-mile, Class B mile, two-mile and four-mile relays and may be represented in the distance medley.

34 AT COLUMBIA START FOOTBALL

Only Three Regulars Answer First Call of Coach Crowley for Spring Practice.

FIRST SESSION IS LIGHT

But the Candidates Are Grouped According to Positions and Receive Special Instruction.

Thirty-four men answered Head Coach Charley Crowley's call to Spring football practice at Columbia yesterday and took part in the first workout of the three weeks' training period at Baker Field. The drill, which was staged on the upper gridiron, got under way at 4 o'clock, and included several jogs around the field, a session in calisthenics and work in the fundamentals of play under the several assistant coaches, Crowley also delivering a talk in which he outlined plans.

Captain-elect Bill Madden and Mike Sesit, halfback aces, and Hick Brady, husky end, were in uniform, but they were the only regulars from the 1925 eleven who appeared. Willie Williams, who got into most of the games at guard, also reported, as did Green, a substitute halfback; Adler, star centre of the 1924 freshman outfit and junior pivot man last season, and Tuma, freshman guard and tackle. Many of last year's varsity men and present freshmen, who will be on hand in the Fall, are now competing in other sports.

The entire coaching staff was present, Crowley being aided by John Depler and Frank Brodil, line coaches; Billy Murray, backfield mentor, and Bliss Price and Ray Wagner, junior varsity coaches. The first task of the candidates was a run twice around the field, after which Coach Brodil took them in hand for twenty minutes of setting-up exercises, followed by another jog and Coach Crowley's talk.

The men were then divided according to position, Murray taking the backs; Depler the tackles, guards and centres, and Wagner, last year's star varsity wing man, making his début with the ends. Passing for the backs, the fundamentals of stance and position play for the linemen and ends and work on the tackling dummies made up the task.

Coach Crowley said at the conclusion of the workout that Spring practice would be "almost a waste of time" unless forty or fifty candidates took part. The gridiron sessions will continue daily at 3 o'clock until the three weeks' period is concluded.

C. C. N. Y. TO PLAY TODAY.

Will Meet Vermont in Its Third Baseball Game of Season.

C. C. N. Y. will meet its third baseball opponent of the season in Vermont University this afternoon. The game is scheduled for 3:30 o'clock and will be played in the Lewisohn Stadium. The wearers of the Lavender are anxious to win this afternoon's contest as they have won only one of the two previous starts.

Penn Installing Loud Speakers in Stadium So All Spectators Can Follow Every Play

PHILADELPHIA, April 12 (AP).—The Council on Athletics of the University of Pennsylvania is installing a permanent public address system on Franklin Field by which every spectator in the stadium will be kept in touch with every event in track meets and every play in football.

Ernest R. Cossa, Graduate Manager of Athletics, said the installation, which will be ready for the thirty-second annual Relay Carnival on April 23 and 24, will be the first made by a college in this country.

Plans for track meets call for four telephones at the corners of the field. Each phone will be connected with the broadcaster who will be in a booth from which he can see everything in the field.

The problem of keeping those in the upper and lower decks of Franklin Field in touch with all that goes on has been solved by a system of horns that will enable every one in the vast enclosure to know what teams are leading in relay racing, how high the pole vault and jump standards are set, and in football who made the last play, how much ground was gained and who made the tackle.

According to the engineers who are installing the system, a voice, with a favorable wind, can be heard four miles away.

ARMY CHESS TITLE RETAINED BY KIMM

WEST POINT, N. Y., April 12.—The final round in the tournament for the chess championship of the United States Military Academy here has been completed, the result being a victory for Virgil M. Kimm, '27, of Blairstown, Iowa, who was at the head of Section 1 in the preliminaries. Kimm defeated G. B. Coverdale, '27, of Phoenix, Ariz., leader in Section 2, by a score of 2 to 0. Coverdale finished in third place, as he lost by 2½ to ½ to F. J. Simpson, '26, of Rochester, N. Y.

This is the third year in succession that Kimm has won the Academy chess championship. The only opponents who scored against him in the preliminaries were R. Blair, who won, and Simpson, who drew.

The following scores were made in the preliminaries:

Section 1—V. M. Kimm, 1½—½; F. J. Simpson, 1½—½; R. S. Israel, 1—0; M. H. Ely and V. C. Greene, each 1—1; R. Blair, 1—0; J. G. Reynolds, 1—0; F. H. Johnston, 2—1½; S. L. Myers, 0—1½.

Myers and Trapolino entered the tournament, but did not play, and forfeited their games. Johnston forfeited all but two and Sanders six.

AMHERST ELEVEN DRILLS.

White, New Coach, Instructs 35 Football Men at First Session.

Special to The New York Times.

AMHERST, Mass., April 12.—Amherst College opened its Spring football practice today with thirty-five candidates reporting to Harry White, the new coach, who comes from the Mount Vernon (N. Y.) High School.

White gave the 1925 Little Three champions a light workout on starts, forward passing, kicking, receiving and falling on the ball. He will continue work tomorrow, after which he returns to Mount Vernon to resume track and baseball duties. No definite decision has been made, but it is expected Spring practice will be continued for several weeks under the assistant coaches.

BUNNELL TO LEAD YALE SWIMMERS

Captain-Elect of Football Team Honored at Banquet—Graham Is to Head Water Polo Ists.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., April 12.—Philip W. Bunnell, captain of Yale's football team next Fall, was elected captain elect of the Yale swimming team tonight at the annual banquet to the team at the Hotel Taft. Bunnell's specialities in the water are the 50 and 100-yard dashes.

He was also a member of relay teams which set world's records in the 200 and 300-yard events this year. He was also a member of other record breaking relay teams at Yale.

Bunnell lives in Scranton, Pa., and prepared for Yale at Mercersburg Academy. David L. Graham of Philadelphia goal, was elected captain of the water polo team for next year. Samuel R. Damon of Honolulu, was elected assistant manager of the Swimming Association.

Tribute was paid to Yale's two champion teams by President James R. Angell of the University and Prof. George H. Nettleton, Chairman of the Athletic Board of Control, who were guests of the Swimming Association.

N. Y. U. SQUADS WORK HARD.

Coach McCarthy did not permit the victory of the N. Y. U. nine over Columbia last Saturday to interfere with practice sessions yesterday. The Yale game will be played tomorrow, and, although Columbia beat Yale decisively, following which the Violet trimmed Columbia, McCarthy is wary of overconfidence. The session yesterday was confined mainly to batting practice.

Chick Meehan was just as hard a taskmaster yesterday as McCarthy, for his football candidates went through another strenuous session of Spring practice. The big squad of sixty or more men, veterans and newcomers alike, were put through a stiff scrimmage. Meehan is paying particular attention to the development of new material, while not neglecting the veterans. He feels, however, that the Spring training period is too short for anything but the hardest kind of work.

150 YALE OARSMEN HEAR CLASS CALL

Rowing Plans Complete With Mobilization of Big Squad Under Coach Sam Jones.

STEVENSON NAMED REFEREE

To Handle 150-Pound Crew Races With Mass. Tech—Harrick Named for Triangular Regatta.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., April 12.—Maxwell Stevenson of New York was today announced as referee for the Yale-Massachusetts Institute of Technology 150-pound crew races which will be rowed on the Housatonic May 1.

Robert F. Herrick of Boston, Chairman of the Harvard Rowing Committee for fifteen years, will referee the Columbia, Pennsylvania and Yale triangular regatta on the Housatonic, May 8. He has referred most of the races over this course since they were organized eight years ago.

Sam Shaw, Yale's New Interclass crew coach, this afternoon set the squad to work in the George Adee boathouse, about 120 reporting. Shaw came here last Fall from the University of Washington, where he rowed and coached. He is the only addition to Yale's coaching staff this year.

With the mobilization of the class crew squads Yale's rowing plans for the 1926 training season are complete. The varsity, freshman and 150-pound oarsmen were transferred to the Robert J. Cook boathouse in Derby three weeks ago.

The class crews will train in the sixteen-oared barge Cleopatra and in shells on New Haven harbor daily for the Yale class regatta, May 6, when a representative eight will be selected to meet the Harvard champion crew.

SQUASH RACQUETS HOLDS STAGE TODAY

Exponents of Game Will Meet Squash Tennis Experts at University Club.

The leading squash racquets and squash tennis players will go over the top this afternoon at the University Club in the first skirmish between the rival camps for the supremacy of the squash field. It was decided to end the club room controversies as to which is the better game and let the players themselves furnish the arguments as to which is the better game.

Today the squash racquets players will be hosts to the squash tennis players and will endeavor to convince them that squash racquets is the only game. Cy Thursday Hyde and his team mates will point out all the fine points of squash tennis as the two teams meet at that game at the Yale Club. The team scoring the most points at both games will be declared the winner.

Hyde will play No. 1 for the squash tennis players and Tom Coward of the Yale Club will be No. 2. The squash racquets line-up had not been decided upon yesterday, but it is likely that A. E. Ells of the University Club will play No. 1. W. Palmer Dixon of the Racquet and Tennis Club, the national and metropolitan champion, will not be available for the team. Other players who will be on the squash racquets team are Darwin P. Kingsley, Robert Gilmore and R. F. De Voe of the University Club. Mr. Miller, Henry Harper and Junius Richards of the Rockaway Hunting Club and probably the following: F. K. Keenan and R. Earl Fink of the Montclair A. C. and Royal E. T. Riggs and Henry Mills of the University Club.

The other members of the squash tennis team are H. R. Mixsell of the Princeton Club, Rowland B. Haines of the Columbia University Club, William Rand and G. M. Rushm[illegible] of the Harvard Club, Otis L. Guernsey of the Yale Club, Favin Brackenridge of the Princeton Club, G. G. Davidson of the Crescent A. C. and either Auguste J. Cordier of the Yale Club or Charles M. Bull Jr. of the Crescents. The play will begin this afternoon at 4:30 o'clock.

ZEOD WINS BY NECK IN RACE AT BOWIE

WHITNEY ENTRY BEATEN

Pyrex and Pandera Second and Fourth to Sea Moss in Fillies' Race —Green Blazes First.

By HENRY R. ILSLEY.

Special to The New York Times.

BOWIE, Md., April 12.—There was a mediocre card offered at the Prince Georges Park track this afternoon, the program being made up of six claiming events and a race for two-year-old maiden fillies. Notwithstanding the lack of promise there was a large turnout. The track was fast.

Place of honor was given to the race at a mile and seventy yards for three-year-olds, in which eight went to the post. There was no outstandinig favorite, almost every starter being well played. The winner was M. J. Creman's gelding Zeod, the least fancied of the field, which paid his followers $24.20 for each $2 ticket in the mutuels.

Tammaro had the mount on the son of Zeus and got the gelding away well, after considerable delay at the barrier. He was out in front all the way. He was going his best at the end, however, to take the money by a neck from S. Louis's Harry Carroll, which came fast on the outside to take the place by half a length from A. Schiro's Flittergold filly Buttercup.

Whitney Colors Lowered.

The Whitney juveniles burned up a lot of the public money in the opening number, a dash of half a mile for two-year-old maiden fillies. The Whitney entry of Pyrex and Panders was the short-priced favorite.

Pandera, away slowly, came on fast, but swerved badly in the stretch and could do no better than fourth, while Pyrex was up to take second money, half a length back of R. W. Carter's Sea Moss. The latter paid $10.30 in the mutuels. Red Harvey was up on the winner, which ran a very fast half, coming home in 0:48, only a fifth of a second slower than the track record.

Coming from far back, E. K. Bryson's filly Green Blazes was well ridden by Edwards to get home in front in a field of six three-year-olds that ran the six furlongs of the claiming event restricted to that age. Green Blazes finished gamely to win by a length and a half from H. G. Bedwell's filly Haze. The winner paid $15.90 in the mutuels.

The New Jersey Stable's Mary Grace, with Chick Lang up, was away like a flash and opening what appeared to be a winning lead. She could not carry the pace under 111 pounds, however, J. A. Coburn's filly Adieu took third money.

Muskallonge in Front.

Mrs. J. Rowan's old gelding Muskallonge ran to form when he beat five others in the claiming race at six and a half furlongs. He was the second choice to W. A. Smithson's Sun Rajah. The latter, a slow beginner, was in difficulties early and did not get a clear passage until they straightened out for home, but it was too late and he was beaten for the place by F. H. Smith's Macbeth.

Sea Moss, quickest to find her stride, raced under stout pressure from the start. She saved ground and held on under punishment. Pyrex, steadied back after the break, gained steadily and was wearing the winner down. Dangerous Kitty, hard urged throughout, was going gamely at the finish. Pandera, very green at the barrier, was outpaced, but finished resolutely. Foreclose stopped badly.

UNITED HUNTS COURSE TO BE IN FINE SHAPE

New Terminal Grand Stand Is Practically Completed for Two-Day Meeting April 24 and 26.

According to an announcement made yesterday by the United Hunts Racing Association, the Belmont Park Terminal course will be in fine shape for the United Hunts meeting on Saturday, April 24, and Monday April 26. This two-day meeting will, as usual, start racing in the Metropolitan district. Great progress has been made in the last two weeks, the announcement stated, in the work of completing the new Terminal grand stand. This structure has practically been completed and will soon receive its final coats of paint.

An interesting announcement is to the effect that many of the important races will carry a sentimental, as well as a financial interest this season, as places of plate will go to the winners. The Jockey Club, Joseph E. Widener, John McEntee Bowman, Bayard Tuckerman, W. R. Coe and the Havana American Jockey Club have already presented cups and trophies.

The United Hunts itself has added plate to the Introductory, a four-furlong dash for two-year-old maidens, which event will be the opener on the first day. In this race pieces of plate will be given the owner and trainer of the winner and also to the jockey.

The entries received for the Initial Handicap and the Sporting Plate, which have already closed, lead the association to believe the meet will be one of the most successful in the history of the organization. Trainer Max Hirsch has stated that the flat grass course at the Terminal is in better condition than ever before at this time of season and that it should closely approach the English standard for turf courses.

SHADE BOUT IS HALTED.

Referee Stops Clash With Moody After Four Tame Rounds.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., April 12 (AP).—The scheduled ten-round bout between Frank Moody of Wales and Dave Shade of California was declared no contest by Referee Mike Hyla of New York, at the start of the fifth round here tonight. Hyla stopped the fight after four tame rounds during which he warned both men repeatedly.

More than 6,000 spectators, the largest crowd that ever witnessed a boxing bout in Syracuse, jammed the arena and the gate receipts were estimated at more than $12,000. The fans applauded the action of Referee Hyla, but booed both fighters all the way to their dressing rooms.

Seeman Knocks Out Romney.

BOXING IN ILLINOIS UP FOR VOTE TODAY

Backers Predict Sport, Under Commission, Will Easily Carry Primaries in Chicago.

CHICAGO, April 12 (AP).—Whether Chicago, as well as a dozen other cities within the State, will have boxing rests with the voters in the primary tomorrow. The sport, under commission rule, comes up for decision with its backers predicting tonight that it would carry in Chicago by more than 3 to 1.

The law provides for bouts of ten rounds, which will go to a decision, or be no-decision affairs, subject to the ruling of the State Athletic Commission already provided. The commission will be made up of three commissioners, with a Secretary to be appointed by the Governor. Each commissioner will receive a salary of $4,500 and the secretary $3,500.

This commission will have entire control of boxing and wrestling, with power to revoke licenses and suspend boxers for violation of rules. It may refuse to grant permits for contests which it may consider one-sided.

If the law is approved tomorrow, there may be no boxing in Chicago until, perhaps, June 1, as the commission must yet be appointed to draw rules so that it may function properly. Governor Small has received more than 2,000 applications for membership on the commission.

DUANE BEATS BALDUC.

Carl Duane of the Bronx defeated George Balduc of Brooklyn in the main bout of ten rounds at the Uptown Lenox Sports Club last night. Duane weighed 129 and his opponent a pound more. Superior aggressiveness won for the Bronx boxer. Balduc did little hitting. He weaved and dodged and made occasional use of a long-distance left jab.

The semi-final bout, also of ten rounds, was fast and resulted in a draw. It was between Willie Spencer, 120, of Chinatown, and Micky Lewis Mancini, 118, of Harlem.

Morrie Meola of Greenwich Village won the first ten-round bout by outpointing Sid Burt of the Bronx. Meola weighed 145 and Burt 149. Burt was booed when he left the ring for constant holding. The opening four-round bout saw Jacinto Valdese of Cuba win the decision over Harry Brooks of Washington Heights. The victor weighed 121½ and the loser 123. Both men fought at top speed most of the time.

Martone Outpoints Leonard.

BAYONNE, N. J., April 12 (AP).—Harry Martone of Jersey City, 146½, outpointed Billy Leonard of Syracuse, 146½, in a twelve round bout here tonight in the opinion of newspaper men. Giovanni Salerno, 125, of Italy, outpointed Mickey Walters, 121, of Harrison.

Vaccarelli Is Beaten on Decision by Bernstein

BERNSTEIN VICTOR OVER VACCARELLI

Yonkers Boxer Wins Decision in 10 Rounds at Broadway Arena Before 5,000.

WALLACH SCORES EASILY

East New Yorker Outclasses Hall, Who Substitutes for Drew, in Semi-Final.

By JAMES P. DAWSON.

A sage old fighting head overcame the fire of youth last night in the ring at the New Broadway Arena, Brooklyn, where Jack Bernstein, former junior lightweight champion, won the honors over Tony Vassarelli, Harlem youngster, in a spirited ten-round battle which thrilled a crowd of 5,000 that packed the little Brooklyn club to the doors. Judges James Gerins and Tom Flynn and Referee Billy (Kid) McPartland voted the decision to Bernstein. The verdict was approved by the gathering.

Bernstein won handily in one of the best battles the Yonkers lad has furnished recently. He entered the ring at his best and had to come through victoriously as he did. He had to employ every trick of the trade at his command to stave off Vaccarelli. This the Yonkers lad did and to such good effect that he was able to win the decision even in the face of a terrific last-round rally in which Vaccarelli, throwing all caution to the winds, went in to try for a knockout. He rushed Bernstein tirelessly and twice rocked the Yonkers fighter with heavy rights to the jaw.

This tenth round was one of three which Vaccarelli won. He carried off the third and the seventh sessions and in the sixth and the ninth rounds the Harlem youngster held his rival even. But in the other five rounds Bernstein appeared to advantage.

Both Fight Viciously.

It was a battle which at times developed vicious action and was at all times exciting. There was no love lost between the principals and neither asked nor gave quarter. In the eighth session Referee McPartland found it necessary to warn Bernstein for using his elbow in close quarters and soon after in this round, the ring arbiter had to warn Vaccarelli for use of the barred back-hand blow.

Bernstein won because he is a better boxer than Vaccarelli. One of the greatest defensive fighters ever to grace the lightweight ranks, the Yonkers lad called on all his knowledge in this department to fight off the rushes of Vaccarelli and succeeded.

In a vicious first round Bernstein was best because there was consistency to his work, whereas Vaccarelli's was flashy. The former champion opened cuts over each of Vaccarelli's eyes in this session with snappy rights and lefts at close quarters. In the second, fourth, fifth and eighth rounds Bernstein appeared to advantage, boxing solidly with his left.

Vaccarelli staggered Bernstein with a right to the jaw in the third round, but Bernstein shook off the effects of the blow and didn't leave himself open for another. In the seventh session Vaccarelli again was the aggressor, as he was in the tenth. But the Harlem lad could not land with a blow which would turn the tide his way. Bernstein weighed 130½ pounds, and Vaccarelli 132¼ pounds.

Wallach Outpoints Hall.

Harry Wallach, East New York featherweight, easily won the decision from Benny Hall, St. Louis negro boxer, in the semi-final of ten rounds. Hall, substituting for Johnny Drew, who reported ill, was overmatched, being at a disadvantage in height, reach and weight. Added to this handicap, Hall had the burden of fighting a southpaw whose style was confusing. Wallach, jabbing effectively with his extended right hand and boxing with his left, won every one of the ten rounds in a one-sided, uninteresting battle.

Johnny Green, Harlem featherweight, carried off the decision over Sammy Shack, who substituted for Andy Martin, in the first of the ten-round bouts. The crowd did not approve of the verdict unanimously, and there was a roar from Shack's partisan admirers in the throng. But the decision was eminently fair.

Green, by his consistent work on the attack and his cleaner and harder hitting, clearly out-pointed his rival and was entitled to the verdict. Green weighed 121 pounds and Shack weighed 124¾ pounds.

Joey Farrentino, South Brooklyn flyweight, carried off the decision over Phil Tobias, Williamsburg lad, in the six-round preliminary, which furnished an exciting contest. In the scheduled four-round preliminary, Irving Price, Harlem lightweight, knocked out Harry Simms in 1 minute 56 seconds of the first round.

Firpo to Quit Auto Business And Devote All Time to Ring

BUENOS AIRES, April 12 (AP).—Luis Firpo, the Argentine heavyweight, announced today that he has definitely decided to liquidate all his interests in an automobile agency here immediately and to devote his entire time again to a cereer in the ring.

"I am only 31 and healthy and am still confident," he said. "I still have a future in pugilism."

He attributed his poor showing in his recent bout with Erminio Spalla to overweight and lack of training. He plans to sail soon to the United States, first going to England.

MARULLO KNOCKS OUT AD STONE IN SECOND

Drops Rival for Count of Two in First Round—De Kuh Stops McDougall in Third.

PHILADELPHIA, April 12 (AP).—Tony Marullo, New Orleans light-heavyweight, knocked out Ad Stone, Philadelphia, in the second round of a scheduled ten-round fight here tonight. In the semi-windup Arthur De Kuh of Italy and New York knocked out Fred McDougall of Burlington, N. J., in the third round of a scheduled ten-rounder. They are heavyweights.

Marullo dropped Stone for the count of two in the first round, and during the session landed hard and often. Ad was almost out when the bell sounded. A left to the jaw and a heavy right to the body sent Stone down for a count of seven in the second. Marullo, a moment later, dropped him again with a right to the jaw. A towel fluttered into the ring as Stone was being counted out.

Dekuh, making his first appearance here, was on top of McDougall from the beginning, but it required more than two rounds to hammer him into unconsciousness. McDougall went out from a series of head and body punches and was unable to leave the ring for several minutes after the knockout.

ROMERO SHORN OF TITLE.

BUENOS AIRES, April 12 (AP).—Alfredo Porzio of Argentina has been proclaimed heavyweight champion of South America, displacing Quintin Romero of Chile, who is reported to have failed to accept Porzio's challenge. The South American Boxing Federation made a ruling to this effect today.

Romero received the championship several years ago by order of the Federation, after Luis Firpo's refusal to meet the Chilean.

Carpentier has accepted terms for a bout with Tommy Loughran at Philadelphia on June 10 and for a meeting with Martin Burke in New Orleans on June 20.

DEMPSEY-TUNNEY CANNOT BOX HERE

WILLS MUST GET CHANCE

If Tex Rickard entertained any last lingering doubt as to the sincerity of purpose back of the announced opposition of Chairman James A. Farley of the State Athletic Commission to a heavyweight title bout between Jack Dempsey, the champion, and Gene Tunney, New York's challenger, it was dispelled yesterday.

Appearing before the meeting of the commission, Rickard, it was learned, was bluntly told that under no circumstances would the commission sanction a match between Dempsey and Tunney. The declaration came from Chairman Farley, who has repeatedly voiced his opposition to Tunney as the rival for Dempsey while Harry Wills, negro challenger, is in the background.

Rickard, leaving the commission office without discussing the heavyweight situation and maintaining a severe silence on the matter through the rest of the day, nevertheless is known to be considering the advisability of returning to his original plan of staging the proposed Dempsey-Tunney match in his arena in Jersey City. This alternative would supply a way out, unless some development occurs which will induce the commission to change its mind, and this doesn't seem likely.

This is the first direct intimation that Rickard has had from the commission with respect to the board's attitude toward the proposed Dempsey-Tunney match. It is the first time, too, that Rickard, since he started negotiations for the Dempsey-Tunney bout, has discussed his plans with the commission, so far as could be learned.

No Obstacle to Dempsey-Wills.

Absolutely opposed to the Dempsey-Tunney bout, the commission is, however, prepared to sanction a match between Tunney and Wills as an elimination bout, the winner to meet Dempsey. Or the commission wants Rickard to promote a bout between Dempsey and Wills for the title. At least, Chairman Farley insists that Wills should get his championship chance and professes to know of no opposition to such a bout, despite the reports that official and unofficial opposition exists.

Following the commission's meeting Chairman Farley, in response to a query from the newspaper men, unqualifiedly reaffirmed his previously announced opposition to Dempsey fighting Tunney.

"You can bet every cent you own and you can mortgage the old homestead that Dempsey will not be permitted to fight Tunney here for the title this Summer," was the emphatic manner in which Farley put it.

The situation rapidly is developing serious proportions, and from present indications, will only be obviated through a meeting with Tunney and Wills. This match will be hard to arrange. Wills declined an offer to fight Tunney last Summer when Rickard offered the negro $150,000 for the match, and Tunney, now on the threshold of a match with Dempsey for the title, is disinclined to accept Wills as an opponent. Then, although there has been no official announcement to that effect, Wills is understood to be bound to fight for Matchmaker Jimmy DeForest of the Polo Grounds. Further involving the situation is the threat of disciplinary action against Rickard if the promoter attempts to hold the Dempsey-Tunney bout in Jersey City.

Following the announcement from Chairman Farley it was learned that Humbert Fugazy, Ebbets Field promoter, plans to enter the field as a bidder for a bout between Dempsey and Wills. Fugazy yesterday announced he will go to Chairman Farley this morning to seek permission to start negotiations for the battle.

Fugazy already has discussed the subject with Paddy Mullins and has been advised that the negro's manager is bound by the Floyd Fitzsimmons contract until Thursday, after which any promoter who obtains Dempsey's signature will get the negro challenger.

Delaney Still Balks Rickard.

Rickard found himself against a stone wall not only on the Dempsey-Tunney bout plans but on his plans for a light-heavyweight championship match between Paul Berlenbach and Jack Delaney as well. The promoter sought to enlist the aid of the commission in swinging Delaney into line, but was advised that the commission intends to adopt a "hands-off" policy with regard to important outdoor matches for which the local baseball park promoters are struggling. Rickard informed the board he had received a verbal promise from Pete Reilly, manager of Delaney, that he would sign the Bridgeport fighter to face Berlenbach, already under contract, in the Yankee Stadium on June 10. It is understood the commission plans to summon Delaney and Reilly for a discussion of the matter.

A NON-PARTISAN DECISION.

On the face of the vote unseating Senator BROOKHART stands written the fact that it was non-partisan. Eager as the Democratic Senators must naturally have been to add one to their number, nine of them felt compelled by the evidence to vote that Mr. BROOKHART was entitled to his seat. On the other hand, no less than sixteen Republican Senators held that Mr. STECK, a Democrat, had been fairly elected Senator from Iowa. Rarely can a contested election have been settled by such an obliteration of party lines.

This is not to say that party motives were entirely absent. A desire to punish and excommunicate Senator BROOKHART may easily have made a few Republicans very hospitable to the argument against him. By the same token, the radicals of his feather flocked to his side. But, on the whole, the case was decided on the weight of evidence. The Senate is made by the Constitution the judge of the election of its members, and is thus able, when it chooses, to disregard the mere technicalities of State laws governing the counting of ballots and to seek to ascertain the actual intent of the voters. This was done by the Senate committee, which concluded, 10 to 1, after long and patient inquiry and tabulation of all the ballots, that Mr. STECK was duly elected. If its report to that effect had been overridden by the Senate, the effect would have been regrettable.

Senator CUMMINS of Iowa, at the very beginning of the debate, asked to be excused from voting. He said that he felt himself disqualified to act as a judge in the case. The reason he did not give, but everybody knew what it was. If BROOKHART were to be unseated, it was understood that he would at once enter the Iowa primary and try to defeat CUMMINS. Perhaps he will not, after all, sally forth on that venture with a light heart. His old boast that he held Iowa in the hollow of his hand was pretty well punctured in 1924. Although in that year he had the regular Republican nomination, at least 100,000 Iowa Republicans refused to vote for him. Memory of that fact would be a serious handicap to him in a Republican primary this year. In any event, he has had a severe lesson; and party discipline will be strengthened by the exclusion of a Senator who flouted the very party of which he sought the support.

REAPPORTIONMENT AND TAMMANY.

A Republican Reapportionment bill, based on the results of the recent State census, is confidently expected to usher in an Armageddon at Albany. But its outcome is expected, with equal confidence, to be nothing at all. Greater New York stands to gain two Assemblymen under the proposed measure, though Manhattan is scheduled to lose no less than four seats. Because this seemingly threatens Tammany ascendancy in the Democratic organizations of the five boroughs, Albany is certain that Governor SMITH will use his veto. Yet there is presumably some satisfaction for the Republicans in writing Mene, Mene, Tekel, Upharsin in large letters on the walls of Tammany Hall. Manhattan, which now has 23 Assembly districts out of 62, is to be reduced to 19 in a total of 64. The "sceptre" will pass to Kings with 24 districts. If Tammany is to retain its prestige and security, as they say in European diplomacy, it must be by entering into alliances with the smaller outlying boroughs.

To Tammany this will be no astounding news. The Wigwam has not only made preparations for an indefinite hold on the Democratic sceptre, but has recently shown that it knows how to put preparations into practice. The departure of Mr. HYLAN from the public arena was brought about by a Tammany-engineered alliance. It was not Tammany in a desperate defensive against a paramount Kings. Fourteenth Street showed its genius for alliances by going right into the Kings primaries and taking that county away from its regular Democratic leader. Without subscribing to the theory of a "new Tammany" in saintliness unsuspected of our fathers, the community did learn that in the matter of furnishing misgovernment Kings County could hold up its end very well.

County organization and local pride within Greater New York of today have ceased to be what they meant half a generation ago, and are bound to lose significance in an increasingly integrated city. It is no paradox to say that the loss of Manhattan population to Kings, Queens and the Bronx only ties the four boroughs more closely together. The former residents of Manhattan continue to earn their living in Manhattan. Their new borough allegiance is certain to take second place to a citywide loyalty, necessitated by the very fact that their homes and their work lie in different boroughs. Transit is neither an Olvany nor a McCooey question. That local organization will take the lead among New York Democrats which recognizes and serves best the interests of the city as a whole.

THE WORLD'S LAUGHING-STOCK.

"According to the views of Mr. LOUIS MARSHALL, which he admits to have been "hastily jotted down," if Congress were to rewrite the Volstead act in the manner outlined by the referendum proposed for this State, it would render us "the laughing-stock of the world." Can one be rendered that which one already is? The Supreme Court has decided that Congress can "define as 'intoxicating "liquors' such as contain one-half of "1 per cent. of alcohol." Few potentates have ever possessed a more arbitrary power; yet there seem to be limits:

> While Congress may change the definition of intoxicating liquors, it is not conceivable that it would, or could, permit the States to define what is or is not intoxicating liquor in a manner which does not conform with the definition of that term by Congress, in so far as to enable the States to permit a greater percentage of alcoholic content than is prescribed by Congress.

There is, however, an alternative course which Mr. MARSHALL failed to jot down. If Congress can define a thing which is in reality undefinable, it can also refuse to do so, committing the hard problem to the States severally. That would be in full accord with both the letter and spirit of the Constitution. It is also in full accord with the idea of the referendum, which is that Congress shall so rewrite the Volstead act as to permit "the manufacture, sale, transportation, importation and exportation of "beverages which are not in fact "intoxicating as determined in accordance with the laws of the respective States."

Many things have made us a laughing-stock, to ourselves as to others—not the least of which is the difference of standards in different localities. Doubtless we should all smile at a law that made a man drunk as a lord in Kansas and yet sober as a judge in New York. The trouble lies with the amendment which makes intoxication a property of the liquor and not of its ultimate container. Yet, by and large, our division of authority between the Federal Government and the States is the greatest achievement of the American Constitution, and the one most admired and coveted by the nations of Europe.

If Congress in its wisdom removes the question of intoxication from the realm of arbitrary and false definition to the realm of fact, it will remove a stigma from its legislative record. If it will commit to the States severally the hard problem of regulating the intoxication of men by regulating the alcoholic content of beverages, it will at once contribute to the cause of local self-government and render a service to the cause of temperance.

NATIONAL SECURITY AND DEFENSE.

Hearings on the Capper bill "to provide further for the national security "and defense" have attracted many authorities to give their views. The bill consists of three or four brief paragraphs authorizing the President of the United States to draft all persons between the ages of 21 and 30, "or "such limits as the President may "fix * * * without exemption on "account of industrial occupation." He is to have the power "to determine and proclaim resources" of the country and exercise control over them through "agencies then existing or "which he may create"; further, he is "to take such steps as may be necessary to stabilize prices of service "and of all commodities declared to "be essential."

At the hearing on Friday, Senator BINGHAM of Connecticut pointed out that in the language of the bill the President was to exercise these great powers "in case of war, or when "the President shall judge the same "to be imminent." "What would happen," the Senator asked the Secretary of War, "if a hot-headed "President should be in the White "House, and start mobilization while "Congress was not in session?" Mr. DAVIS's only reply was that he believed the President "could be trusted." Turning to General LEJEUNE, Senator BINGHAM asked him whether Congress should not reserve its authority. The General thought so. Mr. BINGHAM's questions were asked with a desire to improve the bill and not to obstruct its purpose. As it stands, it is loosely drawn and virtually gives the President a free hand to do what he pleases with the war resources of the country in emergencies. Under the Constitution Congress raises and supports armies, provides and maintains a navy, and declares war, and it follows that its cooperation with the President in preparing for and making war is necessary.

The Capper bill implies that all the machinery for conducting a war is ready for the President. Most of this paper preparation has been done by the General Staff and the Assistant Secretary of War. "At the end of the World War," General ELY told the Senate committee, "we had a system which even the Germans envied." But at what a cost in money and sacrifice of life and treasure it had been organized! The Capper proposals, said General ELY, would put the system into effect just as soon as war was declared. There can be no controversy about the wisdom of being fully prepared for an emergency. Modern wars "are won," said WOODROW WILSON, "by the scientific conduct of war and "the scientific applications of industrial forces." Victory is possible only by the combination. "War today," says GROSVENOR CLARKSON in his comprehensive book "Industrial America in the World War," "is a "contest of all the powers of the "antagonists, intellectual, moral and "industrial."

Legislation like that proposed in the Capper bill is needed, because no man can tell how unexpectedly war clouds may gather. "It would be almost criminal," DANIEL WILLARD told the Senate committee, "to have had the "experience of the great war and "then not take advantage of it." That is a good argument for sound and enduring legislation. We are now in a period of peace that gives Congress an opportunity to study proposals like those of the Capper bill, make them more specific, if need be qualify and expand them so that the final draft shall be satisfactory to Congress and the country. There is certainly no occasion for hasty legislation.

EACH SENATOR A SOVEREIGN.

Few Americans realize how great is the power exercised by an individual Senator of the United States. The written rules of the Senate are loose enough, but the unwritten rules, the established practices, the mutual courtesies of "the finest club in the world" are much worse. They virtually enable any given Senator to decide whether legislation affecting his State shall be passed or not. He usually finds it sufficient to go to a Senate committee in private and get a bill killed before it is born. Sometimes, through accident or inadvertence, the slaughter has to be done in open Senate. One such case of an extraordinary kind occurred last week when a Senator demanded that a bill which had been favorably reported by the Judiciary Committee, and which had actually been passed by the Senate, should be reconsidered. And the Senate meekly submitted to this.

The bill in question was one to provide an additional Federal Judge for the Western District of New York. It had been introduced and urged for passage by Senator WADSWORTH. Last Saturday it passed the Senate without objection. But "subsequently" Senator COPELAND strolled in and asked that the bill should be reconsidered. He said that it had not been called to his attention. He didn't know whether a new Judge was needed in Western New York. Anyhow, he wanted time to look into the details of the measure, "since it involves my own State." His request struck even hardened Senators as unusual. They thought it implied something of a discourtesy to Senator WADSWORTH thus to hold up a bill which for two months he had been pressing the Chairman of the Judiciary Committee to report to the Senate. But Senator COPELAND stood his ground. He insisted that he did not want the bill to pass until he had been able to give it his personal approval. Some of the newer Senators like Mr. BRUCE of Maryland were inclined to think the procedure highly irregular. But an old member of the club, Senator OVERMAN of North Carolina, felt that the good-will and proprieties of the Senate were in danger of being disregarded by denying the right of a Senator to veto a bill not to his fancy, and declared "no Senator ought to object." In the end no Senator did object.

It was an unusual but neat public demonstration of the kind of thing that is all the while going on in secret. The people had supposed that the power of vetoing legislation was lodged by the Constitution in the President alone. But, in fact, there are in the Senate of the United States 96 men each of whom has, in effect, the power to veto certain kinds of legislation affecting his own State. This is the sort of invisible government hidden behind the courtesy of the Senate. The particular instance mentioned above may be of no great consequence; doubtless the creation of a new Federal Judgeship will be amicably arranged between the two Senators from New York; but the thing merits being signalized in order to show on what meat our Senators feed to grow so great.

POLITICAL RUMORS IN MEXICO.

Although the term of President CALLES is not half over, Mexico City is discussing the succession. Ex-President OBREGON announced to a gathering of friends at his ranch in Sonora on the occasion of a birthday celebration in February that he might again be a candidate. In Article 83 the Constitution declares that "the President shall serve four years and shall never be re-elected." General OBREGON was quickly reminded by General GOMEZ, commanding the Federal forces in the State of Vera Cruz, that he was disqualified. Furthermore, General GOMEZ served notice that he would oppose the election of OBREGON. This was on March 16. It was naturally assumed that General GOMEZ, who has an excellent record as a military administrator, would be a candidate himself. Three other candidates were mentioned in March—General SERRANO, who was Minister of War in President OBREGON's Cabinet; General AMARO, the present Minister of War, and LUIS MORONES, Minister of Industry and Commerce.

Coming down from Sonora to Mexico City early in April, General OBREGON expressed the opinion that there was nothing in the Constitution to prevent his election. He added that he would be ready to take the field again as a soldier if duty called him. Immediately after he gave the interview in Mexico City the Governors of Michoacan and Tabasco came out for him, and "members of Congress rushed into "print to declare that OBREGON was "their candidate." But within a few days he has renounced his ambition and proposed that Article 82 of the Constitution be amended to read that the President must never have occupied the office before, and that Article 83 be made plainly to forbid another election of a retiring President. "This move," says a dispatch from Mexico City, "is one of the most curious incidents in the history of Mexico." The Constitution as it stands leaves no room for doubt that the President cannot be elected again. General OBREGON's proposal merely signifies that he understands the Constitution disqualifies him.

It is now said that General SERRANO will be the candidate of both General OBREGON and LUIS MORONES, who, in consideration of their supporting him, will be allowed to name various members of the Cabinet. This report leaves the influence of President CALLES out altogether and must, therefore, be under suspicion. Until ADOLFO DE LA HUERTA led a revolt against President OBREGON, the two, with PLUTARCO CALLES, were reputed to be the most powerful politicians in Mexico. CALLES, as the successor of President OBREGON, can hardly be a figurehead. But where there is smoke there must be some fire. Politics in Mexico will bear watching.

THE MERRY MUSES.

Laughter has come suddenly into music and painting, but by two different entrances. Solemn critiques have been written recently on jazz and on the Spring exhibitions of innovating and venturesome artists. At the first hooting and chuckling of jazz, Music, the heavenly maid, was outraged. Yet the ribald trombone, the beat of the kettle-drum, even the murmur of the saxophone were all essentially mirthful. At first jazz was diverting, amusing, one of the adjuncts of a gay time. Since those careless days it has been taken up by some of our serious musicians. They still find it funny when a modernist composer scores his symphony for electric bells, steel bars, automobile horns and coal chutes; but, in general, the very tones of jazz have softened, and its days of hilarity are behind it.

Modernist artists, on the other hand, are beginning to develop a sense of humor. Cubism for those who could not understand it was always laughable when it was not irritating, but for its perpetrators it was a heavy responsibility. But now the cubists are returning to reality; their ranks are not being filled up by newcomers. There are still hosts of young artists not satisfied with the traditional, but they are tackling their problem with light hearts. In the recent exhibitions of independent artists and the showing of tri-national art in New York there was a brave display of humor. Many subjects had been chosen for their gayety and liveliness of scene, and the tendency to caricature with emphasis on human absurdity was strong.

Reports of the Paris exhibits of the Independants indicate a similar trend. In sculpture there as well as here the growth of fun-making was noted. Here we had a slender sloping shaft of marble called "The Bird." Paris saw a large marble egg mounted on a pillar and titled, "Sculpture for the Blind." Of course, in an exhibition where nothing that the artist wants to show is rejected there is bound to be a great amount of worthless painting, but even among the mediocre the signs point to the deliberate choice of an amusing subject and to an intention to make fun either of it or of the spectator. When the artists begin to find themselves funny we may look for a new phase in art.

A WELL-ADVERTISED OPENING.

According to the official schedule, the season of professional baseball opens today. But that is only technical. The season has in reality been under way for weeks past. Preliminary training of the teams in the South has now become so established a feature, and is so fully reported in the newspapers, that baseball enthusiasts begin to rub up their acquaintance with every club, and almost with every player, from February on. This is the explanation of the fact that so many of the expert critics of the game feel in duty bound at the opening of the season to pass all the contestants in review and to predict which ones will be at the top when the season ends. It is almost true to say that the baseball season in the United States never begins and never ends.

This is only another way of saying that baseball is eminently our national game. It is so in the depth and constancy of the interest it provokes; in the vast amount of money invested in professional baseball, with the consequent facilities for players and spectators becoming more ample and costly each year; in the space given to the sport in the news and the time devoted to it in conversation; and also in the place which successful managers and outstanding performers have come to hold in the popular imagination. Despite all that has gone before to prepare the public for today's opening, the edge will not have been taken off the thrill of knowing that the playing season has at last begun. To hundreds of thousands of Americans it will be one of the great events of the year, only to be outstripped in excitement by the fight for the world's championship after the two big leagues have awarded their separate pennants.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Too Eager to Be a Scientist.

There is some difficulty in estimating the value of LUTHER BURBANK's achievements, or even the number of them. He never saw the importance of keeping such records as would show exactly how he reached his results—the exact lineage of his hybrids.

The chief difference between Mr. BURBANK and other growers of trees and flowers was that he had a wonderful ability to judge from very young seedlings whether they were worth keeping. He would select one young tree from several thousand, let it live and destroy all the others. Those he thus chose so often demonstrated at maturity the possession of just the qualities he was seeking that his method justified itself in practice.

Several times men of scientific attainments attempted to supplement Mr. BURBANK's work by keeping careful account of his proceedings. The eminent Dutch biologist, DE VRIES, spent some weeks or months with the Californian in an effort to do for him what he would not do for himself, but the experiment proved a failure. BURBANK did not have the patience to give his visitor the data he needed.

Many of BURBANK's triumphs are not credited to him in the imperfect annals of his work. They were bought outright by other nurserymen, renamed and their origin concealed. A few more, after getting a lot of advertising, did not finally prove their superiority, and now are forgotten. The remainder were great and lasting contributions to the world.

If Only That Were Our Only Fault!

One would like to think that JOHN GALSWORTHY, feeling in duty bound to balance his praise of us with adverse criticism, at last in desperation lighted on the habit of certain hotel-keepers in the West of keeping in captivity a few wild animals to interest or amuse their patrons. That was all of which he complained on the eve of his departure, and he added a disquisition on the cruelty of making prisoners of creatures of which he thought as loving the widest liberty and pining miserably when deprived of it.

That shows a kindly heart, and it cannot be denied that the animals or birds in most or all of the small menageries by which hotels strive to get "local color" are apt to be sorry spectacles. But that the creatures suffer as much as Mr. GALSWORTHY imagines is more than doubtful. Their lives in the wilds are always a more or less desperate struggle with their enemies, and of deadly competition for food with their own kind, and in captivity there is, all the time, an absence of danger and anxiety. That perhaps is enjoyable. It is perilous to ascribe to animals the feelings and emotions which human beings would have in the same conditions.

Mr. GALSWORTHY took pains not to condemn zoological gardens, though evidently he does not care much for them. That showed the true Briton's moderation, that he is not, like some of our own avowed friends of animals, the victim of what Dr. KEEN once called the "zoophile psychosis," which at least sometimes is a mere veil for a morbid interest in cruelty and a passion for talking about it.

Accidents and Rates of Insurance.

It must be a little discouraging for the engineers and others who for some years have been conducting a campaign to decrease the perils of industrial life to note that the insurance companies paying special attention to compensation for accidents so incurred have found it judicious to raise their rates an average of 10 per cent. for the whole country. This, however, does not prove that all the preaching of "safety first" and all the devices invented and used for protecting machinists, miners and others engaged in the more strenuous occupations have produced no results.

The rise in rates may be due to any one or all of several causes besides that of increased carelessness or increased risks. This sort of insurance is comparatively new and its actuarial basis may have been unsound. Then the "overhead" of the companies doubtless has grown with that of everybody else in recent years, and that would explain why the old rates will no longer do. It has come to be recognized, too, that a single rate for the whole country is wrong—that the country must be divided into zones or groups of regions, each with different rates.

Under this plan Greater New York and Missouri are brought together in the bad eminence of having their workers exposed to the greatest risks and therefore they are obliged to pay the highest rates for protection. In neither case is it obvious why the accidents and fatalities of workers should be so much above the average that in this group the advance must be 34 per cent. above the old rates, while in the group containing Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Massachusetts and the two Carolinas the increase has been only 2 per cent.

Does Beauty Go With Dumbness?

Miss PATTY HORN, who though only 19 years old is a college graduate and preaches in an Iowa church, resents the expression, "beautiful, but dumb," which some people are so fond of using. She is quoted as saying that beauty is as much a matter of mind and soul as of body, and that if a woman is "dumb," she "cannot be truly beautiful."

Miss HORN is right, at least to the extent that real stupidity cannot be accompanied by beauty in any other sense than the one in which a painted china doll can be beautiful. She does, however, a good deal of qualifying when she limits her statement to "real" beauty, for that brings in the possibility of wide differences of opinion of what is and is not beauty.

But it is safe enough to agree with her. For the notion that feminine beauty and dumbness go together there is next to no foundation. Dumbness goes with lack of beauty at least as often as with its possession. And how about men? So few of them are beautiful that perhaps inquiries along that line are useless, but judging from their portraits most of the world's really eminent men have been—well, not what anybody would call ugly.

Chamorro and Nicaragua.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In the last Sunday edition, you published a letter from William Godfrey criticising the stand taken by the State Department in reference to the de facto Government of Nicaragua—headed by General Emiliano Chamorro—to which recognition has been denied, in accord with the Central American Conventions, and to which, in addition to the United States, the other four republics of Central America are also parties.

Vice President Dr. Sacasa, a graduate of Columbia University—at present residing in Washington—has declared that the Nicaraguan people have been restrained from recourse to a civil war for the sustenance of the Constitutional Government only by the hope that the moral influence of the United States and the other four republics of Central America in withholding recognition of General Chamorro will be sufficient to oblige this man to undo his coup d'état.

General Chamorro has been busy giving to American citizens all kinds of concessions for the exploitation of the Nicaraguan forests, mines and oil lands, and is negotiating for a loan, in the hope that these concession hunters will exercise great influence in changing the criterion of the State Department. Already there is a strong lobby in Washington working for him.

The Nicaraguan people, and all Latin America, are watching with keen interest the struggle that is going on in Washington between these selfish interests and the high moral standing of Mr. Kellogg. Time will tell.

H. GUILLEN IRIAS

Henry Miller's Success.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Henry Miller's example is not one that has been widely followed in the theatre recently. It did not bring the only kind of success for which most producers are striving. But that example is one we shall do well not to forget, and that kind of success has a reward seldom more manifest than today. There are not half a dozen people in our profession whose passing could have inspired so nearly universal regret.

I doubt that Henry Miller ever produced a play for any reason other than that he believed it to be a fine play. No conviction that this was what the public wanted ever persuaded him to the cheap, the vulgar and the meretricious. The same high standards and ideals governed his business relations. Henry Miller was the first manager to sign the new contract of the American Dramatists; not because he felt any compulsion, but because he believed the contract to be just.

In Henry Miller the theatre has lost almost the last of its great gentlemen; and, whatever the nature of his success, "the house of earth shall be more sweet for the perfume of his life."

CHANNING POLLOCK.

THE WINDS.

The North Wind sang of the mountains,
The West Wind sang of the grass,
The South Wind, bringing the lilacs,
Sang of a sweet fair lass;
I hearkened their songs of rapture
And magical mystery,
Then the East Wind stole through the garden
Singing a song of the sea.

The North Wind sang of the mountains,
Heaped high with the drifting snow;
The West Wind sang of the prairies,
Where the great wide rivers flow;
The South Wind sang of the twilight,
Of laughter and warm red lips;
But the East Wind sang of my dreamings—
The East Wind sang of the ships.

The North Wind sang of the cedars,
The West Wind sang of the wheat,
The South Wind sang of a cottage
And the stumbling of baby feet,
But the East Wind sang of the waters,
The ships and the white gull's scream—
When the East Wind stole from my garden,
I followed—to find my dream!

EDGAR DANIEL KRAMER.

TENNESSEE'S LAST LAUGH.

Outcome of the Scopes Case Highly Satisfactory to the State.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Last Summer the papers were full of accounts of the Scopes trial at Dayton, Tenn., and of the backward and uncivilized condition both of the general manner of living and the average intelligence and the general state of education of the citizens of Tennessee. More than 75 per cent. of the space in the papers was devoted to reports of interviews of eminent counsel, those stalwart protagonists of constitutional rights and justice according to law, who took upon themselves the sacred duty of enlightening the Tennessee Legislature and rebuking them for daring to think that they could govern their own State.

At the trial proceedings were indulged in at the request of these self-appointed advocates of the rights of the people of the State of Tennessee which, to say the least, were unusual and strange in a trial under the Anglo-Saxon system of jurisprudence where the issues were so simple. The trial had progressed but a very short way before it was perfectly plain that the real purpose of the affair was not the determination of the constitutionality of the statute in question. Unquestionably there was displayed a great quantity of wit and sarcasm and other similar branches of "legal learning," but since the presiding judge was just a mild, simple-mannered gentleman who respected the alleged learning of the defendant's counsel, this required no great ability. However, even at that, one of the counsel was so enthusiastic in his conduct of the case as to necessitate his being cited for contempt of court.

As a former resident and practicing attorney in the State of Tennessee and as a believer in justice, it seems only fair that the general public should be informed of the fact that out of the long array of eminent counsel so earnestly attacking the constitutionality of an act of the Tennessee Legislature there was not one who was careful enough in the trial of the case and the preparation of the appeal to the Supreme Court to properly prepare and file the bill of exceptions, which would have removed the case to the Supreme Court. This is a matter which even the rural lawyers of the small Tennessee towns could have properly done. The rules of practice as to the method of appealing the case were plain and easily followed. It is hard to believe that all these antagonists of the rights of the Legislature of Tennessee to regulate the public schools of the State of Tennessee believed that the trial court would hold the act unconstitutional and thus absolve them from the necessity of an appeal, yet none of them saw to it that the matter was properly presented to the Supreme Court, where the real merits of the case would have been properly argued.

The Supreme Court of Tennessee has refused to review the case, and the case now stands with the conviction of Scopes sustained and the real merits of the case no further advanced than they were before his trial began. I am not upholding the wisdom of the Legislature in passing the law, but the "holier-than-thou" attitude of the counsel for the defendant before, during and after the trial was decidedly unfair to the people of the State of Tennessee, and this is simply an effort to show who had the last laugh.

Special Legislation for Women.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The statements and letters appearing in the newspapers from day to day, either for or against a forty-eight-hour week law for women—not applying to men—show that the issue of special restrictive legislation for women has become a major issue among women.

It may be of interest to your readers to know that the United States Secretary of Labor in his 1925 report admitted that the whole theory of special legislation for women has been challenged, and urged the undertaking without delay of an inclusive and progressive compilation of facts, in order to furnish comprehensive, unbiased material as a basis for careful analysis of this question. The Women's Bureau of the United States Department of Labor is at present engaged in making an investigation of all the special laws regulating the employment of women in industry to determine their effects.

Moreover, at a recent meeting of the annual council of the National Union of Societies for Equal Citizenship of Great Britain—the largest, oldest and most conservative of British feminist groups—a resolution was passed reaffirming its conviction "that legislation for the protection of the workers should be based not upon sex but upon the nature of the occupation."

In view of the national investigation now pending, and the position of the leading feminist organizations in Great Britain, Scandinavia, Holland and other countries against special restrictive labor laws for women, as well as the recognition by large numbers of wage-earning women in all countries of the danger that so-called "protective" laws for women workers may arbitrarily restrict their wage-earning opportunities, it would seem that the New York Legislature has shown wisdom in deciding to investigate labor conditions before passing the Mastick-Shonk forty-eight-hour bill for women.

Adding Value to Newspapers.

From The Advertisers' Weekly.

There is real value in THE NEW YORK TIMES plan for testing the knowledge of current events among college students. The prizes offered confer honor and substantial emolument.

This is a use of competitions which is of advantage to the whole body politic and social as well as to American journalism at large. It gives practical effect to the vision of Mr. Strong, publisher of The Chicago Daily News, described in his talk to Chicago University students—the vision of newspapers going forward from a period of great commercial success to a period of greater service as ministers to general intelligence.

The country needs enlargement of interest in public affairs, and journalism will gain in dignity and importance as the news of consequence, with which it deals, enters into the lives of the people.

The problem of newspapers today is less to increase the number of their readers than to increase the seriousness of the attention bestowed upon them. They have proved their ability to spread themselves everywhere among every one. Their supreme task is to add to the substance of the service they render. They have caught the eye of the people. Anything that strengthens their appeal to the minds of the people carries them still farther onward.

DECIDES ENRIGHT CAN'T GET PENSION

Justice Proskauer Holds State Act, Giving Him $5,000 a Year, Is Void.

INELIGIBLE UNDER CHARTER

Former Commissioner Is to Appeal at Once — Decision on Hylan Pension Is Pending.

Former Police Commissioner Richard E. Enright is entitled to no city pension, according to a ruling yesterday by Supreme Court Justice Proskauer in the injunction suit instituted by William J. Schieffelin in behalf of the Citizens Union. The Court not only decided that the legislative enactment giving Mr. Enright $5,000 a year was special legislation and therefore void, but held that the section of the city charter, under which counsel for the former commissioner asserted he should have at least $3,750 a year as half the salary of Chief Inspector, did not apply to him.

When the Enright case was argued before Justice Proskauer several months ago the court also heard a similar action by Mr. Schieffelin to prevent the payment of former Mayor Hylan's pension. The ruling in the Hylan case has not yet been made, but it was conceded in the argument that the cases were entirely dissimilar, since the injunction against the former Mayor's pension is based on the alleged illegality of acts by the Municipal Assembly rather than by the State Legislature.

Mr. Schieffelin sued as a taxpayer, alleging that, since the law under which Police Commissioner McLaughlin, as custodian of the Police Pension Fund, was about to make the payments, was void, it would constitute a waste of public funds. The payment of $5,000 a year to Mr. Enright purported to be granted by Chapter 509 of the Laws of 1924.

Basis of Attack on Statute.

The opinion says that that statute is attacked on the ground that it is repugnant to the Home Rule Amendment which prohibits the State Legislature from enacting legislation "relating to the property, affairs or government of cities, which shall be special or local either in its terms or in its effects," without an emergency message of the Governor and a concurring vote of the Legislature. It was conceded that there was no emergency message, and accordingly the "crucial question" is whether the statute is "special or local either in its terms or its effect."

The Justice in his opinion says that "in the Home Rule Amendment there was inserted the simple, clear, and unmistakable limitation in the Legislature that a statute could be special or local neither in its terms nor in effect.' Whether the Legislature has exceeded the bounds thus set in its authority is for judicial, not legislative, determination.

Justice Proskauer points out that the beneficiaries of this section of the General City Law are required to be persons who have (1) performed duty on the uniformed police force of a city for twenty years or more, (2) who have served as Police Commissioner or as Deputy Police Commissioner for three years, and (3) who are now serving as Police Commissioners. Taking up the law again, the Court went on:

"Its very terms proclaim it special and local. But the additional duty is imposed on the Court by the Home Rule Amendment to judge the statute by its effect as well as by its terms. The plaintiff's affidavits show that there was in the State of New York at the time the statute was passed no discoverable Police Commissioner who fulfilled all three requirements other than the defendant Enright."

The Court holds further that in Enright's affidavit "the inference is irresistible that the act applies to but one man in one city."

Takes Up City Charter.

The court adds that "the defendant's ask, however, that the court at least allow a pension under Section 355A of the Greater New York Charter providing 'service as Police Commissioner * * * by a member of the uniformed force shall be deemed performance of duty on such f..ce,' and that 'any member of the police force for a period of twenty years and for at least six months a Police Commissioner may be * * * placed upon the pension roll of the department, with the pension of a Chief Inspector.

"In Schieffelin against Enright (208 Appellate Division 312) it was held that Commissioner Enright was not entitled to a pension under this section. It was there laid down that the section operated only in futuro upon a person who was a member of the uniformed police force subsequent to its passage, and that Commissioner Enright had before the passage of the act automatically ceased to be a member of the uniformed police force when he accepted appointment as Police Commissioner; that the statute gives no pension to a Police Commissioner as such, and that it could apply for the benefit only of a member of the uniformed force who after its passage became Police Commissioner.

"After this decision Commissioner Enright resigned as Police Commissioner and after one day was reappointed. It is claimed in his behalf that thereby some transformation of the situation had worked which entitles him now to a pension. But resignation as Police Commissioner did not restore him to membership in the police force. By his resignation and reappointment he became a Police Commissioner subsequent to the passage of Section 355, but he was clearly not a member of the police force at the time of such reappointment. There is thus no new circumstance to differentiate the claim here presented from that which was disallowed in the previous litigation."

It was said yesterday that an immediate appeal would be taken in order that a ruling may be had from the Appellate Division promptly.

NEW YORK WINS LAKE CASE

WASHINGTON, April 12 (AP).—Massachusetts lost in the Supreme Court today in its claim to ownership of lands on Lake Ontario at Rochester, wanted by that city for municipal purposes.

Massachusetts contended that under original grants from the British Crown it owned land to the west of its present boundary and that in the Hartford Convention of 1786 it retained riparian rights.

The master appointed by the Supreme Court to take evidence found that Massachusetts, under its grant, did not retain sovereignty over any part of the bed of Lake Ontario.

Justice Stone in delivering the opinion stated that Massachusetts had not acquired title to the bed of the lake and had not retained sovereignty over lands transferred to New York.

BURBANK WILL REST UNDER AN OLD CEDAR

Burial Will Be in His Garden Where a Mausoleum Will Be Built.

HIS WORK TO BE CARRIED ON

Experimental Farm Will Go to Stanford University and Experts Will Maintain Gardens.

SANTA ROSA, Cal., April 12 (AP).—Luther Burbank will be buried under the old Lebanon cedar tree that stands in a corner of the old Burbank garden, across the highway from his home. Arrangements completed late today were in accordance with the wishes of the noted horticulturist.

The tree marked a favorite resting place and it will be a shrine. In accordance with the desires expressed by Mr. Burbank, a semi-public mausoleum will be reared, and there he will rest while his work goes on about him. The tree for many years sheltered Mr. Burbank with its cool, deep shade.

Flags were at half staff today in Santa Rosa and surrounding towns in honor of the man who during his lifetime here contributed so much to the world. Many telegrams were received by Mrs. Burbank, the widow, from prominent men of the country. They all expressed regret in the passing of Mr. Burbank.

The death of the great horticulturist appears to have released a wealth of what might be termed Burbank legend. He did not want to be called a "wizard." He begged a newspaper man not long ago to send the word that he was not a wizard nor a miracle worker. It was robbing nature of her cunning to call him that, he said. He was merely aiding in the transformation of the seed and the pollen, but nature was actually bringing those transformations about.

An old resident remarked that his mother, who sleeps in the tiny cemetery overlooking the Burbank Experimental Fruit Garden at Sebastopol, north and west of here, used to say how Luther could be made to smile in the midst of some youthful sorrow by the mere placing of a flower in his hand.

"Nothing else could quiet him," this old resident said Mr. Burbank's mother told him.

The continuation of Mr. Burbank's work is to some extent in the hands of fate. The experimental farm at Sebastopol near here will be taken in charge by Stanford University, while Mr. Burbank's own trained experts will contiue the work in his other gardens for the time being. There is some discussion as to the advisability of a national endowment to take the whole scheme over and to train, if possible, other Burbanks. But this plan has not developed beyond the discusion stage. Mrs. Burbank will have the directing hand there, and she has not yet spoken.

WASHINGTON, April 12 (AP).—Luther Burbank was lauded today in the House as "the greatest Californian of the age" by Representative Lea, Democrat, of Santa Rosa, the home town of the naturalist.

His work resulted in greater achievements for the garden, field and orchard then realized by an other man, Mr. Lea said.

FREETHINKERS SEND MESSAGE

The Freethinkers' Society of New York, of which Luther Burbank was a member and Honorary First Vice President, sent a telegram of condolence yesterday to Mrs. Burbank. The telegram read:

"The Freethinkers of America offer you their heartfelt sympathy on the loss of your illustrious husband, one of the noblest and grandest sons of the earth. A genius among men, his loss is irreparable to mankind."

Joseph Lewis, President of the society, said Mr. Burbank joined the society the latter part of last year, and one of the cherished possessions of the society is a photograph of Mr. Burbank and his autograph on a membership card.

"It is with the deepest regret that the Freethinkers learn of the death of Mr. Burbank, who was a regular member and liberal contributor to this organization," said Mr. Lewis. "Mr. Burbank's death removes from the earth a genius among men. He was one of the world's greatest benefactors, and the fruits of his achievements will be enjoyed as long as man lives upon the earth."

A memorial meeting will be held at the lecture hall of the society, 226 West Fifty-eighth Street, next Sunday, when prominent men and women will address the gathering.

PRINCETON HEARS DR. SEYA.

Latvian Minister Defends Principle of National Self-Determination.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., April 12.—Charles L. Seya, Latvian Minister to the United States, defended the principle of self-determination of nationalities in an address before the Princeton Polity Club today.

"Self-determination is the natural corollary of universal suffrage," he said, "and it is my belief that unless something very unforeseen in the natural course of history occurs within the next decade, there will be no oppressed peoples left within comparatively few years."

Dr. Seya expressed himself as highly optimistic regarding the republics set up as a result of the disorganization of Russia and Austria Hungary during the war. "Although the economic prosperity in the new republics is in no way com arable to that enjoyed in America, great strides have been taken since 1919," he said, "and there is every indication that they will be successful in their efforts at self-government."

ADMIRAL MERTEN OF GERMANY DEAD

WAR ENDED RETIREMENT

BERLIN, April 12 (AP).—Rear Admiral Merten Pasha, who directed the artillery operations for the Turks during the Dardanelles campaign in the World War, is dead. He entered the Germany navy in 1875.

Although officially he was "naval adviser" to the Sultan during the allied attack on the Dardanelles, Admiral Merten was the real commanding officer of the defenders. Like Hindenburg, he was a retired officer at the outbreak of the World War, living quietly with his wife in Berlin. Within a few days he was on his way to Constantinople and his wife had become a Red Cross nurse in Berlin.

Admiral Merten was a West Prussian, 69 years old. He entered the navy at 18 after a rigorous schooling at the gymnasium of Koenigsberg. Although lacking court influence, being of the middle class, he advanced rapidly and early received his own ship, the Albatross, used for naval engineering in the North Sea.

In his thirty-seven years of service before his first retirement he had spent three years in Chinese waters and in German New Guinea as commander of the Moewe, which afterwards became famous as a World War raider. He later advanced to the post of resident commander of Cuxhaven, at Heligoland, and at Bremerhaven. In 1904, while on the Prince Frederich Karl, he escorted the imperial yacht, Hohenzollern, when it carried the Emperor on a visit to the King and Queen of Italy. Before the close of this earlier period of his career he was commander of the Navy Yard at Kiel and inspector general at Wilhelmshaven.

SERGE—On Sunday, April 11, Augusta, wife of the late Leopold and beloved mother of Mrs. Anna Koran, Theresa,

IN opening the new home of its Fifth Avenue Office in May, The Farmers' Loan and Trust Company feels gratified that it can now offer to its present and future patrons commodious facilities for their ever-growing calls upon its services.

This Company early foresaw the need of Mid-Town New York for convenient headquarters in Trust, Custodian and Safe Deposit matters, Commercial and Personal Banking.

Accordingly, in 1906, it established its Fifth Avenue Office, at Forty-first Street And this was the first up-town office of a downtown Trust Company.

In the light of twenty years' development which has transformed Fifth Avenue, Madison Avenue, Park Avenue and the streets crossing these great thoroughfares, the sure vision which located the Fifth Avenue Office at Forty-first Street seems almost prophetic.

The completion of this new building, and the opening of the doors of this new Fifth Avenue Office, will mark a new era of enlarged usefulness by The Farmers' Loan and Trust Company.

Chartered in 1822
"For the Purpose of Accommodating the Citizens of the State"

IN THIS NEW FIFTH AVENUE OFFICE AT 41st STREET THE FARMERS' LOAN AND TRUST COMPANY WILL BE AT YOUR SERVICE EARLY IN MAY

THE NEW BUILDING

A MASSIVE structure of stone and brick, towering 23 stories, from Avenue to tower cornice. And below the street level are two stories more, for the Safe Deposit Department, and for the Company's vaults.

The ground plan of the building measures 105 feet on Fifth Avenue, and 140 feet on Forty-first Street—taking in not only the original site of the Fifth Avenue Office of this Company, but also adjoining sites on both streets.

THE FARMERS' LOAN AND TRUST COMPANY OFFICES

THE offices of the Company occupy the northern half of the ground and first floors of the building, with vaults on the two floors below the street level.

One enters either through the Main Corridor Entrance from Fifth Avenue, or through the Private Entrance on Forty-first Street.

The Main Banking Room has a distinguished and comfortable atmosphere. It is paneled in warm grey-tinted oak, with rich wrought iron grille work, and is furnished in walnut of 18th Century influence.

In every part it is designed to make the transaction of business pleasant and efficient.

THE OFFICERS IN CHARGE

IN the main Banking Room, separated from the Banking Floor by only a low railing, the officers have their desks, readily accessible to all who wish to consult them.

In its staff of 100 the Fifth Avenue Office has a personnel equipped by training and experience to render every sort of financial and fiduciary service.

It is, in effect, a thoroughly rounded out Banking and Trust organization, located in Mid-Town New York. Behind it, ready for its customers' needs, stands all the experience and resource of the entire Company.

THE TRUST DEPARTMENT

IN physical equipment, the Trust Department of the Fifth Avenue Office is new. In outlook, in initiative and vigor, it is as modern as the new building itself. In experience, ideals and standards, it is the most mature in the United States, probably in the world.

It goes back, not simply to the day twenty years ago when the office was first opened on Fifth Avenue, but to the time when this Company was chartered over a century ago.

THE SAFE DEPOSIT VAULT

ONE floor below the street level, is a Safe Deposit Vault, in which every appurtenance for comfort and convenience has been provided.

The vault itself embodies every modern feature of safety.

There is plenty of air—fresh and clean. The ventilation system changes the air completely every few minutes.

There are, besides the Coupon Booths, three large conference rooms accommodating from six to twelve persons.

In the vaults are boxes suitable in size for every customer, from the large safes at $500 a year down to the small boxes costing as little as $5.

THE BANKING DEPARTMENT

THE BANKING DEPARTMENT of the new Fifth Avenue Office is a complete bank, equipped for every banking function.

Alike in your Personal Checking Accounts and in the complexities of large-scale modern Commercial Banking—including the arrangement of Credit Accommodation—the men and the facilities are here for your service.

THE SPECIAL FACILITIES FOR LADIES

The Farmers' Loan and Trust Company enjoys the advice and cooperation of a Ladies' Advisory Committee. To their assistance, in no small measure, is due that consideration of the needs and desires of our Women Customers which characterizes the Fifth Avenue Office.

Here is an entire Department for Ladies alone. Officers and Tellers for them especially. A Writing Room, which for quiet elegance and completeness of appointments, is, we believe, unsurpassed.

* * *

And now—to all who have helped us make these new Fifth Avenue Offices what they are, our deep appreciation.

TELLS PART IN SALE OF GARY TO ST. PAUL

SAYS IT WAS HIS OWN IDEA

Denies Rockefeller Aided in the Transaction or Knew He Was to Get Bonus.

CALLED ACTION 'ALTRUISTIC'

John D. Ryan, a Director, Says Road Bought $5,500,000 of Copper From Company He Headed.

Samuel F. Pryor, partner of Percy A. Rockefeller in the Owenoke Corporation, testified yesterday at the Interstate Commerce Commission's investigation of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company's receivership that, "looking back" on his gift to the Owenoke Corporation of the $150,000 commission he received for selling the Gary line to the St. Paul, it seemed "queer." He insisted, however, that Mr. Rockefeller had played no part in the negotiations for the Gary and had known nothing of his intention to transfer his commission to the corporation's treasury as assets, one-third of which belong to Mr. Rockefeller.

The hearing, conducted before Commissioner Frederick I. Cox in the offices of the Port Authority, at 11 Broadway, brought out some of the most interesting testimony of the investigation, which has been under way in New York, St. Louis, Washington and Chicago since last November. In addition to Mr. Pryor, John D. Ryan, known as the "Copper King," and formerly a director of the St. Paul, was a witness and told about deals between power companies in which he was interested and the St. Paul.

Had Statement Approved.

As soon as he had been sworn Mr. Pryor asked permission to read a statement, after which he said he would willingly answer all questions. Walter L. Fisher, special counsel for the commission, obtained from the witness an admission that the statement had been approved "with just a few changes" by Mr. Rockefeller, Benjamin L. Winchell, who aided in the sale of the Gary and also received $150,000 commission; Frederick B. Adams, the third partner in the Owenoke Corporation, and a lawyer.

In the statement submitted for the records by Mr. Pryor, who is also Chairman of the Finance Committee of the Remington Arms Company, he said:

"Some time in June, 1920, when I was visiting my old home in St. Louis, Mr. McMillan, who was Chairman of the St. Louis Union Trust Company, told me of their interest in the Chicago, Milwaukee & Gary Railway and the desirability of closing their syndicate by the sale of the securities of the railroad. He asked me to undertake the sale and suggested that he pay me a commission if I succeeded. I told him I would be glad to do what I could without any thought of a commission.

"I had the desire to help my former business associates, and my experience of seventeen years in railroad work, which had given me a very extensive acquaintance among railroad men, qualified me to handle the negotiation and made me feel hopeful of success.

Asked Rockefeller About Deal.

"On my return to New York from St. Louis I asked Mr. Rockefeller if the acquisition of the Gary Railroad had ever been considered by the St. Paul and whether he thought the St. Paul would be interested in buying the property at that time. He said he had understood the Gary road had been for sale for a number of years, and he doubted whether the St. Paul would want to buy it.

"I told Mr. Rockefeller that I intended to take the matter up with H. E. Byram, President of the St. Paul. I said nothing to him at that time or afterward about the possibility of a commission being paid to me in connection with the transaction.

"My first step was to call on Mr. Smith, who was President of the New York Central Railroad. I asked him if the Gary was of any interest to his line. He said the matter had been given and was still under consideration, and that it had been brought to his attention by Mr. Winchell, who was then Vice President of the Pierce Oil Corporation. This was a surprise to me, as I had not been told that any one else was endeavoring to negotiate a sale of the Gary.

Agreed to Split Commission.

"Upon consultation with Mr. Winchell, who was a lifelong friend of mine, I learned that he had been working on the matter for several years. We discussed the whole thing and finally decided that we would work jointly on it. Mr. Winchell informed me that he had an arrangement with Mr. McMillan for a commission of 10 per cent. on the sale price, and we agreed that if there was any commission it would be split between us equally.

"On Oct. 31, 1921, I was suddenly called to St. Louis by the serious illness of my brother. My recollection is that just before leaving I hurriedly directed my office to forward to Mr. Byram a letter or a telegram, I do not now remember which, I had received either from Mr. McMillan or Mr. Winchell, and told Mr. Rockefeller that my office would hand him a letter addressed to Mr. Byram, as I had heard that Mr. Byram was expected in New York the next day, but that if this was not a fact to please forward the letter to Chicago.

"The sale of the Gary to the St. Paul was not concluded and did not become effective until January, 1922.

"I was President of the Owenoke Corporation, a small investment company in which Mr. Rockefeller, Mr. Adams and myself held equal amounts of the common stock. Mr. Rockefeller having supplied the larger portion of the capital in the form of preferred stock and notes. Mr. Adams had been devoting practically all his time to the affairs of the corporation. Mr. Rockefeller, besides furnishing most of the capital, had helped it in other ways.

Gave Bonds to Owenoke.

"Owing to the heavy work required of me in connection with the Remington Arms Company, I had been able to do little or nothing toward holding up my end for upward of a year and a half. I therefore concluded, as my own personal decision and without consultation with either Mr. Rockefeller or Mr. Adams, to turn in to the corporation any profits which might grow out of my efforts to sell the Gary.

"In accordance with my decision I delivered to the corporation the $150,000 of Gary bonds when they were received by me in April, 1922. I did not inform Mr. Adams of my intention to do this until some date which I cannot now definitely fix, but which was between Jan. 1, 1922,

"Isn't it a fact," asked Mr. Fisher, "that you turned these bonds over to the Owenoke Corporation because Mr. Rockefeller helped you to put through the sale of the Gary line to the St. Paul?"

"No, it is not," replied the witness.

Called It "Altruistic."

In admitting that it now seemed to him a "queer" thing to have done, Mr. Pryor brought out also that Mr. Rockefeller had not raised a question relative to the possible "inexpediency" of turning the bonds of the Gary over to the Owenoke. He said he saw now that it was a mistake. In answer to a question about what Mr. Rockefeller had said when he turned in the bonds Mr. Pryor replied:

"He said he thought it was rather altruistic on my part."

He admitted that at no time during his efforts to dispose of the Gary had any railroad company other than the St. Paul offered him a dollar for it. He explained that he had first offered it to Mr. Byram at $5,700,000 and that Mr. Byram had said he would not consider it at any price until the gap in the Gary had been built up so that it could be used by the St. Paul as a belt line. Mr. Byram figured it would cost $2,700,000 to bridge and track this gap, and had finally consented to pay $3,000,000 for the railroad, or $2,700,000 less than the asking price.

Mr. Pryor was on the stand when the hearing was adjourned until this morning and will be the first witness today.

Mr. Ryan testified that while he was a director of the St. Paul, and at the same time Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Anaconda Copper Company, the St. Paul had purchased from the Anaconda $5,500,000 worth of copper. The metal was bought through the United Metals Company, selling agency for the Anaconda. Mr. Rockefeller, a director of United Metals, testified last week that the St. Paul's purchases from the Anaconda had been comparatively small.

Favored St. Paul Electrification.

Mr. Ryan, a director of the Montana Power Company and the Great Falls Power Company, said he had favored electrification of the St. Paul's Puget Sound extension, which is said to have cost around $200,000,000, but added that, while he admittedly favored it as good business for his power interests, he considered it a splendid thing for the development of the St. Paul. Some security holders have charged that this electrification was one of the chief causes of the road's financial collapse.

Explaining that the St. Paul pays for about 20 per cent. more power than its maximum requirement, he said that the arrangement was really good for the railroad because it saved through the operation of longer trains and heavier loads. He declared the St. Paul was getting the lowest price in power ever procured by an individual or organization.

Mr. Ryan, in answer to a question by Mr. Fisher, pointed out that, as President of the Montana Power Company and a director of the Anaconda Copper Company, the Brooklyn Edison Company and the Consolidated Gas Company, which owns the New York Edison Company, he was responsible for the expenditure of more money for producing electrical power than any other man on earth, with the possible exception of Samuel Insull, head of the Commonwealth Edison Company of Chicago.

Chairman Cox announced that the hearings would end at 1 P. M. Wednesday for one week, during which Mr. Fisher will be in Springfield, Ill.

CHICAGO, April 12 (AP).—Receivers for the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad neared completion today, of their effort to prove in Federal Court that the road's officers acted wisely in the purchase of the Chicago, Terre Haute & South Eastern and the Chicago, Milwaukee & Gary railways.

Three witnesses were on the stand, and all testified that the purchase of the two subsidiaries was a profitable investment. The receivers aim to establish the wisdom of the purchase in order to gain the Court's permission for payment of $400,000 in interest on bonds of the subsidiaries. Junior bondholders of the St. Paul system oppose the payment of interest on the bonds and contend that purchase of the minor lines was unwise and fraudulent.

SUBWAY TRAINS COLLIDE.

One woman was seriously injured and several other passengers bruised and shaken in a rear-end collision between two Interborough trains near the Bedford Park Boulevard station of the Jerome Avenue Branch of the east side subway. Confusion in signals caused the accident, according to information obtained by District Attorney John E. McGeehan of the Bronx.

The woman hurt was Mrs. Marie Ekert, 56 years old, of 146 West Sixty-eighth Street. She was taken to the Jewish Memorial Hospital, where Dr. Zeidzahler said she was badly bruised and had possibly received internal injuries.

The accident took place just south of the station, on the southbound tracks. The second train, in charge of John Donahue, motorman, had just left the station and was proceeding slowly when it crashed into the rear of a train ahead. Several passengers were thrown from their seats and most of the windows in two cars were broken. Traffic southbound was tied up forty minutes.

Wrecking of Old Astor House Held Up by Ancient Cisterns

The days of old New York when responsibility for the city's water supply rested more on the shoulders of the weather man than on those of the city fathers were recalled yesterday in connection with demolition of the old Astor House at Broadway and Barclay Street.

Workmen taking down the famous old structure came across two cement cisterns of 40,000-gallon capacity each. It was found that they were so placed as to catch and conserve all the rain that fell on the building, in that manner assuring water to guests except in time of drought. Work with steam shovels was held up until the cisterns were cut up with drills.

STEINBERG CLEARED OF PERJURY IN TAX

FINDS RUM PROFIT TAXABLE

Charles J. Steinberg, convicted by a jury before Federal Judge John C. Knox on charges of perjury and making a false income tax return in failing to report $760,635 in profits from bootlegging, was freed yesterday by the action of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals in setting aside the conviction. Steinberg, who was in the drug and chemical business and an alleged bootlegger on a large scale, had been sentenced to serve five years in Atlanta Penitentiary and fined $10,000.

Circuit Court Judges Charles M. Hough, Martin M. Manton and Learned Hand were unanimous in the opinion that the perjury charge could not be sustained because the general Federal perjury law did not apply to fraudulent income tax returns on earnings from illegal activities. On the chief feature, from a prohibition standpoint, Judges Hough and Hand held that bootlegging profits were subject to income tax. Judge Manton disagreed and filed a separate opinion on this count.

In the majority opinion on this point, written by Judge Hough, he says that the definition of intoxicating liquor given by Congress (one-half of 1 per cent.) is an "admitted falsehood." It is brought out in the opinion that a book, purporting to contain a list of Steinberg's patrons, was illegally introduced in evidence because it had been found behind Steinberg's desk and was therefore not connected with evidence against him.

The Court's View.

More than twenty defendants have been convicted in various parts of the country for failure to declare bootleg profits as part of their incomes. "Mannie" Kessler is among these. In the opinion Judge Hough declares:

"That the winnings of a professional gambler, the loot of a burglar, the bribes of a dishonest official, the wages of a prostitute or the profits of any criminal commerce should not be regarded as income, but should for reasons of public policy be regarded as beneath the contempt of the law, is a proposition not without attraction.

"If they constitute income within the meaning of the law it must follow that in the language of Sec. 214 of the act, the 'net' or taxable portion thereof must be reached by deducting 'all the ordinary and necessary expenses paid or incurred during the taxable year in carrying on any trade or business'; wherefore whoever for profit maintains a saloon, brothel or 'fence' would have good right to claim as lawful deductions those bribes for 'protection' which are a notorious part of the profitable exercise of such vocations. The moral degradation arising from endeavor by law to collect a necessarily lawful sum out of occupations by equal necessity unlawful, corrupting and immoral, may well give one pause.

Morals Ruled Out.

"But these considerations of civic morals, however potent they should be in the Legislature or with prosecuting officers who are required to choose and not abuse their weapons against crime, the courts are bound to administer the law as it is found, regardless of considerations of morals, policy or taste suitable for the legislative or executive branches. Our duty and our only power is to ascertain what the Legislature means by what is has said, and then enforce what was said.

"* * * Of the all sufficient instance at present is the phrase 'intoxicating liquors'; * * * If Congress can lawfully make and enforce a definition which is an admitted falsehood, as it now does, it can assuredly extend the meaning of the word 'income' to cover items beyond the definitions of any dictionary.

"On the face of this statute, which in defining 'gross income' extends the phrase to cover 'gains and profits' as contradistinguished from income, we have no doubt that Congress meant to levy a contribution upon every species of gain, no matter how immoral or vicious the method of acquiring the same right be."

In his separate opinion, holding that Congress does not intend to require a bootlegger to pay income tax upon his illicit profits, Judge Manton wrote:

"Criminal practices should always be punished and immunity should not be granted to the criminal in return for the Government obtaining a share of his profits in criminal operations through the medium of income tax payments. If the recipient of this kind of income is obliged to make known its amount and the source, when it is received in sufficient sums to be beyond the exempt minimum, he is compelled to state under oath information that he is not obliged to give if he chooses to exercise his right of protection of the Fifth Amendment."

United States Attorney Emory R. Buckner said the decision had a bearing upon many indictments pending in his office which had no reference to prohibition law violations, and also might affect other defendants who had been convicted and were now serving sentences. He declared the question of an appeal from the decision would have to be decided by the Solicitor General.

Asked if Steinberg would be retried, Mr. Buckner said the case would be studied to see if there were sufficient evidence without the book that figured in the reversal, which, he added, had actually been taken from Steinberg's bookcase, and constituted strong evidence against him.

MAHLSTEDT SUIT TO END.

Separation Agreement Will Be Made Out of Court, Lawyer Says.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y., April 12.—Mrs. Stella Mahlstedt of Mamaroneck has consented to withdraw her separation suit against John F. Mahlstedt, wealthy lumber merchant and official of the Mahlstedt-Steen Securities Corporation, and that the couple will enter into a separation agreement outside of court, it was learned here today.

According to Humphrey J. Lynch, counsel for Mr. Mahlstedt, there will be no financial settlement of any kind on Mrs. Mahlstedt. Supreme Court Justice Arthur S. Tompkins recently refused to grant her temporary alimony, but allowed counsel fees totaling $800.

Mrs. Mahlstedt charged abandonment and cruelty, saying that her husband left her last February and had struck her on three occasions.

Mr. Mahlstedt denied the cruelty charge, but said that he was driven from home by his wife's habitual drunkenness.

Mr. Lynch denied that there was any possibility of a reconciliation.

Two Nations Refuse to Certify the Death Of Man Whose Body Falls Astride Border

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, April 12.—Because Erich Muller of Berlin had the misfortune to drop dead on the German-Czechoslovakia border, with his head in the latter and his feet in the former country, his friends and relatives were unable to carry out his wishes to be cremated until after forty-one days.

Neither country was willing to fill out a death certificate unless it was sure he was dead completely, which they said they were unable to do unless they possessed the entire body.

Death occurred on March 2 of heart disease and Muller was buried on the spot, because officials could find no covering instructions in their manuals. Czech officials said that since Muller was a German citizen and resident, and was found with the greater part of his anatomy on German soil, the German Government must issue the death certificate. Since Muller's head was not in Germany when the man died, German officials declined to issue a certificate. However, since all of Muller's other documents, which every German is required to have, were in order, permission to have the body cremated in Hirschberg was issued.

The entire affair is now being reviewed by the higher authorities, who express doubt as to the logic of this irregular, hasty action.

$89,000,000 IS VOTED FOR NAVAL AVIATION

House Passes Bill for Five-Year Program for Addition of a Thousand Planes.

FAVORS COMMERCIAL BILL

Would Provide Assistant Secretary to Foster and Regulate Air Activities.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—Two bills designed to improve aviation, one of them involving an $89,000,000 program for the navy, the other creating an Assistant Secretary for Air in the Department of Commerce, and empowering that department to regulate commercial aircraft, were adopted by the House today—the naval bill by a vote of 297 to 39, and the commercial aviation measure by a vote of 225 to 80.

The naval bill, which goes to the Senate with the endorsement of the Administration, provides for a five-year building program and the addition of 1,000 airplanes by 1932. It provides for the construction of 235 planes at a cost of $12,285,000 in 1927. It directs that 245 shall be built in 1928, 269 in 1929, 290 in 1930 and 313 in 1931. It also authorizes an appropriation of $8,000,000 for the building of two dirigibles and $300,000 for the construction of an experimental metal-clad dirigible by the Michigan company of which Henry Ford is a stockholder.

According to the committee report accompanying this bill, the navy had on Nov. 1, 1925, 993 planes, of which 408 were serviceable and 398 obsolescent.

The commercial aviation bill, which already has passed the Senate, where it was sponsored by Senator Bingham of Connecticut, does not conflict with the activities of the army and the navy except that these services must conform to traffic rules devised by the Department of Commerce. It provides that commercial aviation shall be supervised by the Commerce Department under an Assistant Secretary. The jurisdiction now exercised by the Postmaster General in aviation would be transferred to the Department of Commerce.

The Secretary of Commerce is given broad powers with regard to registering aircraft, examination of pilots and inspection of equipment and prescribing traffic rules. He is charged with the duty of fostering aviation and gathering all possible data relating to the science. Provision is made for lighting airways and providing adequate traffic signals. There is a prohibition against a grant for exclusiveness of airways. Reasonable fees for inspection are authorized.

Foreign owned aircraft are prohibited from engaging in interstate commerce. Penalties are imposed for violation of any air regulations promulgated by the Secretary of Commerce.

In presenting the bill Representative Parker of New York, Chairman of the Interstate Commerce Committee, predicted that within twenty years aviation would prove to be an important factor in American commerce.

SAYS MAN EVOLVES FASTER THAN WOMAN

Dr. Schultz of Johns Hopkins Says Theory Does Not Imply Any Inferiority.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, April 12.—Man is evolving physically much more rapidly than woman, according to Dr. Adolph H. Schultz, Associate Professor of Anthropology in the Johns Hopkins Medical School.

Dr. Schultz holds exactly the opposite ground from that maintained by the English anthropologist, Karl Pearson, that if there is any difference between the sexes so far as variations go, the advantage lies with the female.

Dr. Schultz declares that his discovery does not imply any inferiority on the part of woman. Just as a conservative party which sticks to the old is quite as important as a progressive party always making experiments, so, he says, the part played by woman in evolution is fully as important as that of man.

Because bodily variations are less frequent among women than men, it does not follow necessarily that mental variations also will be less frequent, though the rule is that they are, he holds. Physiologically, also, the adult woman is just a little less removed from the infant than is the man.

That evolution is still in progress, he says, is evident to any scientist who measures and compares the bodies of men and other animals in sufficient numbers. Changes in the size of the ears, in the teeth, in the number of vertebrae and in other parts of the body all seem to be under way, and the records are said to show clearly in what direction the evolution is pointing.

The theory that civilization has any appreciable effect either in retarding or in speeding up the process of evolution is not borne out by Dr. Schultz's studies. He found that the variations among monkeys in the forests of Central America were about the same as among men in great European cities. Speaking broadly, he said, environment seems to have little effect of any kind on evolution. Nor does evolution seem to be greatly dependent on heredity, else how account for the considerable differences between twins born from the same egg, or for the differences between the two sides of the same human body?

Evolution generally is a function of organic as opposed to inorganic life. Two crystals of the same substance are exactly alike, but no two birds or animals or men ever are alike.

HARRIS CONSIDERS BAN ON LOOSE MILK

City Will Require Bottling if Satisfactory Arrangement on Price Can Be Made.

DEALERS NOW CONFERRING

Health Chief Says Greater Part of Such Supply Has Been Adulterated Till Recently.

New York City may follow the lead of Chicago and Philadelphia and ban the sale of loose milk, which is 55 per cent. of the daily supply. The Health Department, it was announced by Commissioner Louis I. Harris yesterday, will bar all sales from large cans to customers' containers if an understanding can be reached with dealers that the price of milk will be adjusted reasonably. The price is bound to be higher through the cost of bottling.

Dr. Harris said yesterday that he regarded the doing away of the sale of "dip" milk as a desirable step in preventing adulteration, and assuring purity. The consideration that has prevented his department from legislating on the matter thus far is the question of price.

Of New York City's daily supply of 3,000,000 quarts, 1,650,000 quarts are sold as loose milk. Of this amount, according to Dr. Harris, approximately 1,200,000 had been adulterated by the addition of water or skimmed milk until the recent graft revelations ended that practice. The price of Grade B milk sold loose is 10 or 11 cents a quart and 15 cents bottled.

Dr. Harris said the fear that the additional cost might prove burdensome to the poor has prevented action on the matter. The question of price is being discussed by the Milk Conference Board, the large producers, he added. He was confident that adulteration and the almost inevitable graft accompanying it, would be done away with by the sale of all milk in bottles, the public receiving a pure commodity instead of an adulterated product.

Replying to criticism that refusal to permit the sale of Western cream in this city sent up the price of the cream brought in from permissible points, Dr. Harris denied that the refusal had anything to do with the price of cream. There is no shortage of cream reaching this city, he said, and the flush period is setting in.

The question of sending inspectors to the Middle West and accepting payment by creameries for each inspection has been placed before the Corporation Counsel by Dr. Harris.

Important developments in the milk graft inquiry are expected soon as a result of the investigation now under way by District Attorney Richard Newcombe and Assistant District Attorney Peter Daly in Queens. Mr. Newcombe concluded examining former Health Commissioner Frank J. Monaghan yesterday and said that Dr. Monaghan was in no way affected by the inquiry.

THIEF CHASE EXCITES FIFTH AVENUE THRONG

Persons on Fifth Avenue at noon yesterday had fleeting glances of what at first appeared to be a running rainbow when a man, alleged to have stolen a number of varicolored silk neckties valued at $182, fled up the thoroughfare closely pursued by detectives and clerks.

The "stop thief" cry was raised when the man dashed out of Finchley's store at 546 Fifth Avenue, near Forty-sixth Street, with a bundle of cravats half hidden under his coat. Detectives Stephens and Love of the Fifth Avenue squad heard the cry and took up the chase. Mindful of the $170,000 jewel robbery committed by the Whittemore band, the detectives kept their pistols handy and blew their police whistles as they ran.

Coalheavers and truckmen making deliveries on side streets joined with correctly-garbed Fifth Avenue salesmen in following the fleeing man and the detectives.

Detectives Owens and Moore heard the whistles and cries down at Forty-fifth Street and they, too, joined in the chase. The man ran north and turned west at Forty-seventh Street with Love and Stephens only a few steps behind. He ran into the doorway of 2 West Forty-seventh Street and sped up the stairs to the second floor, where he sought refuge in an office.

"There is a gang waiting downstairs to beat me up, can I stop here a moment?" he said to the surprised clerks. They did not have time to answer, for at that moment Love and Stephens appeared on the scene and a second or two later Owens and Moore came up.

In the West Side Court the man said he was Abraham Garloch, 41 years old, a salesman of 120 West 115th Street. Magistrate George W. Simpson held him in $5,000 bail for examination tomorrow on a charge of grand larceny.

BAND IN BROOKLYN ADMITS 17 HOLD-UPS

Seven Men, Trailed for Weeks by the Police, Are Trapped, Then Confess.

INDICTMENTS LIKELY TODAY

Detective Whose Alertness Caused the Round-Up Personally Commended by McLaughlin.

Seven men, rounded up by the police on Saturday night, confessed at Police Headquarters in Brooklyn yesterday that they had committed seventeen hold-ups and one burglary during the last two months. The places robbed included drug, grocery and jewelry stores and one loft building.

The police gave out a list containing the locations of ten of the crimes in which about $10,000 worth of loot was taken and withheld the names of others on the ground that it might thwart the arrest of an eighth man. The police are convinced that the band is responsible for many crimes that they have not as yet acknowledged. It is believed that the total of all thefts will not exceed $15,000.

The prisoners gave their names as John O'Donnell, 22 years old, a chauffeur, of 319 Snediker Avenue; John Chieffo, 21, a shoemaker, of 461 De Kalb Avenue; Frank Ambrosio, 25, tilemaker, 120 Throop Avenue; Joseph Chalowsky, 22, painter, 220 Ellery Street; Benjamin Schiff, 24, furrier, 136 Wallabout Street; Julius Brand, 22, former garage owner, 1,774 East Seventh Street, and John Bates, 21, chauffeur, 114 Nostrand Avenue. All the prisoners are charged with assault and robbery. It was said last night that their cases will be presented to the Grand Jury early today and indictments against all are expected promptly.

ABRAHAM NESSELMAN, druggist, 813 Marcy Avenue, Feb. 20, $75.

H. C. BOHACK, grocer, 567 Jefferson Avenue, April 3, $300.

LOUIS FRIEDMAN, jeweler, 1,183 Rogers Avenue, March 3, $6,000 in jewelry.

CERTIFIED GROCERY STORES, INC., 877 Myrtle Avenue, April 10, $300.

DAVID BEMITZ, druggist, 334 Wilson Avenue, April 9, $106.

JACOB COHEN, druggist, 276 Marcy Avenue, April 9, $40.

MALLETT KNITTING MILLS, 195 Broadway, April 7, $2,000.

Detective's Vigilance Caused Roundup.

The vigilance of Detective Christian Wackerly of the Butler Street precinct resulted in the capture of the band. While on his way home two weeks ago Wackerly saw a taxicab standing outside Haberman's drug store. The engine of the machine was running. Wackerly took a good look at the chauffeur and got the number of the cab. Two men came out of the store. No robbery was committed at that time, but the incident so impressed Wackerly that he reported the matter to his superiors.

Investigation proved that the driver of the cab was O'Donnell. He was employed by the Yellow Taxi Cab Company. With Detectives Charles Byrne, Harry Bulms and Thomas Smythe, Wackerly trailed O'Donnell each night. The policemen saw him several times pick up fares who later proved to be some of the prisoners arrested, but each time O'Donnell managed to elude the police machine.

After the trailing process had gone on for a week the quarry became suspicious. The cab was discarded for a sedan car owned by Brand, one of the prisoners. But the detectives kept on the trail and on Saturday night the sedan stopped in front of a drug store at Central Avenue and Palmetto Street. The police car was a short distance behind.

As the detectives stopped on the opposite side of the street they saw one of the three men in the sedan examining a pistol. The detectives rushed over with pistols drawn and ordered the men to throw up their hands. The men proved to be Bates, Schiff and Ambrosio. On the floor of the sedan two pistols were found. In the rear of the car was a section of rope.

Call Bates the Leader.

The prisoners, at the Gates Avenue Station, supplied the information that led to the capture of the other four prisoners. All asserted that Bates was the leader of the band. O'Donnell confessed that he got a position with the Yellow Company to provide a "getaway" for his pals after the hold-ups took place. All of the others freely admitted, according to the police, that they had participated in a number of the crimes and shared in the loot.

Following the arrests Commissioner McLaughlin visited Brooklyn headquarters, where he personally commended the detectives who captured the men.

CARRY OFF 300-LB. SAFE WHILE FAMILY SLEEPS

Robbers at Kemmerer Home in Short Hills Get Away With $15,000 in Gems.

Special to The New York Times.

SHORT HILLS, N. J., April 12.—Breaking into the home of John L. Kemmerer, a coal operator on Private Way here, early today, robbers worked so quietly that they were able to carry off from a second floor closet a 300-pound safe containing $15,000 worth of jewelry without disturbing Mr. Kemmerer and other members of his family who were asleep in neighboring bedrooms.

The police believe there were three robbers. Entrance was made by forcing a rear window. In the closet were brooms, mops and other articles. These were moved into a vacant bedroom on the same floor by the robbers. A solid gold toilet set was in this bedroom, but it was not taken. The safe then was carried carefully down the stairs to the living room and out through French windows to a terrace. Evidently finding the burden too heavy to carry further, the robbers went to the garage of Richard F. Warner next door, stole a wheelbarrow, and placing the safe in it, wheeled it about 100 yards to the garage of Frederick A. Burlingame in Highland Avenue.

Breaking into the garage by a rear window, they pushed the car out and loaded the safe into it after tearing out a front seat to get the safe into the car. Then they drove to Hartshorn's Woods behind a tool house. Breaking into the tool house the robbers took several sledges with which they broke open the safe. The empty jewel boxes, safe and automobile were found later in the morning by John Collins, a chauffeur.

36 Ounces of Summer Apparel Decreed for English Women

LONDON, April 12 (AP).—A maximum of thirty ounces of clothing is what English women will be permitted to wear this Summer if they follow the edicts of fashion experts who are now showing styles at the Annual Fashion Exhibition.

The thirty ounces will be apportioned as follows: Seven ounces for a frock, six ounces for underclothing, one ounce for stockings and sixteen or less ounces for shoes.

Short skirts still hold the styles and it is predicted that rolled stockings, with bare knees, will be the vogue.

WIFE AND PASTOR FAIL TO FREE THIEF

She Asks Mercy Because of Child, Who Prays for Father's Return.

COURT TURNS A DEAF EAR

Heeds Wife No. 2 and Sentences Auditor to Three and a Half Years in Prison.

Chester W. Reid, 33 years old, an auditor, who gave the address 2,039 Broadway, but who formerly lived in Montclair, N. J., was sentenced yesterday by Judge Mancuso in General Sessions to from three and a half to five years in Sing Sing for the theft of $19,000 from his former employers, Potter & Co., bankers and brokers, at 5 Nassau Street.

Reid's wife, Dorothea Kluge Reid, a Montclair school teacher, in a letter to the Court, made a pathetic plea for clemency, while Anne Goss, formerly his secretary in Potter & Co.'s office, whose marriage to Reid a year ago was annulled in the Supreme Court last month because he had not obtained a divorce, urged in another letter to Judge Mancuso that he be dealt with severely.

Miss Mabel Sprague, a probation officer, who, when Reid pleaded guilty last week, was assigned to investigate the man's past, reported a career of profligacy by Reid in the three years he was stealing the money from his employers through padding payrolls as manager for the company and overdrawing checks he was authorized to sign. Miss Sprague said that Reid had an income of $8,500 a year from the bankers and the riotous life he had led not alone resulted in his midnight bigamous marriage to Miss Goss at West Islip, L. I., but also had previously involved him in litigation with another girl, who got a $25,000 verdict in a breach of promise action. This girl had been Reid's secretary in the brokerage firm of Harris, Forbes & Co., 56 William Street, by which he had been employed before he became connected with Potter & Co.

Reid had separated from his wife before this girl's action came to trial, and soon after he obtained employment with Potter & Company, the probation officer reported, he began to entertain Miss Goss. It was on a motoring trip on Long Island on Feb. 25, 1925, the report said, that Reid married his secretary, but Miss Sprague reported that Reid told her recently that he could recall little about this marriage because he was drunk.

The probation officer reported, however, that Miss Goss, whose home is at 620 West 189th Street, told her that Reid had represented himself as having been divorced from his first wife and that she and Reid had been living together for a month when his thefts from the firm were uncovered. His arrest followed.

Before Reid's arraignment Judge Mancuso had read the letter from the man's first wife, in which she told of obtaining employment as a school teacher to maintain herself and the small daughter of the couple. After pleading that Reid receive a suspended sentence so he could redeem himself without the stigma of imprisonment, Mrs. Reid added: "I can never forget that my little girl will be always his child. I have never been able to still her constant queries as to why daddy did not come home. Her constant prayer is 'God bless daddy.' She is only four."

Wants to Aid Husband.

Recounting her delightful home conditions with Reid in the first three years of their married life, Mrs. Reid said:

"If it was my hand that gave my husband the first push down, that put him into the fire, and I have searched my memory to recall it, then it must be mine to take him out. I should have willingly given him up if I had ever thought that his happiness and well-being and his salvation lay with the other woman. Whatever must happen cannot change my determination to stand by my husband. I must do that, and in God's own time I know he shall once again become the man I promised to honor, love and cherish, if anything I can do will help him to do it. I do this all for the sake of my child, she who loves daddy so dearly."

"Chester W. Reid should be punished proper," Miss Goss, his former secretary and second wife, said in her letter to Judge Mancuso. "He is a menace, and it would be dangerous to turn a man loose that has done so many things deliberately. Why should he be spared and shown mercy more than some of the poor unfortunates that have been forced to steal to make both ends meet and didn't have anybody to make restitution for them and consequently were put away? It's an old saying—money talks."

Letters also were received by Judge Mancuso from many prominent residents of Montclair, including the Rev. Archibald Black, pastor of the First Congregational Church, which Mrs. Reid attends. The clergyman, in part, said: "Chester Reid had it in him to make good. His wife has the determination that he shall, and they have an innocent little soul to uphold and inspire them."

DOGS HAVE DAY IN COURT.

Drive Against Straying Pets Is On; Magistrate Warns Owners.

Dogs of all sizes and breeds, from toy pomeranians to wolf hounds, overran the West Side Court yesterday, the opening day of the city's annual drive against unmuzzled and unleashed dogs. As varied as the breeds of the animals were the excuses given by their masters and mistresses for allowing them to run loose in the streets.

Magistrate George W. Simpson gave the defendants suspended sentences, instructing them to comply with the law at once. He let it be known, however, that in future a blooded bull dog or a common mongrel running loose in the streets would mean one thing—a fine for the owner.

WORLD ACTION IS PLANNED

Through International Body It Is Hoped to Standardize Quality of Advertising.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—The delegates of the twenty-one American republics meeting in the Pan-American Congress of Journalists gave unanimous consent today through their spokesman to a program of rigorous censorship of questionable advertising.

The opinion that advertisements formed an essential part of the daily news and should have the same accuracy and reliability as other matter printed in the papers was voiced again and again. The same accord on the part of American journalists which was shown in the previous discussions relating to such controversial subjects as the handling of international relations and newspaper ethics was also manifested on this topic.

The session devoted to advertising was opened by Dr. Ramiro Guerra of El Diario de la Marina, a journal published in Havana, Cuba, who vigorously attacked the widespread use of the half-clad female figure as a design upon which to hang all manner of advertisements.

Enumerating a list of subjects that should be eliminated from the advertising page, including patent medicines, personalities, unreliable financial inducements and anything smacking of the suggestive, Dr. Guerra declared:

"There are artists and draftsmen who attempt to attract the attention of readers by using—or rather abusing—the nude female figure, making the beautiful form of man's companion into a hackneyed advertising 'motif,' serving for automobiles, clothing or soft drinks.

"It should not be forgotten," he continued, "that just as advertising counts for much in the business life of a periodical it may also bring about a lowering of the moral tone of the press, robbing it of independence, forcing it to adopt prejudiced opinions or to keep a suspicious silence in respect to matters of public interest which affect a class of its advertisers.

"Against these evils the power of public opinion has great weight, but above all is the concerted action of the great organs of publicity, great not only in their circulation figures but also in the high moral standards by which they decide and settle the conflicts which arise between private interests of their advertisers and the general interests of the community."

Submits Advertising Creed.

With the approval of generous applause Dr. Guerra submitted as an advertising creed for the congress:

1. That it is advisable to establish a uniform system of methods, both in provisions of law and rules governing periodicals, looking toward the censoring, sifting out and elimination of misleading or fraudulent advertisements, for the protection of the public against unscrupulous advertisers and those of bad faith.
2. That every advertisement which tends to exploit or promote vice, even if but indirectly, or one which is an offense against decency, or one which is not based on honest and legitimate business, should be refused or suppressed.
3. That it is advisable to designate a committee to study the possibilities and advantages of organizing an international advertising service, to be carried on by the periodicals themselves.
4. That all influence of advertising upon the policies and management of periodicals should be proscribed through its repudiation and condemnation by the press itself, brought to bear on every case in which this principle of press ethics is broken."

In a printed report distributed during the session Dr. Tiburcio Castaneda, also of El Diario de la Marina, contrasted the first page of The London Times, devoted exclusively to advertisements, with the first page of New York dailies.

"In the United States," he said, "one takes up the most serious and most widely read newspapers and the first page and even all of the second, as was true in the New York newspapers of March 27 last, are filled with accounts and details of terrible crimes that produce intense nausea upon the reader."

Lauds Advertisements on Page One.

Dr. Castaneda described these accounts as "a thousand times more cruel than the wild beasts." The financial advertisements on the first page of the London paper presented in refreshing contrast, he said, news which was interesting and valuable.

What newspapers would be like if they were deprived of the revenues from advertising was pointed out by Henry T. Claus of The Boston Transcript.

"There would be an end of special stories by our own correspondents," he said, "few cable dispatches, still fewer pictures, almost no

GAVRILOV'S BALLET REVUE IS AMAZING

A CIRCUS WITH CLOWNS

At last somebody has translated the ballet that came from Russia into terms that are American. The technique and the artists are still Russian in Alexandre Gavrilov's new entertainment launched at the Princess Theater last night, but the "Circus" comes straight from Madison Square Garden—the ring, the trapeze lady, the clowns—and even the horses, though the horses are a pony ballet. The significant thing that has happened to the circus is that it has become rhythmic in being reduced to miniature. The spirit is as American as the spirit of "Petrouchka" is Russian. The result is delightful, amazing, exhilarating.

And the "Night Club." Certainly a night club is not necessarily as American as the circus, but Gavrilov's people have made an American night club into a ballet—not some other sort of night club. There you are. Again, it is exhilarating, with the very gentlemen who prefer blonds all in evening dress and the ladies most amusingly evening-undressed.

Perhaps the thing that has happened may be made clearer to those who have not seen the new ballet at the Princess by saying that the entertainment includes a translation of "The Afternoon of a Faun" into Arcadian innocence. If you remember the "Goat-Song" quality that Nijinsky gave it you may say that is impossible. Very well, go and see. And yet Gavrilov's faun and the nymph that plays with him and goes away with his leafy heart as a souvenir are nowise robbed of beauty or mockery.

These are all matters of the spirit. Analysis shows that the trick mainly consists in taking as choreographic raw material a perfectly familiar American form of amusement. Rhythm is added to the dish and the art which the Russians have perfected of applying rhythm to their own familiar themes or those from the classics, or the East of the houris and the harems. By the way, a classic item in this entertainment is a translation of the Parthenon frieze into a ballet. That also is remarkable. But some particulars should be added of the performance and the performers.

Granville Bantock's "Pierrot of the Minute," early in the bill, was danced for the first time here though not unknown in concert halls. In its courtly pictures, brightly staged, it recalled "The Birthday of the Infanta," of exquisite memory, while Mr. Gavrilov as the light-hearted Pierrot, and later as the Dying Faun in the Tchaikovsky number, displayed amazing youth and agility as an artist who already had done leading rôles with the Diaghileff troupe ten years ago. His partner, Georgia Ingram, was an accomplished American.

A dainty "Toy Box" dragon-fly and frog by Vera Streiskaya and the wholly concealed Vladimir Chastunoff, started a series of gay trifles in the true spirit of "revue," combining technical bravura and burlesque. "The Circus," adroitly staged, gave Miss Streiskaya a moment of flight in air that brought down the house, just as she herself was brought down presently, perilously head-first, from atop of a step-ladder. Mary Wynn was a native name among the satyrs of "The Faun," and Emilie Hadley among the nymphs of the same. There was much by-play before curtains, while a persistent hint of "jazz" culminated in the tango of "Pancake Holiday."

Just as Isadora Duncan, from hereabouts, once awoke Russia's last survival of classic ballet, so a Russian influence in turn has come over the great American self-expression of dramatic dance. From the Kosloffs and Volinine fifteen years back, followed by Pavlowa and Mordkin, and then by Diaghileff's large company, of which Bolm, Gavrilov and Kobeleff were members, there have arisen half a dozen permanent groups in this town. Only since the war has their work become visible, and Mr. Gavilov last evening won honors as the first among them to carry the ballet invasion into the camp of Broadway comedians.

Mack and Belasco Authors of "Fanny."

Willard Mack and David Belasco, it is announced, are the authors of the play in which Mr. Belasco is about to star Finnie Brice. The play is entitled "Fanny," and rehearsals will begin two weeks hence. The piece will open in Atlantic City on May 24.

MUSIC

By OLIN DOWNES.

Beethoven Association.

The Beethoven Association, for its final program of the season last night in Town Hall, opened with the noble and dramatic piano quintet of Cesar Franck, played by Harold Bauer and a string quartet consisting of Albert Spalding, Edwin Bachmann, William Schubert and Willem Willeke. It continued with a group of songs by classic masters, interpreted by Anna Case. It ended with the Bach concerto for three pianos, in which the association was not less prodigal than is its wont in supplying distinguished artists for its audiences. The pianists were Harold Bauer, Irene Scharrer and Josef Lhevinne, reinforced by the Marianne Kreisler string quartet and by Messrs. Bachmann and Schubert, Marie Romaet, and Harry Sachet, string players, and conducted by Willem Willeke.

This was an excellent arrangement for the effect of the music. The mystic and emotional expresion of Franck, who in his quintet rehearses the eternal religious drama of doubt, supplication and the final triumph of faith, had a modern and dramatic character that found its fitting contrast and balance in the open-air simplicity and vigor of Bach's concerto. The songs of Miss Case made the necessary interlude between the two instrumental compositions.

Mr. Bauer's performance of the piano quintet was masterly in every way. It was thrice admirable in its tonal balances and proportions, its beautiful pianism, its revelation of the composer's meaning.

Few virtuosi are so gifted in the performance of ensemble music. Mr. Bauer effaced himself when this was the musicianly thing to do, and when he led he did so with the brilliancy and eloquence of a consummate artist.

Mr. Bauer was not alone in this. The quartet, especially Mr. Spalding, played with rare sensitiveness and understanding, with a collaboration that is not frequent when players who are usually soloists combine. But that is the spirit of the Beethoven Association concerts, and it made itself felt last night. The result was an exceptionally impressive rendering of Franck's music that drew long applause from the audience.

The songs of Miss Case were Handel's "Angels Ever Bright and Fair" and "Caro Selve"; Bach's "Patron das Macht der Wind" and the old French song arranged by Wecklerlin, "Chanson des Amours de Jean." In the "Caro Selve" and the Mozart "Alleluia" Miss Case showed considerable virtuosity and a quality of tone that escaped the metallic resonance that her upper voice has had. She was not always accurate in intonation nor was she convincingly emotional. But in the amusing song of Bach she remembered that the Cantor of Leipsic was by no means a heavy or pedantic individual, and she gave the air lightness and humor. Other moments would have benefited by a more straightforward and less mannered style.

The Bach concerto was a final manifestation of the same spirit that had been shown in the performance of Franck's music. It was performed in a spirit of humor and musical camaraderie, with a fine cleanness of attack and phrase. The pianists were alternately leaders and parts of the ensemble, and they did not fail the composer in either capacity. The custom of opening a concert with a classic and closing it with music by a modern was reversed on this occasion with the most fortunate effect, to the pleasure and benefit of the audience.

HIPPODROME HONORS ITS 21ST BIRTHDAY

Sam Bernard and Louis Mann and Alice Gentle Lead an Entertaining All-Week Bill.

The Hippodrome yesterday started upon another celebration—this time in honor of its twenty-first birthday, which occurred yesterday but is being observed all week. For the occasion an entertaining program has been prepared, with Sam Bernard and Louis Mann and Alice Gentle as the headliners.

Bernard and Mann are appearing in their condensed version of "Friendly Enemies," a happy compression of the stage play which furnishes an appropriate vehicle for the two dialect comedians. Miss Gentle displayed her pleasing soprano voice in a varied song program in which she was accompanied by Frederick Parsons.

The colorful Benda Masque Fantasy with Margaret Severn is continued, and Naughton and Gold, two English comedians, made a favorable impression on their first appearance. Further at the Sixth Avenue music hall Herman and Sammy Timberg, the Rusemont Troubadours, Scanlon, Denno Brothers and Scanlon, the De Kos Brothers and last, but hardly least, Fink's Mules.

Last night a number of society people and actors who were favorites at the old Hippodrome attended the birthday celebration. Among those present were Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, Anne Morgan, Harry Black, and Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Burnside, Orville Harrold, Belle Storey and Mrs. Fred Thompson, widow of the man who built the theatre.

2 OPERAS SUNG IN FRENCH.

Chaliapin in 'Don Quichotte'—'Tales of Hoffmann' at Milk Fund Benefit.

The twenty-fourth of the Metropolitan's brilliant Monday-night audiences, and the last of that particular subscription for six months to come, assembled in the Opera House last evening for Massenet's "Don Quichotte," and more especially Chaliapin as Don Q. The Russian basso gave his third performance of the chivalresque rôle, and will have one more on Friday. Miss Easton reappeared as Dulcinea and Mr. de Luca as Sancho Panza.

An extra matinée, the third such event for Offenbach's "Tales of Hoffmann," filled the theatre earlier in the day, to the profit on this occasion of the incorporated Free Milk Fund for Babies. Marion Talley, Mary Lewis and Lucrezia Bori sang the three heroines, Tokatyan the hero and Didur, Danise and Rothier the triple villains of the poet Hoffman's fantasy. A day of two different operas sung in French was in itself noteworthy on Broadway, perhaps unmatched since Maurice Grau was director. Mr. Hasselmans conducted both matinée and night.

"White Cargo" Returns to Daly's.

"White Cargo," which opened here in November of 1923 and had a New York run of about a year and a half, returned to town at Daly's Sixty-third Street Theatre last night. Conway Wingfield of the original cast now receives chief attention in the rôle of the doctor. The other principal parts are played by Carl Brickert and Betty Pierce.

Stage Children in "Follies of 1926."

The annual performance under the auspices of the Stage Children's Fund will take place at the Casino Theatre on Sunday night, May 9. A cast of fifty children, from 3 to 9 years of age, will offer their own "Follies of 1926."

THE PLAY

By J. BROOKS ATKINSON.

Two Men and One Woman.

LOVE IN A MIST, a comedy in three acts, by Amelie Rives (Princess Troubetskoy) and Gilbert Emery. Staged by Mr. Emery; produced by Charles L. Wagner. At the Gaiety Theatre.

Miss Diana Wynne.....Madge Kennedy
Mr. Gregory Farnham.....Sidney Blackmer
Count Scipione Varelli.....Tom Powers
Miss Sydney Rose Wynne....Frieda Inescort
Miss Anna Moore Wynne.....Alice John
Kizzy .....Mary Marble
Colin .....Jack Willard

Whatever amusement the theme of "Love in a Mist," now at the Gaiety, may contain by right of honorable lineage is well-nigh smothered by amateurish playwrighting. Several times the free development of this triangular plot seems on the point of bearing the familiar fruits of comedy—fruits edible if not precisely tempting. But clumsiness in the handling of the dramatic material join with a scarcity of invention in keeping the piece dull and heavy-footed—one scene alone excepted. A winsome young lady of quality in the South cannot say "no" either to the man she loves or the man who appears to require her love above everything else. In the interests of happiness all around she dissembles prettily but unconvincingly. And in good time her house of cards begins to waver; ultimately it falls. And this serviceable fable the authors make a great deal of fittle and fattle, more worthy of performance before their forbearing friends than along the bleak coasts of Broadway.

For the most part the actors prove more alluring than the play. Acting the leading rôle, Miss Kennedy again reveals herself ready for a neat part in a shapely comedy, for her acting has just those qualities. The present rôle, unsatisfying though it may be, engages many of her best histrionic talents. She trips from one scene to the next lightly, and she joins the successive incidents with remarkable suppleness. Personally charming, she conveys her part not merely by facial expression (although this has uncommon range) but by subtle modulations of an agreeable voice and by gestures that are unusually spontaneous. In short, she deserves a suitable gay comedy.

In the present instance she is surrounded by a group of capable actors, who, in lieu of skillful comedy, find the burden of entertainment chiefly upon their shoulders. And if all of them palpably overact, with a dash of Junior League self-consciousness, the comedy requires considerable propping. As an Italian Count Mr. Powers rather overstresses the broken English and arpeggios of native phrases, but he is always at least interesting. And so, too, is Miss Innescourt, although she, in turn, relies too confidently upon being dynamic, even in her passive moments. Cast as a meddlesome maiden aunt, Miss John makes her part somewhat too statuesque. In the part of a tolerant though credulous suitor Mr. Blackmer gives one of the frankest and most direct exhibitions in his recent appearances. Content with being positive in his character, he brings to it none of the florid artfulness that has marred his acting in the past. As an eager, impetuous suitor, he is, perhaps, a little too complacent. But he plays easily and competently, with not a little dramatic authenticity.

One scene of "Love in a Mist" is unusually effective in the theatre. Diana Wynne has been indiscreet enough to accept Gregory Farnham's proposal of marriage without telling him that she is not strictly free of Count Scipone Varelli, scion of the famous Varellis of Italy. Unfortunately for all concerned the Count turns up radiantly sanguine on the very evening of her betrothal to Farnham. For some time, by innumerable frantic devices, she manages to keep the necessary words from being spoken. But at length, in spite of her duplicity, the truth comes out. Off stage the Count shoots himself, and he is brought unconscious into the living-room. Being much more serious than the causes that bring it about, so out of all ethical proportion, this scene comes like a thunder-clap, instantly transforming the spirit of the play. "Is he dead?" inquires the horrified Diana. "If he is not," Farnham replies contemptuously, "it is not your fault." Acted swiftly this scene makes a vigorous climax to the second act, and robs the predetermined last act of nearly all suspense.

For the rest, "Love in a Mist" portrays the plight of a young lady who will not tell the truth, although always for the best reasons. The authors have developed this character with more skill than they have applied to the comedy in general. Her pretexts for putting off the hour of reckoning, her twists and her artifices, and most of all, her indignant resort to the much over-rated prerogatives of her sex as proof of her dialectical honor, are all potentially enjoyable. Set off in a smoother and more sensitive comedy, they might yield a high rate of interest.

LITTLE REVUE AT PALACE.

Joseph Santley and Ivy Sawyer in "Thus and So"—Sophie Tucker.

Joseph Santley and Ivy Sawyer are conspicuous among the Palace headliners this week with a smart revue in miniature, "Thus and So," which is composed, in the main, of the best of their previous "Music Box Revue" numbers and shows evidences of what is usually referred to as the Chariot influence. Several amusing skits are placed between the production numbers, the most elaborate of which is the "Book Lovers" finale. Assisting Mr. Santley and the dainty Miss Sawyer are Jola Mendes, Theo Loper, Georgette Ettinger, Frances Milltern, Ethel Allis and Norman Sweetser. The contributors of skits, lyrics and music to "Thus and So" include Silvio Hein, John Steel, Frank Tours, Al Boasberg and Mr. Santley.

Sophie Tucker remains for a second week, and yesterday she repeated her success of the previous seven days with new and breezy songs and material. Further on the bill are Modena's Fantastic Revue, Joe Morris and Winnie Baldwin, Warren and O'Brien in "What Price Review," Will and Gladys Ahern, Bordner and Boyer and Weir's Baby Elephants. All in all, it is as diverting a bill as the Palace has shown recently.

LITTLE THEATRES APART.

Four Groups Are Not to Merge, but Seek a Working Agreement.

A reported merging of four little theatre groups in the city—the Actors' Theatre, the Stagers and the Provincetown Playhouse and Greenwich Village Theatre groups—was denied yesterday by those interested. It was explained that the four groups seek only a working agreement, concerned solely with the problem of financing. They will continue to exist and to operate as separate bodies.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

Two revivals will open in New York theatres tonight—"What Every Woman Knows" at the Bijou and "The Bells" at the Bayes.

"Square Crooks" was transferred last night from Daly's Sixty-third Street Theatre to the Maxine Elliott and "By the Way" from the Gaiety to the Central.

"Pomeroy's Past," with Ernest Truex as its star, opened in Great Neck last night. It comes to the Longacre next Monday.

Ed Wynn will continue under the management of A. L. Erlanger next season in a new revue. The production will probably open the new Erlanger Theatre to be built in Forty-fourth Street.

These are the final two weeks of Al Jolson's engagement with "Artists and Models" at the Winter Garden.

"Glory Hallelujah" will be withdrawn from the Broadhurst Theatre this week.
